degrees when the outside temperature is 15 to 20 degrees below zero, I would use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. Or, if the present 3-inch main is to be used, I would put in eleven 2-inch returns. In case the solid beds are retained, the returns may be partly on the walls and the others on the sides of the beds.

OBSTRUCTED CIRCULATION.

I am taking the liberty of asking you what is wrong with my heating system. The boiler is sixteen feet long and contains fifty-six 3-inch flues. It is located in a basement adjoining the greenhouses on the north. The steam is returned to the boiler by means of two No. 12 Detroit return traps, with a receiver. The return from the greenhouses is 4-inch, reduced to 2½-inch where it enters the trap receiver. The main is 4-inch, with a pressure-reducing valve on it. We are carrying about thirty pounds of steam on the boiler and ten pounds of steam on the houses.

I have five houses, all of which have 7-foot side walls. They are of the connected type and therefore only two of the side walls containing glass are exposed, and they are on the 150-foot houses. Four of the houses, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 5, as marked on the enclosed diagram, run east and west. Nos. 1 and 5 are each 29x150; Nos. 2 and 3 are each 29x75. No. 4, which crosses the west ends of the other houses, is 21x113, with a 7-foot board wall and with no glass, and is made as warm as possible, as our cold Dakota winds come from the west and this house tends to protect the other houses from the winds.

The trouble I am having is to heat house No. 5, the 150-foot house at the south. I can heat the other four houses well, but when we turn on the steam in house No. 5, which is the farthest away from the boiler, we have trouble with the circulation, as the steam turns to water the minute it gets into the pipes of this house and chokes up the returns, thus affecting the entire system. We have nothing planted in house No. 5, as it has just been completed, but we want to start it as soon as possible. So, if you can give me information as to how to get a good circulation in this house as well as in the rest of them, I shall be greatly obliged.

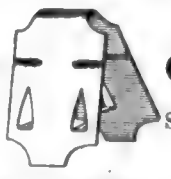
Each house contains eighteen 1¼-inch pipes the full length of the houses. No matter how much steam we carry on the houses, we cannot get a good circulation in No. 5. I intend to add another house, about 29x150, next spring. Is my boiler big enough? Please tell me the size of my range in square feet of glass, as I want to take out hail insurance.



G. E. V.

Although it is not possible to make an accurate computation of the area of exposed glass without knowing the height of the ridges and the amount in the exposed ends of the houses, the total will probably not differ much from 20,000 square feet. An estimate of 75-horsepower for the boiler will be close enough for all practical purposes, and as less than 4,000 square feet of radiation will be required to heat the above amount of glass to 60 degrees, there is plenty of reserve power in the boiler for fifty per cent more glass, so that another house 29x150 could be heated without difficulty.

The fact that the system works well when the heat is turned on for four of the houses, and does not work when the fifth house is turned on, would indicate that there is something wrong with that house. Possibly the valve in the feed pipe to house No. 5 leaks slightly, and this would result in the filling of the returns with water. So far as I can see, the radiation is ample for 60 degrees in each of the houses and 65 degrees in houses 2 and 3.

If 60 degrees is desired in the houses, I would run a 2½-inch main the entire length of each house and connect at the farther end with the return pipes, using sixteen returns for houses 1 and 5 and twelve returns for houses 2 and 3, with ten or eleven in house No. 4. To prevent the choking of the returns, I would put in a 1½-inch by-pass, connecting the feed pipe to house No. 5 with the end of the main return. This may be sufficient to correct the difficulty.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., 135,000 2-inch dirt bands.

393% MORE EARLY FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7¾ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was good last week. Funeral work, with an occasional decoration, combined with the counter trade, has kept things going. The weather continues unusually warm for this season of the year and stock is becoming plentiful. Roses are more abundant, but the prices still are firm, $6 to $10 per hundred wholesale. Beauties are improving in quality, also in quantity. Jonquils are plentiful, bringing $3 per hundred. The orchid-flowering peas are cleaned up daily.

Blooming plants are in fairly good demand. Bulbous stock in pans, azaleas, lilacs, primulas and cyclamens have the best call.

Various Notes.

William Roepke is spending most of his time trying to figure out how to make a Packard out of a Ford he has just purchased.

Clarence Thomas, of the Hill Floral Co., spent several days in Chicago last week.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had a busy week, with decorations and funeral work.

W. H. Elverson, of the Elverson Pottery Co., spent a few days with the trade here last week.

There is considerable talk of another commission house starting up in Indianapolis. Indianapolis is becoming quite a flower market and a great deal more stock would be bought at home if it were available. H. L. W.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The week was one of continued sunshine and everyone seems filled with the desire to get out and dig in the ground. As a result the sales of flower seeds have been good, especially sweet pea seeds.

The sun is telling in better quality of carnations and roses and the increased numbers of them. Dutch bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful and we have seen more really high class valley the last ten days than for months. Violets are plentiful for the first time this winter and are selling well.

There has been a dearth of society functions that called for heavy floral decorations, but funeral work has been good. We have heard of some cutting of prices on the more plentiful flowers, but no one has had much to throw away. Outdoor trade has been good right along this winter and this has cleaned up much of the surplus.

HAMMOND'S THRIP JUICE No. 2

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty. [Signed] T. J. OPPERMAN, Florist.
January 14, 1915. Camp Hill, Pa.

Sold by the Seedsmen all over America.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

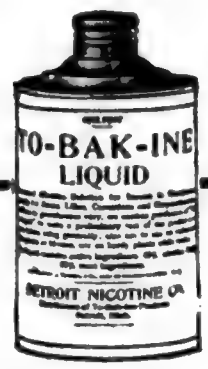
A week's bright and mild weather has increased the cuts of flowers considerably and eased up prices on everything except carnations, which are still holding for the highest prices of the winter. Plenty of everything will probably be the report from now on.

The local growers have allowed valley to be short during the last week, but the supply will be all right from now on. Roses are fine and are getting more plentiful every day. Beauties are still scarce, but prices had to come down, as even a few Beauties could not be moved at fancy prices.

The Lenten season is a good deal of a bugaboo among florists, or was at one time, but now the use of flowers is so common that one hardly would know it was here if it were not that social functions are abandoned for a time. However, the florists who sell at popular prices have their inning when stock can be bought at reasonable prices.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is busy getting ready to move into the new home, which is almost ready.



Ed McCallum, of the McCallum Co., is on the sick-list at present. Just a little too much work; a few days' rest will probably put him on his feet again.

Jos. Haube, of Charleroi, Pa., is running a guessing contest. He offers $5 in gold to the person making the nearest guess to the number of peas in a quart jar. Every purchaser of seed is entitled to a guess.

Randolph & McClements had one of the most elaborate weddings of the season February 16, the Thaw wedding. The colors were American Beauty and gold and about 2,500 Beauties were used. The bride's table was a hollow square 20x30 feet. In the center was a flowing fountain, surrounded by American Beauties. Directly in front of the kneeling stool were large doors leading out to the porte-cochere. This was cleared, floored and decorated to represent an Italian sunken garden, and the effect was fine. WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Lent has caused business to fall off greatly, and there is a dearth of funeral work. Roses and carnations are not overplentiful, but the supply of all other flowers exceeds the demand. Prices have sagged somewhat. There are too many daffodils on the market, and the price has dropped from $4 per hundred to $2.50 for the best. Narcissi bring but $1.50 and $2, and white and yellow tulips are cheaper. Orchids are getting scarcer, but there is little demand for them. Cattleya Trianæ is now in the market and is offered at $6 per dozen. The sale of mignonette is slow at from $2 to $4 per hundred. The slow selling of forget-me-not has brought the price down to 25 cents per bunch of from twelve to fifteen sprays. There is little call for freesia or for yellow and white daisies. Calla lilies are more plentiful, and more Easter lilies are to be had than there is call for.

Various Notes.

It is reported that William and John Sharper have bought out M. J. Hendrick, of Oxon Hill, Md., and that Herbert and Al Sharper will soon erect several houses at Silver Hill, Md. All four of these boys have been in the employ of Gude Bros. Co. for a number of years as growers in the various houses. They will handle a miscellaneous stock.

William F. Gude is chairman of the citizens' committee which is to make arrangements for the forty-ninth anniversary encampment of the Grand Army of the Potomac, to be held here September 27 to October 2. Associated with him on the committee is John Henry Small, of J. H. Small & Sons.

The food and flower show held at the Center Market last week has been pronounced a complete success and the participants therein have expressed a willingness to have it continue. It is estimated that fully 100,000 people visited it during the week and with good results. There are about a dozen flower stands here, and all of these were attractively decorated for the occasion.

Among the visitors last week were Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md.; O. C. Knoble, Cleveland, O.; E. H. Flood, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Mr. Rynsburger, of Rynsburger Bros., Lisse, Holland.

At the next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, to be held Tuesday evening, March 2, at 1214 F street northwest, it is planned to repeat the motion-picture exhibition. There will also be the annual election of officers. C. L. L.

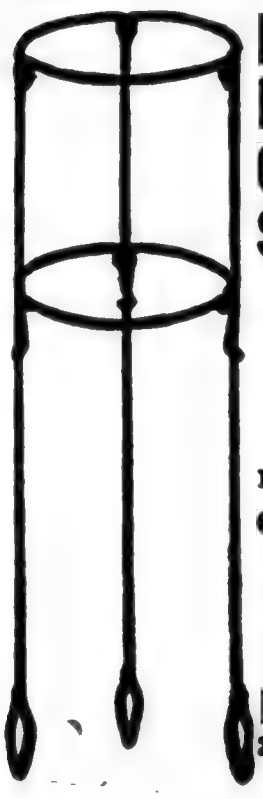
The Market.

Lent is with us again, but business so far has not shown the looked-for depression. Sales showed a falling off on Wednesday and Thursday, February 17 and 18, but afterward improved to some extent and normal conditions seem to have returned. Lent in itself apparently has had little effect on the business, but general conditions keep sales below what they should be. The weather has been fine lately and stock has become more plentiful; as a consequence prices have fallen to some extent, but stock is moving freely.

Roses have increased in quantity and, though not plentiful, are sufficient to take care of the orders. The sunshine brought in the stock in fine color and otherwise improved the quality. The supply of sweet peas is increasing and the quality is exceptionally fine. Carnations are plentiful and good. The percentage of splits is small. The demand is fairly strong and all orders are being taken care of at fair prices. There are lots of tulips, daffodils, etc., and this stock is in fine condition. However, it is not moving as well as it should and the prices are not up to standard. Valley has increased in supply until it has again reached normal and the quality has greatly improved.



The stock of plants this year is fine and is selling at reasonable prices.

Various Notes.

The Maggie Edlefsen Co. has opened a flower store at 626 Grand avenue and is busy taking care of initial orders. Miss Edlefsen, who has charge of this store, is the daughter of William Edlefsen and conducted his business for a number of years. This company has a nice stand and the venture should be highly successful.

Walter Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., lost his grandfather February 20. Mr. Holton has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in his bereavement. H. J. S.

Portsmouth, O.—Louise Koenig reports business fine for the last two months at her store at 1238 Second street. She is looking forward to a good trade for Easter.

Hitchings' Gables

THERE is lots of chance to skimp on a greenhouse gable. It's one of the first things we look at, in going into a competitor's house. It's a lot cheaper to use more wood and less iron.

Such gables look strong enough. If they were strong enough, you wouldn't see so many of them heavily back-braced by the owner. The gable framework on our iron frame houses is just as completely an iron frame as the roof.

In this gable view of J. W. Beal's house at Hanover, Mass., we have darkened the iron parts so you can get a distinct idea of all the iron members we use. Note that the iron and uprights run all the way up from the ground to the rafter, and that there are iron uprights on both sides of the door and filling sash.

If you will take the time to go with us to see one of our houses, and look carefully at our construction and the careful, finished way we do everything, right down to the smallest detail, it will open your eyes. Let us give you a standing invitation to be our guest on such a trip of investigation. Let us know when you are ready and we will gladly arrange for it.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

ILLINOIS SOCIETY VISITS URBANA

Floricultural Department of University of Illinois entertains Illinois State Florists' Association. Tenth annual convention, March 2 and 3, draws enthusiastic attendance to inspect work inaugurated by florists of state. Plan of two meetings a year, one at Urbana, is adopted by organization.

COMPLETING its first decade of existence, the Illinois State Florists' Association held its annual convention March 2 and 3 at the institution which it was the object of the organization, at its founding, to establish—the department of floriculture at the University of Illinois. So helpful was this meeting with the workers at the state experiment station, that it was decided hereafter to hold a meeting there once a year, in addition to the regular annual convention of the society. By keeping closely in touch with each other, the florists and the members of the department of floriculture at the university hope to increase the mutual benefit derived from their meeting. At the same time, the members of the organization feel that they will be additionally benefited by gathering together oftener than once a year.

The opportunity to inspect the equipment and work of the university in their particular field was the prime object of the florists who gathered at Urbana. They found not only a splendid equipment and marked achievements, but also great ambitions to carry the work still farther as the size of the establishment increased. Research work occupies the time of five men in the department, and five others are engaged in instructional work in floriculture, with twenty-two students. The landscape department is larger, having sixty-two enrolled. Both sections are increasing rapidly in accomplishment and enrollment.

The attendance of florists at the gathering was not large, but what they lacked in numbers they made up in enthusiasm. It is fair to say that the meetings, both the business session and smoker, were of as much, if not more, interest and enjoyment as any in the last several years. Everybody was enthusiastic. Under the stimulating leadership of the new officers, they predicted a big year for the society, and left Urbana on the hunt for new members to bring to next year's meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

President.
C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park.

First Vice-president.
I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg.

Secretary.
J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.

Treasurer.
F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

C. W. Johnson.
(President-elect of the Illinois State Florists' Association.)

Business Session.

On the afternoon of March 2 the members of the association met in the lecture room of Floricultural hall to transact business and elect officers. Dean Davenport's address of welcome was followed by the presentation of the various officers' reports, which are printed herewith. W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park, secretary of the advisory committee, is, unfortunately, ill and was unable to be present. The auditing committee, consisting of Andrew Peterson and Geo. W. Jacobs, approved the secretary's and treasurer's books.

In connection with the reports of F. W. Muncie and G. L. Peltier, H. B. Dorner distributed bulletin 176, which had just come from the press, and stated that the department expected in future to issue two bulletins a year. One on roses, two on stem rot and a bibliography on greenhouse insects are in preparation.

An invitation to hold the convention of 1916 in either Moline or Rock Island was presented from the Tri-City Florists' Club and referred to the executive committee for action. In this connection Secretary Ammann called attention to the fact that the Indiana State Florists' Society holds monthly meetings throughout the year, with much success and benefit to its members, and suggested that it would tend to liven the Illinois organization, as well as increase its usefulness, if it met oftener than once a year. It was suggested that two meetings a year be held, one at Urbana, to keep in touch with the work there, and one such as has been held in previous years. E. G. Hill and Chas. Loveridge spoke in favor of this proposal and on the motion of Andrew Peterson, it was decided to empower the executive committee to call a meeting at Urbana at a time it should select.

C. W. Johnson suggested that, to make the meetings more helpful, papers and discussions be added to the program. To start something, he asked E. G. Hill his opinion of the comparative values of the pompon and exhibition chrysanthemums. E. Wienhoeber, Mr. Johnson, J. F. Ammann and H. E. Smith also spoke on this subject, and it was the common opinion that well grown pompons were of increasing value, equaling the large blooms in sales and popularity. Selection and improvement, with an eye for quality, were emphasized as the road to increased use and sale of these valuable blooms.

Election of Officers.

In the election of officers, it was thought time to promote C. W. Johnson from the office of first vice-president, which he has filled for several years, to that of president. I. L. Pillsbury was selected as his successor. It was deemed inadvisable to break up the old team, J. F. Ammann and F. L. Washburn, respectively secretary and treasurer, and they, like the others, were elected by unanimous vote.

St. Louis Boosters.

Stating that he spoke at the request of the president of the American Carnation Society, E. G. Hill urged the growers of Illinois and neighboring states to do their part in making the show at St. Louis next January a great success. J. F. Ammann, as vice-president of the society, strongly reinforced his plea. W. J. Pilcher also spoke. If the St. Louis show, the first held west of the Mississippi river in the twenty-four years of the society's existence, is not a great one, it will not be for lack of energetic and continuous boosting.

The Smoker.

On Tuesday evening the members and guests assembled in the Hotel Beardsley for a most enjoyable smoker. Prof. J. C. Blair gave the welcoming address and told of the growth of his department through the aid of the florists of Illinois. H. B. Dorner told "What the Division of Horticulture Is Trying to Do," explaining the work in detail. Prof. Evans spoke in place of R. R. Root on the work at the college in landscape gardening. The president of the Floricultural Club, a students' organization, presided.

These were followed by short and much enjoyed remarks by officers, past and present, of the society and all the notables present who could be prevailed upon to rise to the occasion. This developed into a contest of telling stories to illustrate the unpreparedness of the speaker. The palm was not awarded, but it was felt to belong to I. L. Pillsbury, who compared himself to the darky who, driving along a bad road, lost all his potatoes when the tail-board of his wagon was bumped off in the ascent of a hill, and becoming caught in the mire, exclaimed, on viewing the empty cart, "Stuck in a rut, and nothin' to unload!"

The Exhibits.

It was not expected that the display this year would be of the usual size, nor was it. But everything shown was of high quality. Carnations were the most in evidence; perhaps the Illinois growers are getting their hand in for the American Carnation Society's show at St. Louis next January.

The judges were John Zech, of Chicago; Edgar Osborn, of Danville, and Geo. A. Washburn, of Bloomington, who reported on the exhibits at the smoker Tuesday evening and made a few awards, which are indicated in the descriptions that follow:

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, sent a vase of excellent blooms of their new carnation, Belle Washburn.

Five vases of carnations from A. C. Brown, of Springfield, were of good quality and made an excellent appearance. The varieties were Beacon, Mrs. C. W. Ward, White Wonder, Sangamo and Enchantress.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind., showed a fine vase of Hoosier Beauty roses and some excellent Good Cheer and Pink Sensation carnations. The latter, with its long, stiff stem and large-sized blooms, seems of exceptional merit.

Philip Foley said the Foley Mfg. Co., of Chicago, had the largest exhibit of any, though he did not bring it with him. He referred to the university greenhouses.

The Haeger Brick & Tile Co., of Elgin, was represented by the traveler's exhibit of glazed pottery and standard pots of T. W. Plant, who was on the job.

From the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., were several vases of roses that were a center of interest. The one most discussed was a yellow seedling, from S. McGredy & Son, the Irish rose raisers, of about the size and general shape of Mrs. Aaron Ward. This was not sent out this year on account of the war and its detrimental effects, but will be disseminated in the near future. The other varieties shown, all of excellent appearance, were Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia and Lady Alice Stanley. The yellow seedling was highly commended and Lady Alice Stanley scored 85 points by the judges.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., of Chicago, was represented by Fred Lautenschlager with a table full of blue prints, literature, etc., of its boilers.

Two large vases of Killarney and White Killarney on unusually long stems showed the kind of stock grown by Chas. Loveridge, at Peoria. He also exhibited a nice vase of Carnation Philadelphia.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, Ill., exhibited a vase of Rosette carnations and a maroon seedling carnation No. 6909A.

A specimen of Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson came from J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., and was in excellent shape. It was stated that the plant had been in full flower for two months.

The attention of practically every visitor was attracted by a vase of an unnamed sweet pea, cerise in color, with 18-inch stems, shown by the J. D.

Herman B. Dorner.

(In charge of entertainment of Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana.)

Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet. This firm also showed a vase of Carnation Aviator, to which it has acquired the rights and which it will disseminate in 1915-16. Aviator was highly commended by the judges.

Frank B. Smith's Sons, of Danville, showed two carnation seedlings, No. 2 and No. 108, both maroon. They also exhibited a table of plants, including valley, primulas, hydrangeas, spiræas and deutzias. The judges scored seedling No. 108, 80 points and highly commended the plant display.

To further raise the hopes of the florists of the section for a high-class carnation show at St. Louis next January, John Steidle, of Olivette, Mo., showed what he could do by exhibiting his seedling, Sunbeam, a light pink variety of good color and substance, of which he has high expectations.

Chas. C. Walker, of Danville, brought over some well grown white and pink carnations.

Several vases of Princess of Wales violets and three vases of excellent butterfly sweet peas were exhibited by A. Washburn & Sons, of Bloomington.

A vase of Carnation Morning Glow, from Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, Mass., showed up in excellent shape after its long journey. The flowers were of medium size, but the carnation's exceptional keeping and shipping qualities were evident.

J. E. Yeats, the only local florist to make an exhibit, had on display a group of kentias, aucubas, carnations, roses, azaleas and bulbous stock, and two vases of his red rose, Mrs. Sarah Yeats.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[The report of J. F. Ammann, secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, presented at the convention at Urbana, March 2.]

Your secretary reports an increase of annual members of only four and life members two. This is the smallest addition to our ranks in any one year since the organization.

I regret to report the death during the last year of W. L. Palinsky, of Chicago. He was among the foremost of our fellow workers, having just last year secured thirteen new members, more than any other member ever turned in at any one time. We sincerely sympathize with his bereaved family.

It is also with deepest regret that I report the death of Mrs. Chas. Loveridge, of Peoria, the beloved wife of our worthy ex-president. She was a regular attendant at our annual gatherings, always cheerful, and with a good word for everyone. I am sure I voice the sentiment of each and every member of this society in extending to Mr. Loveridge and his bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

Secretary's Financial Statement.

Amount received from annual dues	$61.00
Amount received from life members	20.00
	$81.00
Paid for secretary's expenses	$34.65
Paid for printing	13.50
Paid for florists' directory	3.00
Paid for flowers	5.00

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

[The address of Herbert E. Smith, president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at the convention at Urbana March 2.]

It is a great pleasure and benefit for our society to meet here at the experiment station, where we can see the result of the work being carried on by the floriculture staff.

With this spacious service building and the modern greenhouses attached, we can certainly feel that the commonwealth of our great state of Illinois has become more interested in our vocation, and I hope that appropriations for additions to this plant will soon be forthcoming.

We gather here today for the tenth annual meeting and exhibition of our association. I am sure we shall all be much interested in the reports of our secretary, treasurer and the advisory committee; also the reports by the members of the department of floriculture on subjects of vital interest to all florists.

Florists' conventions and exhibitions are becoming more popular and profitable each year, a fact demonstrated by the large attendance at the flower shows throughout the country. The grower who exhibits a novelty of merit at these shows is worthy of success, on account of the ever-increasing demand of the flower buying public, for something new, something different. A great many florists invest each year in enough plants of new varieties to give them a thorough test, and claim the better returns received from the ones that make good always offset the loss on varieties that are not adapted to their soil and conditions.

The originators of new varieties of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and novelties in the plant line, the inventions and improvements in greenhouse building and labor-saving devices, etc., should have the hearty support of all florists. Often years of patient labor bring results that are of more benefit to the trade in general than to the originator.

One of the objects of the association is to promote in all possible ways the art of floriculture. Let us get together, get better acquainted, exchange ideas and experiences; perhaps some one has some new method that may be of benefit to his neighbor, and, after the two days' meeting is over, may we return to our homes feeling well repaid for the short time spent in deliberation.

My thoughts are ever with the association, and I trust that what I have failed to express in words has been, or will be, accounted for by my deeds.

Frank L. Washburn.
(Treasurer of the Illinois State Florists' Association.)

CARNATION DISEASES.

[The report of Geo. L. Peltier, floricultural pathologist, University of Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, presented before the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, March 2.]

We now have in the process of publication, as a bulletin, the results of the last three years' work on the fungus causing the stem-rot of carnations. This bulletin will be of a more or less technical nature, but will be of value to the florist.

The fungus rhizoctonia has been reported in the United States as causing more or less trouble to 164 species of plants. About one-half of this number include floricultural and ornamental plants commonly grown by the florists. The fungus is extremely serious in the cutting bench, not only to carnations, but to practically all cuttings made from herbaceous plants. In the seed beds it will attack seedlings of a large number of plants, causing the well known symptoms of damping off. It is from the seed bed and cutting bench that the fungus is carried, to a large extent, into the field and benches, causing more or less loss throughout the year.

Cross inoculation experiments show that one species of rhizoctonia is the cause of all the trouble. As I have stated before, this fungus has been found to attack a large number of plants, including field and vegetable crops, floricultural and ornamental plants, and many weeds. The fungus has also been found growing in the soil on dead plant material, so that it is probably present, to a certain extent, in most fields. It is quite clear, then, that rhizoctonia is present in almost every carnation field, as well as the soil that is put in the benches.

You may inquire then, why are not all carnation plants destroyed in the field? Rhizoctonia is what we call a facultative parasite; that is, under ordinary conditions it is a saprophyte, living on dead plant parts, but under certain conditions it becomes an active parasite and can attack and kill plants of all ages readily. As I have mentioned in previous reports, the conditions necessary for its parasitic development depend on a high temperature and, to some extent, on moisture.

It is hoped that by next fall another bulletin taking up more specifically the work on the carnation stem rot will be ready for distribution.

Branch Rot of Carnations.

Branch rot of carnations has been under observation again this season. The fungus is able to attack the cuttings easily, and it is by the use of infected cuttings that the disease is spread in the field and house.

The completion of the work on stem rot will allow us to take up the study of the fungus and methods of control more fully in the greenhouse.

Carnation Yellows.

As I have suggested in past reports, the only way the yellows may be controlled is by the selection of cuttings from plants showing no signs of this trouble. During the current year, a large number of selections were made from a number of varieties, and the results have come out surprisingly well. Cuttings taken from plants showing yellows badly, produced plants of the same type. Cuttings taken from slightly diseased plants, produced only a few healthy, a number with yellows, while the majority of plants showed only slight attacks of yellows. When cuttings were taken from apparently healthy plants, they developed, in the majority of cases, into more vigorous plants, showing no yellows. Occasionally cuttings taken from an apparently healthy plant would all produce plants with yellows, which tends to show that great care must be exercised in the selection of cuttings from healthy plants.

Another selection from the first year's work has recently been made, together with a further selection from the stock now in the greenhouse.

Antirrhinum Rust.

Due to the serious nature of the snapdragon rust, Mr. Rees has devoted his entire time, during the last year, to this problem. It has been reported in nearly all the middle western states, in Massachusetts, and again in Oregon and California.

The rust appears on the plants in the field about the last of July. The uredo (summer) stage persists until fall, when the teleuto (winter) pustules are found on the stems and branches. The uredo, and to some extent the teleuto stage, is also found in the greenhouse throughout the winter, on cuttings, seedlings, and later on the mature plants. During spring the rust seems to die out in the house, reappearing in the field during the late summer.

Mr. Rees published an account of this trouble last fall in all the trade papers, which no doubt most of you have read.

Aster Diseases.

During the current year, a large number of inquiries relating to various plant diseases were answered. The troubles most commonly reported last summer were stem rot and yellows of asters. We are planning to carry on some experimental work for several seasons, on the aster troubles, particularly the two mentioned above.

Dry Rot of Gloxinias.

We are also planning some work on a dry rot of gloxinia bulbs, a disease which has recently been brought to our attention and which appears to be quite serious.

EXPERIMENTS ON FERTILIZERS.

[The report of F. W. Muncie, of Urbana, Ill., on fertilizer work at the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Illinois, presented before the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, March 2.]

Bulletin 176 of the University of Illinois, on "The Use of Commercial Fertilizers in Growing Carnations," has just been issued and may be obtained by application to the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. It contains the results of experiments upon the use of dried blood, acid phosphate and potassium sulphate in carnation growing, which have appeared from time to time in previous reports in the trade papers. The most important points are, briefly, that dried blood or ammonium sulphate can be used with benefit on soils naturally moderately well supplied with organic matter; that no benefit has so far been found from the use of potassium sulphate on a brown silt loam soil, and that an increase in production was noted when acid phosphate was supplied in addition to dried blood, particularly with the variety Enchantress, less so with White Perfection. Comparative experiments, also, have shown that these commercial fertilizers may be used in moderation with the assurance of producing a crop as large and of as good a quality as with manure exclusively.

The carnation experiments during the present as well as last year have been ones on a more extensive scale in regard to the value of acid phosphate, in this experiment as a supplement to sulphate of ammonia. The varieties White Perfection and Rosette have been used and with these varieties no increase has been found. This contradiction of the experiment of 1912-13 (Bul. 176) may be due to the use of sulphate of ammonia in place of dried blood used that year or to the fact that the varieties used are not responsive to its use as Enchantress is. It looks as if it were necessary in this connection to study closely the difference in response to fertilizers of the variety type represented by Enchantress and Beacon, which stool rather profusely, and of the type represented by Rosette and White Perfection.

Overfeeding Carnations.

Continued experiments in the overfeeding of carnations have shown that the danger from overfeeding with commercial fertilizers can be roughly predicted from a knowledge of their solubility in water. For instance, sulphate of ammonia, of which about six pounds dissolve in a gallon of water, is markedly injurious, while acid phosphate, of which one-sixth pound dissolves in a gallon of water, shows no, or almost no, injury in heavy applications. The injury from equal applications of potassium sulphate, of which two-thirds pound dissolves in a gallon, is less than that from ammonium sulphate, but is still severe enough, if large amounts are used, to cause complete ruin of the crop.

A careful comparison of weather conditions daily with daily production records has given data that clearly establish the relation between periods of cloudy weather and splitting carnations. The long period of continued cloudy weather of the fall of 1914 (about three weeks) was followed, for instance, by an increase in the percentage of splits up to as much as twenty-five per cent. The increased splitting is not coincident with the period of cloudy weather, however, but follows it by a week or two. The records showing how these conclusions were obtained will be published in detail.

Excessively high applications of acid phosphate to first-year roses have caused slight injury, more marked with Richmonds than Killarneys. But amounts up to forty pounds per hundred square feet of bench space, which are equivalent to one pound per cubic foot of soil if a compost is made, or about nine tons per acre, have given a larger number of flowers than the soil to which none was applied. The need for acid phosphate is most marked in the later part of the season, and the increase due to its use is greatest at that time. No benefit from the use of dried blood has been found on the soil at the experiment station, a brown silt loam, until the spring of the year after the plants were set in the previous summer. The results seem to show a decrease from its use in fall or winter on fresh soil. In the spring, however, the plants show the nitrogen starvation by the yellowing of the foliage and increased production follows the use of a nitrogenous fertilizer.

Liquid Manures.

A study is being made in the chemical laboratory of the value of liquid manure made (1) from fresh droppings, (2) from barnyard manure, and (3) from shredded manure. The relative values of steaming and of fermentation in preparing it also are being worked out. This is a practical problem, the results of which can be of immediate use to the florist. In connection with this and other work, a study is being made of the variation of temperature and humidity in greenhouses and their relation to growth as measured by the growth records of roses. The results obtained on these subjects up to the present are interesting but hardly complete enough for publication. In the latter study, the experiment station has been assisted by several florists and opportunity is taken at this time to acknowledge their kind coöperation in this difficult problem.

Hannibal, Mo.—J. E. Null, for nine years in business at Murphysboro, Ill., has moved here, with his wife and two children, Edward and Elizabeth, and engaged in the cut flower business.

Port Huron, Mich.—The recent heavy rains and imperfect sewerage drainage caused the flooding of the greenhouses of Matthias Ullenbruch recently, resulting in several hundreds of dollars damage. This is a repetition of last spring's occurrence.

Florists' Review,

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

Enclosed find my check for $8.50, for which continue my gladiolus ad another five weeks.

Quality bulbs and a little Classified ad does the trick. I sold over 100,000 bulbs through this little ad. Well satisfied.

Very truly yours,

George J. Joerg.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

FEAST'S FLORAL BUST.

For Washington's birthday, Samuel Feast & Sons, of Baltimore, displayed in the window of their store, at 331 North Charles street, a bust of George Washington composed entirely of natural flowers, the work of Charles F. Feast, which kept a crowd before the store all the time it was on exhibition. How lifelike it was, can be seen from the accompanying illustration. The lifelike color of the face, however, cannot be shown. This was produced by the use of tulip petals, from shell-pink to orange-brown in color. The wig was of southern moss and Roman hyacinths, the coat of violets, the ruff of lilies and the background of galax leaves. Eighteen tulips, six lilies and 500 violets were used. The picture was four by five feet and stood on a rustic easel, framed in smilax and draped with an American flag.

DONE IN DULUTH.

Four years ago the Duluth Floral Co., Duluth, Minn., took over the business of Eischen Bros., and remodeled the store at 121 West Superior street. Oliver J. Eischen was one of the members of the new firm; the other was Edw. P. Kreimer, whose energy, instilled into the business, contributed largely to its subsequent success. By constant and careful attention to all the details of the business and with the stimulus to trade given by the attractive appearance of the remodeled store, a large and high-class trade was built up.

As may be seen from the illustrations, the store, both in its exterior and interior arrangements, ranks with those in the largest cities. There is ample room for display in the two large windows, and the fringes, so to speak, of evergreens across the front, under the sign and along the top, lend a distinctive touch.

The panoramic view of the interior shows the general arrangement of the store looking toward the large conservatory. The display refrigerator is 6½x20 feet. There is also an auxiliary storage refrigerator 7x7 on the main floor and a storage cooler 10x17 in the large basement. The semi-indirect lighting system adds to the appearance of the room, giving a soft tone that is particularly advantageous in a flower store.

The large assortment of baskets and supplies indicates the extent of the business and makes a showing that commands the attention of customers. The sales and delivery force of the store is, in normal times, twelve persons.

THE PREVENTION OF WASTE.

Economy in Displaying Stock.

Economy in the display window is of vast importance. In no other department of the store can stock be so entirely wasted as in the display window. If we were to follow the example of the European florists, we would have display refrigerators for our show windows, from which stock could be sold and in which various designs, etc., could be perfectly preserved until sold. This feature is advantageous, for when a patron can see a design completely finished he is at once induced to purchase, whereas from a clerk's description or from a photograph it is much harder to make a sale, because at the best there is only a vague idea in the mind of the patron as to how the design in question will actually look when finished. Since American florists have not yet adopted this splendid custom of the florists across the water, we must do the next best thing, and our decorators should bear in mind that cut flowers must be arranged in water as far as possible and that the stems should be kept of sufficient length to be salable at any time through the day; in this way stock can be used directly from the window.

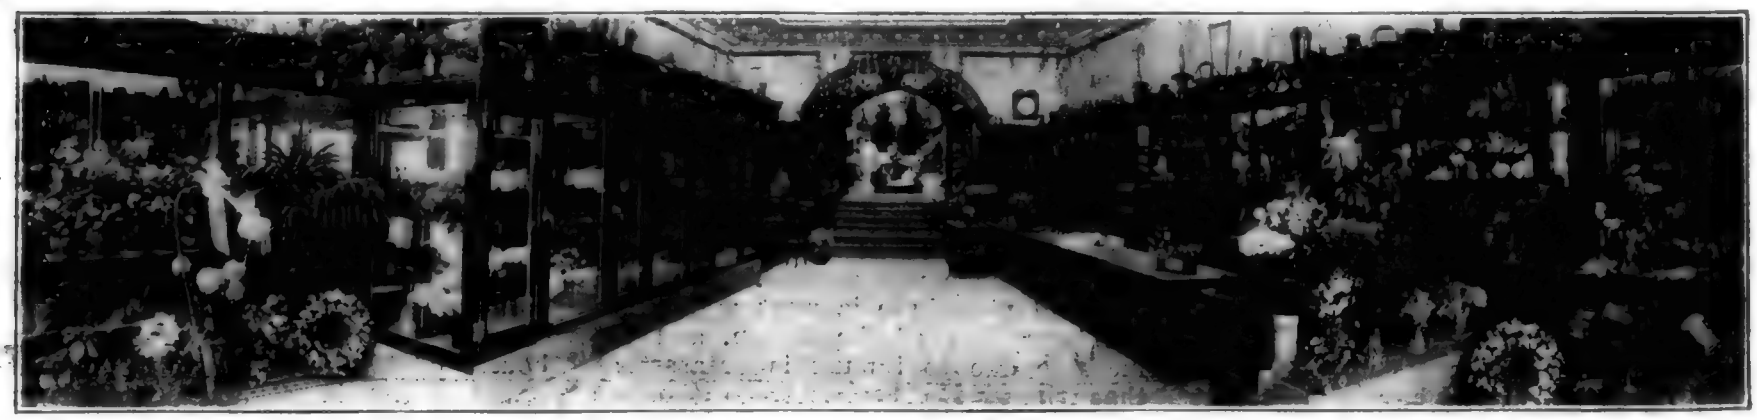
Charged to Advertising.



The display window is one of our best advertising mediums, for hundreds of people pass it every day. It is also an indicator as to the kind of store and stock that one may expect to find within. Therefore a record should be kept of the materials and stock which are put into the window, and if there be any loss, it may rightfully be charged up to advertising, for a good display always increases sales.

Often we run across decorators who refuse to sell directly from the window, but this should not be, for it is much more profitable to be compelled to rearrange one's display twice a day and actually dispose of the stock than to have it remain intact and unsold for days at a time, a veritable picture of stagnation.

A File for Accessories.

Putting accessories away carefully after one has used them in the window is always important, and this applies just as much to vases, baskets, silks and placards as it does to cut flowers and plants. All kinds of signs can be used again and again if carefully wrapped and filed in an alphabetically arranged sign repository, which should be made large enough to accommodate the cardboard ones as well as the pliable window stickers, for the extensive use of the fancy printed and colored signs is expensive.

When plants are used they should be so arranged as to permit a thorough watering every day and the frequent changing of the groups and the color scheme, thus facilitating the sale of the various plants which, one after another, take their places in the show groups. All too often the plants are neglected after they have been put on display, when, indeed, they need just as much or perhaps more care, because subjected to the dry heat and intense light.

Making Old Things New.

Accessories should be inventoried every few months. Baskets that are not salable should be given a coat of fresh paint and made to look bright and new; then they should be filled with material which will make these cast-offs attractive and salable. For instance, at Christmas there are baskets that can be bronzed or tinted red, filled with ruscus, statice and evergreens and disposed of at a profit, whereas these same baskets would be relegated to the storeroom and eventually would find their way to the rubbish heap, had they not been worked with and made attractive. For St. Patrick's day all sorts of receptacles can be utilized for holding shamrock, and so on all through the year; old stock can be worked off with a little planning and hard work. E. C. A.

RENASCENCE OF THE FREESIA.

The freesia has enjoyed a wonderful return to popularity the last couple of years. The advent of Purity gave the flower a boost, but after a year or two its favor seemed to wane; it was less seen in the markets and bulbs were in lighter demand. Last season, however, there was a pronounced upturn in both supply and demand; at St. Valentine's day, especially, freesias sold splendidly and growers felt encouraged to go in stronger for next season. And their confidence was not misplaced. In the last two months more freesia has been sold in most of the wholesale markets than in any similar period of the past; also, the prices have been good considering the quantity of stock moved.

Old Freesia refracta alba still is more or less in evidence, showing the experience and diligence of the bulb grower in the color of the flowers, some fairly clear, many quite yellow. But Purity has become so moderate in cost of bulbs that it almost monopolizes the attention of the growers. Here and there other colors are offered. For instance, Alois Frey, proprietor of Rose Lawn Nurseries, Crown Point, Ind., for several years has been at work on a set of bright-colored freesias of which he now has worked up considerable stock, a part of which was distributed last season. The colors run through almost the entire spectrum and are bright and clear enough so that retailers find the cut flowers extremely useful. There are light pinks and good reds, light lavenders and deep purples, but perhaps the best of all is a deep yellow. Mr. Frey's varieties have all the ordinary freesia qualities, plus something new in color, and have added more than a little this season to the popularity of the flower.

Davenport, Ia.—Forber & Bird, 323 Brady street, designed and executed the floral decorations and furnished all the cut flowers, including 1,000 carnations and 500 roses, for the banquet at the opening of the Blackhawk Hotel. In the edition of the Davenport Democrat and Leader celebrating this event, Forber & Bird carried a 3-column advertisement.

E. P. Kreimer.

STARTING THE SEASON'S CROP.

Sowing in Greenhouse or Hotbed.

The finest sweet peas are those produced from seeds started under glass, either in a cool greenhouse or a mild hotbed. A good plan is to sow the seeds in shallow flats of sandy loam and cover the surface with pure sand. Pot off singly into 3-inch pots before the roots have had time to run too far. Gradually harden off in frames and plant outdoors as soon as the weather permits. This will be about April 10 in the latitude of New York, earlier south and later north. Plant out six inches apart in the rows in well prepared ground, having previously placed the supports in position. If set out six or even twelve inches apart, sweet peas will surprise you; they will cover the supports with haulm so strong that you can scarcely see through the rows. If the peas can be put out in trenches prepared the previous fall, or even just before planting, they will do much better.

Sowing Outdoors.

It will soon be time to make outdoor sowings, as appearances at this time favor a somewhat early spring. Successful sweet pea culture has been boiled down into a dozen words: "Manure liberally, spade deeply, sow early, brush speedily, water freely, pick persistently." To this might well be added the injunction either to sow thinly or thin severely. If good stems are wanted, it is an absolute necessity to have the plants four to six inches apart. Another point to remember is that a liberal mulch of old manure, lawn rakings, straw or some such material, if applied about the time flowering commences, will keep the ground cooler and moister and materially prolong the flowering season. Cover the seeds two to two and one-half inches deep, and do not follow the bad advice given in some catalogues and sweet pea treatises, to keep covering the seedlings up as they grow. Nothing has done more to discourage people from growing sweet peas than this hilling up business. It encourages stem-rot and has been the ruination of thousands of rows of sweet peas.

Selection of Varieties.

Varieties are constantly changing, as we get a host of new sorts each year. The grandiflora type is now practically obsolete. They are hardy and free blooming, but simply will not sell at all when placed in competition with the Spencers. The leading market colors are pink, white and lavender; the call for scarlet, blue, mottled and other shades is comparatively light.

The following boiled-down list contains only first-class varieties for florists: Pure white—Nora Unwin and White Spencer. King White has a fine flower, but will not produce anything like the quantity of the other sorts named. Moneymaker, however, has proved remarkably free. Orange pink—Improved Helen Lewis and Edrom Beauty. Cream pink—Mrs. Hugh Dickson, Mrs. H. Bell. Clear pink—Countess Spencer, Hercules. The last named has larger flowers than Countess Spencer, and is a veritable giant among pink sweet peas. The seed, however, is still somewhat scarce. Lavender or mauve—Florence Nightingale, Asta Ohn. Orange—Thomas Stevenson. Blue—Captain of the Blues. Picotee-edged—Mrs. C. W. Breadmore. Blue-mottled—Helen Pierce Spencer. Scarlet—Scarlet Emperor. Primrose—Dobbie's Cream.

Desirable New Sorts.

Among the newer sorts which are well worthy of a trial are the following; these are destined to be standard sorts in a year or two, but the seed still comes somewhat high: Dobbie's Frilled Pink, color of Countess Spencer; Robert Sydenham, orange; Margaret Madison, azure blue; Jessie Cuthbertson Spencer, cream overlaid with stripes and marbling of pink; Illuminator, rich salmon pink; Martha Washington, white, margined bright pink; Afterglow, standards violet, shaded rosy amethyst, wings blue, striking.

For any grower wanting a good half dozen sorts, the following will fill the bill well: Nora Unwin, Countess Spencer, Mrs. Hugh Dickson, Scarlet Emperor, Florence Nightingale, Improved Helen Lewis.

BUETTNER TALKS ROSES.

When a visitor appears at the establishment of Emil Buettner, at Park Ridge, Ill., that genial grower promptly leads the way to his nearest greenhouse and the conversation to his favorite subject—roses. Pointing to a splendid showing of White Killarney, he said:

"There is the salvation of the rose grower. Always responsive, prolific and vigorous, it is the unit of value among roses. With decent treatment it gives the grower a larger and surer crop than any other rose on the benches. I speak more especially of the white variety, because there is a difference in the degrees of quality among the different Killarneys. Did you know that while White Killarney is extremely responsive and vigorous, these qualities become less and less pronounced as the color deepens, until in the deep pink varieties we have a rose that cannot compare with the white in any of the desirable qualities? Well, just for an illustration, look at these."

And leaving the White Killarneys, we went into another house, filled with Killarney Brilliant.

"Here is a rose that seems susceptible to every ill wind that blows. If there is any disease or pest it can possibly acquire, it falls a ready victim. And, moreover, it has a washed out appearance; for, though the center is a deep pink, the outer petals pale in dark weather almost to white. It is truly a disappointment to me."

Passing from this house, we came to the popular Sunburst. "There is good property but for one thing," he continued. "It is too slow. White Killarney will put out a shoot and be ready for another crop while the Sunburst is getting started. Yet, for all that, it is a good rose.

"But the Mrs. Shawyer is unprofitable, to my way of thinking. It has a tendency to go blind in the winter and it is unresponsive." When asked what he thought of Ophelia, Mr. Buettner said: "I would not care to pass judgment on it now, though I will say I am inclined to be conservative in the matter of novelties. They are all right for rich patrons who crave something new, but for the purposes of the general retailer the tried varieties are best. There is one comparatively new variety, however, I am inclined to think is going to prove itself a good investment. That is Mrs. Charles Russell.

"Beauties? Oh, I dropped them long ago. What is the use of taking a chance when you can as easily have a sure thing?"

S. A. F. DIRECTORS MEET AT CHICAGO

AFFILIATION HAS ITS TEST.

New Plan Works Well.

Affiliation of the trade bodies with the S. A. F., long a dream, became a reality this week, when the directors met at Hotel La Salle, Chicago, with the presidents of four other trade organizations sitting with the board. The affiliation directors present were:

The president of the American Carnation Society—Samuel J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.
The president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery—Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.
The president of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club—H. H. Bartsch, Waverley, Mass.
The president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club—George Burton, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

The absentees among the affiliation directors were:

The president of the American Rose Society—Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.
The president of the New York Florists' Club—Harry A. Bunyard, New York.

Those of the regularly elected or appointed members of the board present were:

The junior ex-president—Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis.
The president—Patrick Welch, of Boston.
The secretary—John Young, of New York.
The treasurer—Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo.
The directors—A. F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.

The vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, of San Francisco, was unable to make the trip. W. F. Gude, Washington representative, arrived March 2.

The board as it now is constituted consists of seventeen, of whom thirteen were present. The meeting was held at Chicago this year, to avoid taking the members on the long trip to San Francisco, where the society will hold its convention in August. More and more each year the real work of the society is transacted at this March meeting of the board, a large number of details of such character that they cannot be handled in convention having to be passed on. The board was in session almost continuously for two days and the affiliation directors took active part in the discussions and in shaping the course of the society.

Although Vice-president MacRorie could not make a report in person, he sent full details of the local plans for the convention and the convention garden, which were approved. Incidentally, Secretary Young reported Mr. MacRorie has already sent in the names of forty-four new members.

George Asmus, chairman of the National Flower Show Committee, of course was present and reported as to the arrangements completed for the show in Philadelphia next spring, also as to plans not yet matured. The board approved the work of the committee.

The convention program was outlined, space rentals fixed for the trade's display and a special train to the coast in coöperation with the Chicago Florists' Club was arranged for. In addition, there was the usual grist of appropriations and other routine business.

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, chairman of the sports committee, was present. Other visitors attracted by the meeting were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis. Director Goddard was accompanied by his wife. Fred Burki and his son, of Pittsburgh, were present a few hours, being on their way to the Pacific coast.

National Flower Show.

The National Flower Show Committee is so closely identified with the S. A. F. board that meetings are coincident. The committee is: George Asmus, chairman; A. Farenwald, vice-chairman; John Young, secretary; W. F. Kasting, treasurer; Chas. H. Totty, W. N. Rudd, Thomas Roland, W. P. Craig. All were present save two of the members, who are ill, Messrs. Rudd and Totty, the latter having had to submit to another surgical operation, although by no means so serious as the one of last autumn.

The committee had a large amount of detail work of sub-committees to pass on, but its most important duty was in connection with the hall for the show. Convention hall, at Broad street and Allegheny avenue, has been accepted, but does not fully meet the approval of the Philadelphia interests, as it is off to one side of the business center. There now is a possibility of securing the great tabernacle in which Billy Sunday is holding revivals. It is a specially constructed building on park property. Vice-chairman Farenwald and W. P. Craig, the Philadelphia members, were authorized to complete an arrangement of this character if they can do so.

Southern Florists Affiliating.

Through the efforts of Robert C. Kerr, representing the south on the board of directors of the S. A. F., interest has been aroused in the south in the subject of affiliation. On his way to attend the Chicago meeting March 1, Mr. Kerr attended special meetings of florists at New Orleans and at Memphis. At New Orleans the general subject for discussion was affiliation or the organization of a southern division of the S. A. F. Those present at the meeting were: C. W. Eichling, Charles R. Panter, Henry Eschmann, Henry Illenberger, E. A. Farley, Paul Abele,

President Patrick Welch, of the S. A. F.

Charles Ory, P. A. Chopin, Charles Eble, R. Eichling, H. Papworth and U. J. Virgin.

It was the consensus of opinion that the time is not ripe for action, but that the probabilities are that conditions will change within the next year so that affiliation will be possible.

At Memphis the florists went one step farther. There was an enthusiastic meeting and a start was made toward the organization of the Memphis Florists' Club. W. Englehart was chosen temporary chairman and Albert Haisch as temporary secretary. Others present were: C. H. Hune, O. Benham, A. Benham, O. Johnson, Miss Fraley, Miss Turbeville, J. W. Moore.

Here, too, the opinion was that the time is not quite ripe for an organization of the trade in the south, but that it should be undertaken at a little later date.

Mr. Kerr presented the matter to the S. A. F. directors March 1 and was advised that if the existing southern societies cannot obtain enough members for the affiliation of the present organizations, a federation would be an expedient for carrying on the work in the south through affiliation with the national society.

F. T. D. Directors' Meeting.

Those present at the board meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, March 3, at Hotel La Salle were: Irwin Bertermann, W. F. Gude, Albert Pochelon, Philip Breitmeyer, Ernst Wienhoeber, George Asmus, John Bertermann, G. E. M. Stumpp and August Lange.

The board appointed George Asmus, Philip Breitmeyer and W. F. Gude to constitute a committee to revise the by-laws with a view to permitting more elasticity in the matter of credits. Moreover, it relieved the secretary of personal responsibility in credit adjustments and placed this matter in the hands of a committee. It also appointed John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., to act as the special representative of the F. T. D. at the San Francisco exposition. William L. Rock, treasurer of the F. T. D., was instructed to place $4,000 in a sinking fund to guarantee deposits made in the future.

Chicago Club Entertains.

Both guests and members agreed that the special meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club at the Bismarck hotel, March 1, was an unqualified success. For three hours and a half there was an unbroken flow of merriment, persiflage and story telling.

As soon as the business of the meeting was disposed of, Vice-president James Morton, who occupied the chair in the absence of President Keimel, ingeniously managed to slip the gavel to E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., the third president of the S. A. F., who held the chair for the remainder of the evening to the pleasure and satisfaction of all present. Mr. Hill spoke briefly of a new outlook on things, and urged the necessity of progressiveness on the part of all florists, from grower to retailer. He especially called the attention of the younger men to the great possibilities of hybridizing and cross fertilizing.

Mr. Hill first called on John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., who referred to the great work that has been done by the national organization and urged the coöperation of all in the yet greater work of the future. Patrick Welch, of Boston, president of the S. A. F., called attention to the fact that the first national flower show was held in Chicago, and to the further fact that a great part of the work for the advancement of the florists' trade had had its inception or consummation in that city. Adolph Farenwald, ex-president of the American Rose Society, after indulging in a little good natured banter, made a few encomiastic remarks about the rose.

Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., at the request of the chairman, gave a brief sketch of the hybridizing of freesias. Mr. Frey said that he started the interesting work six years ago with 200 bulbs, and is bending all his efforts to produce what he denominated the tender shades.

William F. Kasting, of Buffalo, treasurer of the S. A. F., is a finished persifleur and was impartial in the distribution of his favors.

Other speakers of the evening were: Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis; Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass.; William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; August Poehlmann and Adolph Poehlmann, both of Morton Grove, Ill.; R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex.; Charles Critchell, of Cincinnati; George Burton and William Craig, both of Philadelphia; J. J. Hess, of Omaha; H. H. Bartsch, of Boston, and George Asmus, of Chicago. Several others were called on but contented themselves with a word of thanks.

Four varieties of sweet peas, Pink and White, President Wilson, Rose-Pink and Orange Orchid, were exhibited by Poehlmann Bros. Co. Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., staged two large vases of his colored hybrid freesias.

The evening was well rounded out with a substantial luncheon and a plentiful supply of smokes.

The following were elected to membership in the Chicago Florists' Club: Howard R. Votaw, with Darling & Co., and Ernest Knecht, with John T. Muir, both of Chicago; Rudolph Ellsworth, of Downers Grove; Edward Meuret and Fred Schramm, both of Park Ridge; Milton Alexander and Charles Schwake, both of New York.

In his report, Chairman French, of the committee on transportation, recommended the Northwestern to Denver via Omaha and the Denver & Rio Grande to San Francisco via Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden, as the most desirable route for the S. A. F. delegation to the August convention.

Farewell Luncheon.

A luncheon in honor of the directors of the S. A. F. and the F. T. D. and the National Flower Show Committee, to which forty sat down at the Hotel La Salle, March 3, was the occasion of many speeches of felicitation on the open-handed way in which the Chicagoans entertained their guests.

The speakers were: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.; G. E. M. Stumpp, New York; Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass.; John Young, New York; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia, Pa.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; H. H. Bartsch, Boston, Mass.; George Burton, Philadelphia, Pa.; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; and J. C. Vaughan, C. L. Washburn, August Poehlmann, William L. Kroeschell, George Sykes, L. D. McNeff, W. W. Barnard, Ernst Wienhoeber, A. Henderson, all of Chicago.

C. L. Washburn took the opportunity to speak of the advisability of taking steps toward the formation of a credit adjustment bureau in connection with the various local organizations and also as a distinct department of the S. A. F. This seemed to strike a responsive chord in every breast and President Patrick Welch said that he would take the matter under careful consideration.

The tables were, of course, tastefully decorated with flowers. The boutonnieres were Belle Washburn carnations.

Roses on Concrete Benches, Establishment of McIntyre Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn.

CONCRETE CONSTRUCTION

NASHVILLE GROWER'S BENCHES.

Lasting Construction Most Profitable.

We have read with interest the articles in The Review on concrete benches. Concrete benches built properly are expensive, but, for those who can afford them, they are the best investment. Three years ago we believed the time was at hand for much better houses, of more lasting materials, and today we maintain we were right. Had we invested the money in old-style houses, no doubt we should today be suffering from lack of a market for our roses and carnations. Better houses and fewer houses is our watchword.

We have a good old place of about 50,000 feet, ordinarily built. At our new plant we have the most modern materials and construction that money would provide, and do not regret a cent we put into them. Our benches are concrete, made in wood molds.

Making the Benches.

We have enough forms so that three men can fill half of them in one day and the other half the next. The third day they take the concrete blocks out of the first half of the molds and rack them up, and from then on keep them sprinkled well until they have hardened correctly.

The side-boards of the benches taper from top to bottom, and so need no poultry wire, which we think is troublesome to get into correct shape and does not add much strength. By means of the tapered side we obtain a thickness of about two and one-half inches through the corner angle.

We get a good finish on our benches by mixing the concrete to a slushy consistency instead of semi-dry, making the finished work so much more solid. Thus the steel reinforcing is thoroughly protected. Not one speck of rust has appeared, as it does when the concrete is mixed semi-dry. As the concrete formed from a semi-dry mixture is porous, the manure and water must eventually eat out the steel rods in it. The fact that the blocks are not porous does not harm our plants, for we have the best carnations in Nashville and our roses are the best we have ever had. We space the cross-pieces about three-eighths of an inch apart and so obtain ample drainage.

The Cost.

We have 4,900 lineal feet of concrete benches, five feet wide. The bottom is one and one-eighth inches thick. The sides are one and one-eighth inches at the top and taper, on the inside, to one and two-thirds inches at the bottom.

This bench, nearly a mile long if stretched out in a straight line, is worth every dollar put into it, and will be at its best when the second generation, and perhaps the third, succeeds us in the business. Such is our faith in properly made concrete benches. The cost was as follows:

Screening (small stones and dust, running about two-thirds chips of hard stone and one-third dust), at $1.10 per cubic yard.	$ 400
Portland cement, at $1.10 per barrel	400
Twisted steel rods, ½-inch and ⅜-inch	1,280
Forms, 200 in number	200
Labor, common	800
Total	$3,080

We did our own supervising, and so the last item is only for ordinary labor. The steel rods form the largest item of cost, but that is the place to be liberal.

Construction.

To sink the rods in place, we use a home-made gauge, in the shape of a chisel with a groove in the blade to fit the rod. It can then be no other place than the center of the piece of work, so that we thus insure correct spacing of the reinforcing. In the cross-pieces there are three ⅜-inch twisted steel bars, one in the middle and one three inches to each side of it and two inches from the edge of the piece. In the 4-inch stringer there are two ½-inch twisted steel reinforcement rods two inches apart and an inch from the edge. The posts on which the stringers rest are six feet apart. Other measurements and details of construction may be gained from the accompanying diagram, showing a cross-section of a bench. The photograph reproduced herewith shows our rose plants on some of our concrete benches. McIntyre Floral Co.

WILL NOT PRODUCE SEEDS.

We are sending you a section of a seed cone from our cycas plant, Cycas circinalis, from the East Indies, and should like to know how the seeds are treated in the propagation of the plants. We have grown this plant from a tiny specimen, bought about thirty years ago. This is the first seed to appear and we shall be greatly pleased if we can start some new plants.

L. W. C. & S.—Ohio.

Among the members of the cycas family the male and female flowers are found on separate plants, and the fact that the plant in question is bearing a cone proves it to be a male. These cones are composed of scales similar to the specimen forwarded, and on the under side of the scale near the base are located the anthers, not yet open. The female inflorescence is in the form of a tuft of short, woolly growths that look somewhat like imperfect leaves, and on certain portions around the edges of these growths the seeds are formed, the latter bearing some slight resemblance to a ripe horse-chestnut.

From these facts, I regret to say that the plant in question will not produce any seeds. W. H. T.

LIABILITY FOR FROZEN STOCK.

The law concerning the liability of a railway or express company for the loss of a shipment by freezing during a blizzard in the course of transportation is summed up by the Oklahoma Supreme court in the recent case of Dreyfus vs. St. Louis & San Francisco Ry. Co., 141 Pacific Reporter 773. In this case the railway company denied liability on the ground that the loss complained of by plaintiff was due to an act of God, but the court decided that, although "a carrier is not liable for damages resulting solely from an act of God," the act must not only be the proximate cause of the loss, but it must be the sole cause. If, however, the injury is caused by an act of God, commingled with the negligence of the defendant, as an efficient and contributing concurrent cause, and the injury would not have occurred except for such negligence, the company will be liable. So the court finds that if the loss is attributable to negligent delay in making delivery, existence of a blizzard will not excuse the carrier's liability for a loss by freezing which would have been avoided by proper delivery. The same principle has been applied to loss of freight in floods. S.

It was the consensus of opinion that the time is not ripe for action, but that the probabilities are that conditions will change within the next year so that affiliation will be possible.

At Memphis the florists went one step farther. There was an enthusiastic meeting and a start was made toward the organization of the Memphis Florists' Club. W. Englehart was chosen temporary chairman and Albert Haisch as temporary secretary. Others present were: C. H. Hune, O. Benham, A. Benham, O. Johnson, Miss Fraley, Miss Turbeville, J. W. Moore.

Here, too, the opinion was that the time is not quite ripe for an organization of the trade in the south, but that it should be undertaken at a little later date.

Mr. Kerr presented the matter to the S. A. F. directors March 1 and was advised that if the existing southern societies cannot obtain enough members for the affiliation of the present organizations, a federation would be an expedient for carrying on the work in the south through affiliation with the national society.

F. T. D. Directors' Meeting.

Those present at the board meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, March 3, at Hotel La Salle were: Irwin Bertermann, W. F. Gude, Albert Pochelon, Philip Breitmeyer, Ernst Wienhoeber, George Asmus, John Bertermann, G. E. M. Stumpp and August Lange.

The board appointed George Asmus, Philip Breitmeyer and W. F. Gude to constitute a committee to revise the by-laws with a view to permitting more elasticity in the matter of credits. Moreover, it relieved the secretary of personal responsibility in credit adjustments and placed this matter in the hands of a committee. It also appointed John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., to act as the special representative of the F. T. D. at the San Francisco exposition. William L. Rock, treasurer of the F. T. D., was instructed to place $1,000 in a sinking fund to guarantee deposits made in the future.

Chicago Club Entertains.

Both guests and members agreed that the special meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club at the Bismarck hotel, March 1, was an unqualified success. For three hours and a half there was an unbroken flow of merriment, persiflage and story telling.

As soon as the business of the meeting was disposed of, Vice-president James Morton, who occupied the chair in the absence of President Keinel, ingeniously managed to slip the gavel to E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., the third president of the S. A. F., who held the chair for the remainder of the evening to the pleasure and satisfaction of all present. Mr. Hill spoke briefly of a new outlook on things, and urged the necessity of progressiveness on the part of all florists, from grower to retailer. He especially called the attention of the younger men to the great possibilities of hybridizing and cross fertilizing.

Mr. Hill first called on John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., who referred to the great work that has been done by the national organization and urged the coöperation of all in the yet greater work of the future. Patrick Welch, of Boston, president of the S. A. F., called attention to the fact that the first national flower show was held in Chicago, and to the further fact that a great part of the work for the advancement of the florists' trade had had its inception or consummation in that city. Adolph Farenwald, ex-president of the American Rose Society, after indulging in a little good natured banter, made a few encomiastic remarks about the rose.

Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., at the request of the chairman, gave a brief sketch of the hybridizing of freesias. Mr. Frey said that he started the interesting work six years ago with 200 bulbs, and is bending all his efforts to produce what he denominated the tender shades.

William F. Kasting, of Buffalo, treasurer of the S. A. F., is a finished persifleur and was impartial in the distribution of his favors.

Other speakers of the evening were: Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis; Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass.; William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; August Poehlmann and Adolph Poehlmann, both of Morton Grove, Ill.; R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex.; Charles Critchell, of Cincinnati; George Burton and William Craig, both of Philadelphia; J. J. Hess, of Omaha; H. H. Bartsch, of Boston, and George Asmus, of Chicago. Several others were called on but contented themselves with a word of thanks.

Four varieties of sweet peas, Pink and White, President Wilson, Rose Pink and Orange Orchid, were exhibited by Poehlmann Bros. Co. Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., staged two large vases of his colored hybrid freesias.

The evening was well rounded out with a substantial luncheon and a plentiful supply of smokes.

The following were elected to membership in the Chicago Florists' Club: Howard R. Votaw, with Darling & Co., and Ernest Knecht, with John T. Muir, both of Chicago; Rudolph Ellsworth, of Downers Grove; Edward Meuret and Fred Schramm, both of Park Ridge; Milton Alexander and Charles Schwake, both of New York.

In his report, Chairman French, of the committee on transportation, recommended the Northwestern to Denver via Omaha and the Denver & Rio Grande to San Francisco via Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden, as the most desirable route for the S. A. F. delegation to the August convention.

Farewell Luncheon.

A luncheon in honor of the directors of the S. A. F. and the F. T. D. and the National Flower Show Committee, to which forty sat down at the Hotel La Salle, March 3, was the occasion of many speeches of felicitation on the open-handed way in which the Chicagoans entertained their guests.

The speakers were: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.; G. E. M. Stumpp, New York; Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass.; John Young, New York; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia, Pa.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; H. H. Bartsch, Boston, Mass.; George Burton, Philadelphia, Pa.; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; and J. C. Vaughan, C. L. Washburn, August Poehlmann, William L. Kroeschell, George Sykes, L. D. McNeff, W. W. Barnard, Ernst Wienhoeber, A. Henderson, all of Chicago.

C. L. Washburn took the opportunity to speak of the advisability of taking steps toward the formation of a credit adjustment bureau in connection with the various local organizations and also as a distinct department of the S. A. F. This seemed to strike a responsive chord in every breast and President Patrick Welch said that he would take the matter under careful consideration.

The tables were, of course, tastefully decorated with flowers. The boutonnieres were Belle Washburn carnations.

CONCRETE CONSTRUCTION

NASHVILLE GROWER'S BENCHES.

Lasting Construction Most Profitable.

We have read with interest the articles in The Review on concrete benches. Concrete benches built properly are expensive, but, for those who can afford them, they are the best investment. Three years ago we believed the time was at hand for much better houses, of more lasting materials, and today we maintain we were right. Had we invested the money in old style houses, no doubt we should today be suffering from lack of a market for our roses and carnations. Better houses and fewer houses is our watchword.

We have a good old place of about 50,000 feet, ordinarily built. At our new plant we have the most modern materials and construction that money would provide, and do not regret a cent we put into them. Our benches are concrete, made in wood molds.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Dahlias.

Probably some florists have certain varieties of dahlias of which they are anxious to increase their stock as much as possible. In such cases it is an excellent plan to start the tubers now and propagate as many soft-wood cuttings as possible. I am aware that some dahlia specialists may condemn this plan and would suggest division of the roots as the only safe plan, but experience shows that just as fine plants and flowers may be secured from soft-wood cuttings rooted in 3-inch pots as from divided plants. There is a danger that the shoots may be broken or eaten by cutworms, but a band of cardboard will protect from the worms at planting-out time. It is a fact that some root tubers sold as divisions never start at all, or have their shoots chewed off, so I consider one plan as safe as the other and far more plants may be had by the cutting method of propagation than by the divided tuber plan. Those who want dahlias for cutting should try more of the peony-flowered section, in addition to the decoratives, cactus and pompons.

Gladioli.

The early planted gladioli have now made considerable headway and we hope to have some to cut about the last of March. There is always a likelihood, however, of a proportion of these early started gladioli failing to flower, no matter how strongly they are growing. This is probably due to the corms having an insufficient rest. This trouble is not likely to occur with gladioli planted now, which will come in season during May and June and which will be particularly useful at Memorial day. Where any carnations have died out, gladioli can be planted, but it is not a good plan to dot them among the carnations as is often done; one crop only spoils the other. Any vacant bench or bed can be used for gladioli and a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees is suitable. For commercial purposes a limited number of sorts only can be grown at a profit. These include America, still the greatest seller of all; Augusta, Mrs. Francis King and the old scarlet Brenchleyensis. Pink Beauty was grown heavily last year, but proved to be a disappointing seller.

The small-flowered gladioli of the nanus type are most profitably grown in flats. Peach Blossom and The Bride are the earliest sorts, the first named being the most popular of this type. The earliest batch will soon show spikes and these are much welcomed at the retail stores. Blushing Bride also proves a popular seller. Do not force these gladioli hard; a temperature of 50 degrees at night is ample. Move a fresh batch in every eight or ten days, to keep up a succession of flowers. By keeping the flats in a cold pit, a succession of flowers may be had until July without any trouble.

Pansies, Etc., in Coldframes.

Although we have had a remarkably warm February, we are more than likely to get considerable cold weather yet in many sections before outdoor planting will be possible. It will be safe now, however, to remove the mulch of leaves or other material from pansies, violas, myosotis, daisies and other spring-flowering plants in coldframes. Give the plants a good soaking of water and air freely on every possible occasion. On cold nights it may still be necessary to cover with mats. For early flowering, place a number of plants in a cool greenhouse; a violet house is suitable. Pansies, daisies and forget-me-nots all sell splendidly in small handle baskets and those who can offer these with flowers on them, as soon as the ground has thawed out and planting is possible, will have no trouble in disposing of them.

Hotbeds.

In spring, when greenhouse space is at a premium and when we see plants above and below the benches wherever we make a call, it is a veritable boon to have a good supply of coldframes into which a foot or so of warm manure can be well tramped, thus giving a nice, genial, moist heat which proves ideal for many of our bedding plants. Seeds may be sown in flats in these hotbeds or they may be sown directly in the beds themselves, being later potted off into flats. Quantities of seedlings, once they are started in the greenhouses, can be transferred to hotbeds, where they will make a far stockier growth than in the greenhouse benches, and the places they vacate can be advantageously used for growing on Easter and Memorial day plants.

There are many bedding plants which, if potted off a little later and partly plunged in these hotbeds, will make a really surprising growth, and the finest geraniums I ever saw are grown in this way. Be sure you have tight, well glazed sashes. Protect with mats and board shutters on cold nights and water with care during dark, sunless spells of weather.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

DOUBLE CROP WITHOUT RADIUM.

In reference to the article, "Double Crop With Radium," in The Review of February 18, radium should not be credited with the production of a double crop. Mr. Gysemans' ministering care effected a good union of stock and scion, and this was the prime factor in securing results. A partial union would have sufficed to mature a few tomatoes and had the scion (tomato) died, the one or more potato branches, even if trimmed back, would have yielded a few potatoes.

Grafts of this nature, with equally successful results, were recorded as early as 1847, and a graft of potato on tomato yielded a harvest of tubers in the axils of the leaves. The success of these reciprocal grafts would seem to indicate the mutual and harmonious exchange and mingling of vital forces for a common purpose. If this is so, then there is nothing mystic in securing a few tomatoes and potatoes from a well knit and vigorous grafted plant. More magical is the rapid conversion of particles of potatoes and haulm into new potatoes, so frequently seen in the potato bin.

It is also probable that the prolonging of growing season of the stock (potato) was due to the persistent character of the scion (tomato), particularly as the short season of early potatoes has been induced by high culture, and a protracted growth in this instance may be simply a reversal.

The vitalizing influence of radium on various forms of vegetation has been amply demonstrated, and if Mr. Gysemans has saved the tomatoes and potatoes secured in this experiment their offspring may reveal some radium influence, and selection may prove valuable.

WASTED CIRCULARS.

I often wish I could have in cash all the money that is wasted on me in circulars that do no good either to me or to their senders. I sympathize with the senders, too, for I do some of the same kind of sending. The problem of avoiding unprofitable names in a mailing list is one that I guess has worried larger heads than mine. However, I think I have learned what is the best method for me to follow.

Of course, I have to have a price-list, but, no matter how many of them I mail, I have to do my magazine advertising just the same; therefore, I let the advertisements do most of the work. This I can readily do, as my sale list is simple. Price-lists I send to those answering the advertisements, to those sending orders from the advertisements, to customers of the preceding season, and to those whom for personal reasons I wish to remember. Any lists remaining can then be sent to customers of a more distant past, if desired, covering a proportion of the list of old customers every year. I do not believe, however, that a stale list is a profitable field for disposing of price-lists. In some lines likely it is, but I have not found it so in mine.

FLORISTS FIGHT FOR FIREMEN

OHIO GREENHOUSEMEN IN ARMS

Enforcement of law requiring licensed firemen for all boilers of thirty horsepower or more meets opposition from Ohio growers.

AFTER an unsuccessful combat with the state officials over the taxation of greenhouse crops, Ohio florists and vegetable growers are again in the thick of fray with state authorities, this time with the boiler inspection department of the Industrial Commission of Ohio, with the Toledo Florists' Club leading the forces.

The Cause of Conflict.

There is a law in the state compelling owners of steam plants to put them in charge of licensed operators if the boilers are 30-horsepower or larger. A horsepower means, according to state law, twelve square feet of heating surface. It is immaterial whether the operator develops this horsepower by the 100 pounds of pressure required or whether he runs his boiler at only one pound of pressure. It is held, apparently, that a 30-horsepower boiler run at low pressure is a dangerous thing and must be in the charge of a licensed operator, while a 29-horsepower boiler operated at the highest pressure possible can be run by Tom, Dick or Harry.

This law has been in force about fourteen years, but was not enforced in the case of greenhouse boilers until about three years ago. At that time Krueger Bros., Harry Heinl and E. A. Kuhnke, all of Toledo, were hauled up. Krueger Bros. and Harry Heinl sent their men to be examined and E. A. Kuhnke took the examination himself. These three firms thereby satisfied the authorities. It is not known that anybody but these three was molested to any extent until last fall.

Last summer, when dull times compelled a number of factories to close down, a great number of steam operators lost their jobs. Since that time almost every owner of steam-heated greenhouses in and near Toledo has been hauled on the carpet and told to put on licensed men. These owners had no trouble to get all the licensed men they wanted without advertising for them. Some of them hired licensed men; some of them fired them.

Greenhouse Heating Has Peculiarities.

It seems that a regular steam operator has not that bred-in-the-bone feeling about handling greenhouse heating which the average greenhouse worker has. While the licensed man is undoubtedly as good at the boilers as the average greenhouseman, or even better, he certainly has not the knowledge requisite to handle the greenhouse temperature and conditions. In one case the owners had to put their unlicensed man, whom they had broken in and trusted with nearly 1,000 horsepower for five years, with the licensed man whom they were compelled to hire when their own man could not pass the examination. This same man was given his license later, after passing a special examination.

It is charged the examinations are unnecessarily severe. Many questions, while certainly proper in case a man wants to make the firing of steam boilers his trade, are entirely out of place in the case of an owner of a small plant who must fire his own boiler. Nearly all greenhouse boilers in the neighborhood of Toledo are either horizontal tubular or marine type. Yet the owner of such a boiler must be able to tell all about the construction of water-tube or any other steam boiler, or he cannot get a license.

THE CAUSE OF TROUBLE FOR OHIO GREENHOUSEMEN

All boilers in the state of Ohio are inspected, or supposed to be inspected, at regular and irregular intervals either by the state or by certain reliable insurance companies. The insurance companies do not specify that their boilers shall be operated by licensed men. They rely on the reports sent in by their inspectors as to the care and condition of their boilers and would soon revoke their insurance if they thought they were taking any unreasonable risks. The state boiler inspectors are supposed to inspect any boiler not protected by insurance, for which inspection the owners have to pay a fee.

If those inspections are properly and conscientiously made, it is held that there is no danger whatever with the low pressure carried in greenhouse boilers. Some growers have fired their own boilers for many years and have built up a comfortable business, but not being acquainted with the construction of other types of boilers, they are not allowed to do their own firing. Their business is not large enough to warrant the employment of licensed men and trouble commences.

For Instance.

For instance, Mrs. Hecklinger, a widow, has three grown sons at home, who last summer built two greenhouses for growing vegetables. They of course had to put in a boiler and, with an eye to future development, they put in one above thirty horsepower. Those boys are of at least average intelligence and, like most American-born lads, have the knack of understanding mechanical devices and, of course, the use of steam, but since they have not had one year's actual firing experience they cannot even take the examination for a license, according to the state law. Their range will probably pay wages to two or three men, but if licensed firemen have to be engaged to care for the boilers, then the houses had better be shut down. One of the boys was arrested and fined.

Another case: The son of a local owner, being a good mechanic, overhauled both their boilers; he put new flues in them, and the state boiler inspector complimented him on the neat, workmanlike job. At the time this place was built, the young man set the boilers and installed all the piping in the place. He also had a hand in the firing at both the old and new places for about twenty years. Yet he could not pass the examination. By order of Otto Elzeman, the chief deputy in charge of steam operator examinations in Ohio, a special call was sent to the different growers to send their men to the Hotel Navarre for an oral examination February 5. A number of men went, men apparently able to handle the heating plants of their own businesses or of their employers'. It seems but one of them passed. One of them claims the examiner told him he had passed and would get his license, but the license never came; instead, a letter of regrets.

All through the state, the conditions are undoubtedly the same, and Ohio greenhousemen feel that it would be no more than fair to either change this law or have it interpreted in a sane and rational manner.

The Toledo Florists' Club and the Toledo Market Gardeners' Association would be glad to hear from other clubs and from individuals in regard to this matter, in order to take concerted action. The growers of Toledo and vicinity have already addressed the following resolutions to Wallace D. Yaple, chairman of the Industrial Commission, at Columbus:

We, the florists and commercial greenhouse owners and operators of Toledo and vicinity, in meeting assembled, respectfully present to your honorable body the following resolutions:

Whereas, there appears on the statute books of Ohio a section requiring all owners, users or operators of steam boilers of thirty horsepower or more to obtain a license to operate such boilers from the division of steam engineers of the Industrial Commission, and,

Whereas, a large percentage of greenhouse boilers are operated by the owners, who deem themselves responsible for the safety of life and property, and,

Whereas, although they are able to answer all reasonable questions pertaining to safety of operation of steam boilers, and are satisfactory to the boiler insurance companies and their inspectors, they are refused licenses because of inability to answer questions more or less technical (note affidavits of specific cases enclosed herewith), and,

Whereas, most of the greenhouse owners are ambitious young farmers who are striving to build up a business, and whose income from the modest ranges of glass erected as a beginning will not warrant the expense of a licensed operator day and night, and,

Whereas, they are thus confronted with the alternative of either abandoning their business entirely, or of employing high-priced boiler operators for whom they have no practical need whatever, and,

Whereas, the average licensed operator has not been trained to understand the condition peculiar to the greenhouse industry, while greenhouse men already have that practical knowledge, and,

Whereas, not only individual states, but the federal government is today rendering every assistance and encouragement within its power to the cause of agriculture in any and every form,

Resolved, that we earnestly protest against the interpretation of this section as applying to our business, and be it further,

Resolved, that we request of your honorable body that it take such action as will render impossible in the future, under the law, a repetition of the disgraceful scene enacted here recently, when one of these rising young agriculturists was arrested and hauled before the court by the district examiner, when it would be but simple justice were he treated as a public benefactor instead, for of these men it can be truthfully said that they make not only two, but 200 blades of grass grow where one grew before.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

C. N. Braunrich & Son, Wheeling, W. Va., large hardware dealers, have arranged to extend the seed business, which has been a profitable feature for many years.

Alfred Langhans, Wheeling, notes the absence of elaborate decorations, but believes the public taste for these has been temporarily restricted and will soon return to its former liberality.

The Imlay Co., Zanesville, O., claims big things from its seeds. A trucker drove up, just at the time of my visit, with a bunch of Hollow Crown parsnips. One was four feet long and solid. "Some parsnips," remarked J. M. Imlay. "From our seeds? Certainly." I noted some Rose Queen sweet peas which had been in crop since Thanksgiving and looked as if they might be good until Memorial day. They are considered the best in their class. The decided color is fetching. Schiller's strain of cineraria is a departure from the large flowers. Star-shaped, with beautiful colors, they are good sellers. Some building and rebuilding will take place this summer.

Will Underwood, of Underwood Bros., Columbus, spoke in the same strain. Their place has been entirely built around, and business is dependent upon the phone. A fine bush of that beautiful old rose, Gloire de Dijon, in bloom, carried us back to the romantic period when it, with its charming companion, Marechal Niel, flourished on the latticework around the old homestead.

Carl Jagsch, of the Franklin Park Floral Co., Columbus, O., reports a steady increase in business during the last four months, a pleasing item to note.

The Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, is fairly in the swim with early forcing orders. W. Sperry, manager of the wholesale department, predicts a most satisfactory season in all lines.

S. F. Stephens & Son is the new style of the old house of S. F. Stephens, Columbus. The young man has resigned a state position as chemist to associate himself with his father. The business is located near a cemetery and caters chiefly to cemetery trade, which is now quiescent, but, with the advent of spring, will be doubly active with the newest ideas.

The J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O., has been strengthened by the entry of J. M., Jr., into the business. With the veteran Carmichael on the job and vigorous as ever, the outlook was never brighter for all concerned.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society, February 25, was well attended, President Joseph Robinson in the chair. Rev. C. J. Canaran was elected to associate membership and Robert S. Renison, of Westbury, to active membership.

The exhibition tables were loaded down with splendid stock, there being seventeen non-competitive exhibits in addition to the numerous ones for the monthly prizes. The latter, three in number, were captured by James Duthie. The non-competitive exhibits were: From Joseph Robinson, azalea; J. Ingram, callas and cattleyas; A. Lahodny, Formosa lilies, annual larkspurs and a collection of tulips; F. Kyle, Primula obconica; J. Duthie, Primula malacoides Improved and cyclamen; H. Gibson, roses and cucumbers; Charles Mills, beans; J. Sorosick, roses. The judges were Messrs. Proctor, Humphreys and Beaton; they awarded cultural certificates or honorable mention in each case.

The premium list for the 1915 shows is ready and copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Andrew R. Kennedy, Westbury, L. I., N. Y.

FERTILIZER FOR LAWNS.

Will you please let me know what is the best fertilizer for lawns when run down? The soil was poor when the grass was sown, about ten years ago. Every year since then we have covered it over with mushroom manure in February; that is, after the manure had raised a crop of mushrooms. About April 1 we cleaned it off, as the strength had gone.

K. H.—Pa.

If the soil was poorly prepared originally, I doubt if any system of top-dressing or feeding will ever make your lawns really satisfactory. I would suggest digging up and reseeding, doing this work in the fall—August or early September—rather than in the spring. I doubt whether the grass would get any great amount of plant food from the spent mushroom manure. It would be more valuable below than above the sod.

To improve your lawns somewhat, I would apply a bone-ash fertilizer, consisting of fine bone and unleached wood ashes. It is well to mix these first with five or six times their bulk of finely screened loam, later scratching the lawn over and giving it a good rolling. Before rolling, also scratch in some lawn seed to cover the bare spots.

Pulverized sheep manure makes a safe and good lawn fertilizer, as does cattle manure similarly dried. Barnyard manure should not be used; it is unsightly, unsanitary and brings a host of weed seeds. Furthermore, the clods of manure, if they lie long on the lawn, will smother out some of the grass. Various forms of humus have been boomed considerably in the last few years. This, in most cases, is merely swamp muck dried, pulverized and bagged up. It retails for about $12 per ton. Some have found it beneficial, but personally I cannot recommend its use, as it has failed to give me any satisfactory results after careful trials.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Boston, Mass.—Frank Howard, who for a number of years has conducted the store known as Howard's Flower Shop, at 18 Boylston street, Cambridge, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities are scheduled at $5,665, and his assets at $250.

Dayton, O.—Elizabeth M. Phebus has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court at Cincinnati, scheduling liabilities at $4,609.56, and assets at $2,360, of which $500 is claimed exempt. Her assets include real estate valued at $2,000, stock in trade, $200, and personal property, $160. The larger unsecured creditors are Jos. C. Krebs, of Dayton, $1,535; D. Rusconi, of Cincinnati, $375; Samuel Bowman, of Greenville, $200, and David Jackson, of Dayton, $200.

Houston, Tex.—Application for the appointment of a receiver of the Henk Dirken Floral & Nursery Co. was field by J. C. Hutcheson in the Sixty-first District court, February 23. The petition alleges that $526.71 is due on a lease entered into August 26, 1913, for the entire block 1, Main street addition, and that instalments of rent have not been paid.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The sixteenth annual exhibition will be held March 18 to 21, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The schedule committee, Messrs. Louis J. Reuter, Alexander Montgomery and Thomas Roland, has done good work in fixing prizes. The manager of the Rose Society's exhibits is Eber Holmes, of Montrose, Mass. The annual membership dues are being paid well. There is a free ticket to all members. The election of officers will be an important event, also deciding where the show shall go next year. Philadelphia has spoken for it.

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

Ardmore, Okla.—The Shuman Floral Co., of which Gilbert E. Shuman is the proprietor, will build another house, 43x100 feet, and do a wholesale business.

OBITUARY

W. T. Barnes.

W. T. Barnes, of Lapel, Ind., died suddenly at his home, February 26. The immediate cause of his death was heart failure, following a mild attack of pleurisy. He was born in North Carolina and removed to Indiana when a child. In 1879 he was married to Miss Maggie Brattle, of Fishersburg, Ind. In 1892 he erected a home at Lapel, put up some glass and engaged in floriculture, in which he did a flourishing and profitable business. His place was noted for its neatness and method.

Mr. Barnes was a man of sterling integrity, whose word was as good as a bond. He was of a genial, happy disposition, had a kind word at all times for every acquaintance and never was morose or disagreeable. He endeared himself to all who were fortunate enough to know him, and his presence was always welcome. He was of Quaker extraction and lived his belief, having all the lovable traits of that sect. Besides his wife, he is survived by Walter and Vernie Barnes, of Lapel, and Orange Barnes, of Spokane, Wash.

J. A. E. H.

S. Y. Haines.

S. Y. Haines, of Rockford, Ill., died suddenly from myocarditis, Saturday morning, February 27, at the age of 64 years. He was at his desk as usual up to the previous evening. He was born in Tennessee. He had been prominent in the seed trade for the last forty years, having held responsible positions with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Northrup-Braslan-Goodwin Co., Vaughan's Seed Store and L. L. May & Co., and he was the founder of the Miss Lippincott business, at Hudson, Wis. For nearly seven years he had been connected with the advertising department of H. W. Buckbee, at the Rockford Seed Farms. Mr. Haines leaves a daughter, Ruth, 9 years old; Mrs. Haines died nearly two years ago. The remains were taken, in the care of H. W. Buckbee, Ruth Haines and other relatives and friends, to Rives Junction, Mich., where the funeral took place March 2 and the body was interred beside that of Mrs. Haines.

Philip Emmerich.

Philip Emmerich, 72 years of age, a retired florist, died February 23 at his home at College Point, N. Y. He was born in Germany, but had lived in College Point the greater part of his life.

James Conlin.

James Conlin, retired florist, 70 years of age, died March 1 at his home in Brooklyn as the result of a complication of diseases. Mr. Conlin was a well known and highly respected florist and gardener in Brooklyn for nearly half a century. He leaves a wife, son and five daughters. James Conlin, whose flower store is at 1 Smith street, Brooklyn, is a nephew. Interment, March 3, was at Holy Cross cemetery.

Charles E. Bessery.

Horticulture met a great loss in the death of Dr. Charles E. Bessery, of the Nebraska State University, at the age of 70. He had been professor of botany for forty years. He was dean of the faculty and for a time was acting chancellor. He was a student of Asa Grey, and since the latter's death was probably the leading botanist of America. He not only taught, but published several works on the subject. He always attended state society meetings, aiding greatly by his advice and experience.

William Roe.

The funeral of William Roe, an old-time florist of Lockport, N. Y., took place February 24, at the family home, 188 Walnut street. Services were in charge of Charles P. Sprout post 76, G. A. R., of which he was a member. The remains were taken to Buffalo the following day for cremation.

Mr. Roe was 85 years old. He was a native of England, received his education in the schools there and came to America when 25 years of age, locating in Lockport, where he resided up to the time of his death. He leaves a widow.

Charles R. Geiger.

Charles R. Geiger, well known in Cromwell, Conn., where he was at one time in the employ of A. N. Pierson, Inc., died February 17, at the Greenfield, Mass., hospital, of concussion of the brain. While throwing empty crates out of a doorway he lost his balance and fell a distance of about fifteen feet, striking on his head. He never regained consciousness after the accident. Mr. Geiger was married last October to Miss Jane Lamb, of Cromwell. Besides his wife he is survived by his mother, one brother and five sisters, all of Philadelphia.

Ypsilanti, Mich.—A. Trotter & Son have purchased the greenhouses of John G. Worden.

Shreveport, La.—James W. Begbie recently has moved to a new store at 614 Market street, which he is fitting up in attractive style.

Carthage, Mo.—A slight loss from broken glass was the result of a miniature whirlwind that hit a corner of the greenhouses of Stephen Hyde February 22.

La Junta, Colo.—The building occupied by the Valley Floral Co. and the large residence on the lots just south of the establishment have been purchased by Joseph Posz.

Washington, D. C.—A company to conduct a system of destroying by electricity, in the soil and on plants, insects harmful to plant life, has been incorporated for $300,000. Its name is the American Electro-Cide Co., and its officers are: President, G. Edward Woodward; secretary, M. W. Sparks; treasurer, G. L. Peckham; manager, James M. Chadsey.

St. Paul, Minn.—The St. Paul Florists' Club will hold a spring flower show March 19 and 20, the first ever held by the organization. Exhibits from other cities will be invited and admission to the public will be free. The show committee consists of Andrew Lauritzen, O. J. Olson, Max Kaiser, Gust. Colberg, C. R. Fuhlbruegge and Chris. Hansen.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Miss Lucy Doussard, who recently purchased the stock from the Paul Slack Floral Co., has arranged with her landlord, at 309½ Collinsville avenue, to enlarge her present location, put in a new store front and otherwise improve the building. Business is exceedingly good, Miss Doussard states, and the indications are that it will improve greatly the coming season.

Deerfield, Mass.—Paul R. Burtt is a candidate for the office of selectman.

Jamaica Plain, Mass.—A flower store has been opened at 12 Birch street, by B. J. Wall & Son.

Steubenville, O.—G. L. Huscroft is moving to the store recently vacated by the Ohio Valley Rubber Co. A new front and other improvements will be installed.

Denver, Colo.—A. E. Mauff, president and manager of the Mauff Floral Co., remarks that inasmuch as business is good, he expects to continue at least long enough to celebrate, in 1917, the thirty-fifth anniversary of the firm's entrance into the flower business, and at the same old stand. Mr. Mauff has been a subscriber to The Review from its first issue.

Houston, Tex.—Finding that the city gained in looks through last year's contest, the Houston Florists' Club and the Post have decided to make the pretty yards competition an annual affair. Two prizes, one awarded in June and one in November, are offered in various classes, in which the yards are grouped according to their size and pretentiousness.

Union Grove, Wis.—At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Union Grove & Yorkville Greenhouse Co. the directors were authorized to borrow the sum of $12,000 to pay the remainder of the company's indebtedness on outstanding contracts. The officers' reports showed that since the organization of the company $38,829.65, including the bond issue of $20,000, had been received and all, with the exception of $35.31, had been expended. The present value of the establishment is placed at $53,000. The average annual rental paid by Guy French and Richard Salm, whose lease began March 1, will be $6,400 for at least three years.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

MANY a florist has discovered that driving one's business too hard eventually means that the business will drive the driver. Enough is enough in nearly everything.

HUMAN nature is like water in that it can not rise above its source—and it is difficult for a florist to make progress on the upward path with last season's bills still unpaid.

IT is only the hasty man who judges a new rose in its first year. Some roses can prove, in that time, to be utter failures, but others only show they have been overpropagated.

THE preliminary plant schedule for the National Flower Show to be held in Philadelphia March 25 to April 2, 1916, is ready. Copies may be had by addressing John Young, secretary, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

ENGLISH growers speak highly of the new chrysanthemum, W. Rigby. It is a glistening canary-yellow sport from Mrs. Gilbert Drabble and needs the same treatment, which should not be too generous, good hard wood being essential to secure well-developed flowers.

THE editor's desk seldom has been without flowers since the parcel post made it easily possible for subscribers to send samples of their stock, but seldom has it been graced with finer carnations than those that came from the Charlotte Cut Flower Co., Charlotte, N. C. They were in remarkably good shape considering their long journey.

LADIES' S. A. F.

Wishing to get the opinion of the members, Mrs. C. H. Maynard, secretary of the Ladies' S. A. F., sent out a reply post card.

To the question, "Are you planning to go to California in 1915?" twenty-seven responded, "Yes."

To the question, "Shall we use society money for educational purposes for our members instead of using it for the annual reception?" eighty-nine checked "Educational" and thirty-six checked "Reception."

Only a part of the membership responded.

BOGUS CHECKS AT TOLEDO.

In the next edition of The Review it might be well to mention that two men were caught in the act of passing bogus checks on the florists of Toledo. The men were pretending to be ordering flowers for an Order of Railway Conductors, and offered checks to the amount of $30 after making a purchase of $10. The men were apprehended while attempting to cash the checks in our store, and the police department was immediately notified. I have taken the matter up with the Chicago Florists' Club and the police department of that city, to ascertain whether or not these are the men who worked Chicago several months previous to their appearance in Toledo. One man is about six feet tall, and thin, with a prominent set of ears and a high, thin nose. The other is about five feet six inches tall, rather heavy set, with eyes sunken in head, and appears to be about forty years of age. Any information in regard to these characters can be sent to me and I will take it up with the detective bureau of this city for the betterment of the florists' trade.

Geo. B. Schramm,
Sec'y Toledo Florists' Club.

THE INTERNATIONAL CHORUS.

A few months ago an order came to The Review from the headquarters of international peace, The Hague, Holland. It called for the publication of a 2-inch display advertisement—not large enough to attract the attention of any except thorough readers. January 14 the advertiser was notified of the completion of his order. Here is the answer:

Referring to your letter of January 14, we have pleasure in stating that we find advertising in The Review pays well; herewith international postal order for $4 for two more insertions of the advertisement.—Th. J. Dinn, Clingendaal Nursery, The Hague, Holland, February 9, 1915.

And still there are florists who think that, because it is not printed in a seashore town, The Review is not a medium for them!

It is where and how a paper is read, not where it is printed, that determines value as an advertising medium.

PLUMBAGO CAPENSIS FOLIAGE.

I am sending a twig of Plumbago Capensis and would like to know what is on the back of the leaf. I have sprayed with all kinds of insecticides, but they seem to have no effect on it.

W. W.

The foliage and stem were quite rotten when received, and I could not possibly tell what your trouble is. The foliage of P. Capensis is sometimes attacked by a small leaf miner similar to the one attacking marguerite foliage. This eats the inner tissues of the leave and is hard to control. Hand picking and spraying with a nicotine extract are the best remedies. Plumbago Capensis foliage also occasionally suffers from a fungoid affection, which causes the leaves to have a dried-up and blighted appearance. For this, try spraying with Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. Soap sprays and poisons would be of no avail in fighting this.

C. W.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Floralia Flower Store, Nantucket, Mass.
Michler Bros. Co., Lexington, Ky.
Kemper, W. F., Waseca, Minn.
Foster, R. A., St. Louis, Mo.
Orme, J. H., Spokane, Wash.
Neundorfer, O. J., Albany, Ga.
Mauff Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

LOOK WHERE LOOKING'S GOOD.

The first place to look for * * * trade is where the biggest buying capacity is.—Editorial in the Saturday Evening Post.

And in this big, round world today there is no place that has all-around buying capacity to compare with the middle west. Florists of the grain states, when they visit the office of The Review, say their home towns never were more prosperous than now. Mail-order houses say middle-western orders are increasing, while other sections are behind last year. There's a hint in it for wholesale florists.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

During the early part of last week there was a daily recession in the volume of business and the value of stock, but in the latter part of the week the ground lost was more than recovered. Everything cleaned up in good shape and it was not possible to fill all orders offered; those who buy quantity at a price could not be taken care of except with bulbous stock.

The present week opens with moderate supplies of stock, a fairly strong demand and prices as good or better than they usually are at the beginning of March. The prices of bulbous stock are about on the usual levels, but roses are realizing slightly better prices than ordinarily is the case at this date and carnations are doing much better than a year ago this month. Indeed, carnations at the moment are as good property as anything on the list. With most of the wholesalers February gave an excellent account of itself, gross sales exceeding those of the month in 1914.

There has been little change in the situation as regards Beauties. Little of the stock is of high grade and the low prices at which the crippled flowers are sold operates to hold down the price of the best. Short roses have fallen off in price, because of a considerable increase in the supply and because of the competition of bulbous stock. There also has been some decrease in the value of the special long roses, but the decline in the best stock has not been so great as on the short stems, which may be had at half the prices of a month ago. Curiously, Richmond is about as scarce as anything on the market. Usually there is little demand for red at this time of year. Yellow is more abundant than heretofore, but Mrs. Ward is selling well for corsage work. Pink and white are equal to requirements.

The supply of carnations appears to have decreased rather than otherwise, but prices are a shade easier, probably because there is so much bulbous stock. The city stores now are featuring hyacinths and tulips in pots and boxes, which naturally subtracts something from the demand for the cut flowers. There is no scarcity of anything in this line; it might almost be said there is an oversupply of everything.

Sweet peas are much more plentiful than at any time heretofore this season, but they are selling well. The Spencers are wanted; the growers who are sending in the old grandiflora type are meeting an unresponsive market. There are all the violets that can be sold, even at low prices. Valley is equal to all requirements. Easter lilies are abundant.

The green goods situation is without change, except that the price of ferns is being marked up as is usual March 1.

The E. C. Amling Co. announces that it has made a lease for permanent quarters in the Lemoyne block, corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street. The papers were signed March 2, but no information is given out except that the lease covers approximately 5,000 square feet of space, partly on the street floor on Wabash avenue, south of the main entrance to the building, and partly in the basement beneath, where an ice machine and cold storage facilities will be installed. It is planned to have the new equipment in place by March 20, in order that the Easter business may be handled in the new quarters.

The A. L. Randall Co., which last week leased the second floor of the same building, also is planning to get into the new quarters March 20. A contract was let March 1 for an icebox approximately 24x28, to be built by the United Cork Companies, to be cooled by a Kroeschell ice machine. The box will be of a type new to the market. It will be made of cork with a concrete veneer inside and out, Pyfer's New Firm.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. March 1 took over the city wholesale store of the Chicago Carnation Co., which last week was announced as retiring from business, the greenhouses at Joliet having been leased to the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. Application has been made to the secretary of state for permission to incorporate Pyfer & Co. The plans have been so far matured that it is known that H. E. Philpott will be president of the corporation. A. T. Pyfer will be treasurer and manager.

Miss Nettie Parker, who for some years has had charge of the books, will be secretary. Other stockholders will be V. Bezdek, of Gross Point, and Peter Olsem, of Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette.

Mr. Pyfer has been with the Chicago Carnation Co. for fourteen years, for nearly nine years as manager, and will carry on the business for the new concern along the same lines as for the old one, and without any interruption. It is stated that the arrangements already made insure a larger supply of flowers than has heretofore been handled. The Thompson concern sells its stock direct from the greenhouses, except in times of surplus.

Coöperative Buyers Incorporate.

The proper state official has granted a license for the incorporation of the Retail Florists' Co., as forecasted in The Review for February 25. It is the coöperative buying section of the Retail Florists' Association, George Stollery, president, and H. H. Wilkerson, secretary and manager. The incorporators are Ernest C. Glenny, W. B. Braun and Thomas O. Gibbs, the former an attorney at 76 East Monroe street and understood to be a brother-in-law of Mr. Wilkerson. The authorized capital is $5,000. It was agreed at the meeting of the association February 15 that holdings should be limited to one share and twenty-eight members present each subscribed for $100 of the stock. The plan is to increase the authorized capital as fast as necessary to accommodate the members who wish to join the coöperative buying branch.

French & Salm.

After seventeen years in the employ of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Guy W. French started in business for himself March 1. With him as his partner went Richard Salm who, except for an intermission, has been with Poehlmann Bros. Co. for twenty years. It was like severing home ties. The firm of French & Salm has leased the new plant of the Yorkville & Union Grove Greenhouse Co., Union Grove, Wis., three houses 57½x350. The benches already are partly filled with soil and 33,000 Mrs. Russell rose plants, grafted at the Poehlmann establishment, are to be planted soon. It is understood the cut will be sold by the E. C. Amling Co. Messrs. French and Salm have this week received many expressions of hope for their excellent success.

ditional plants of Mrs. Russell rose this year. To make room for these, it has cut out sweet peas and mums altogether. In the future all of the time and space will be devoted to roses. This season there were twenty-two houses of Beauties on the place.

Sweet peas are Henry Wehrman's spring specialty and the daily pick is increasing rapidly. Anita Wehrman and Selma Swenson are the two varieties that attract the most attention.

Another of the many growers who has concluded that Beauties are too much of a gamble is Ernst C. Amling. He is clearing his benches of them and planting Ophelia in their place. He already has one house of this popular rose and expects to put in 8,500 more plants as soon as he can make room for them.

Plants are the specialty with Felch Bros., who have a nice wholesale mail-order trade.

W. H. Amling is thinking of extending his three shorter houses to make more room for sweet peas and freesias, with which he has had remarkable success.

The A. T. Hey Floral Co. is gradually working out of roses. It is the intention of Mr. Hey to specialize in ferns and orchids. One more house of Roosevelt ferns has been added this spring, as well as several benches of Cattleya labiata.

William Collatz, manager of the Albert F. Amling Co. greenhouses, was called hurriedly to Helvey, Neb., February 25, by the death of a relative.

Various Notes.

C. A. Samuelson spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. C. H. Fallstrom, at Dixon, Ill. Mr. Samuelson plans to get away March 8 for a trip to Idaho, where he has ninety acres of apple orchard on the Snake river, returning in time for the Easter rush.

The morning of March 2 saw the opening of another up-to-date flower store in the loop. Mirrors, burnished brass and dazzling white fixtures and woodwork make a most attractive setting for the excellent display of flowers in William Lubliner's new store at 36 South Wabash avenue. The window was filled with tastefully arranged Mrs. Russell, Sunburst and Ophelia roses, Easter lilies, lilies of the valley and a profusion of well selected Dutch stock. The roomy display refrigerator and all the fixtures were furnished by Jacob Lederer, Inc. Walter W. Madden is Mr. Lubliner's chief assistant.

This spring will see 10,000 plants of Ophelia rose added to the 2,500 already on the benches of F. J. Benthey at New Castle, Ind.

The Fleischman Floral Co. last month completed its fifteenth year in business. No manager has as yet been appointed to succeed George Wienhoeber, resigned. Richard Ralston is buyer and Mr. Ashton in charge of the floor.

At the store of Sikyta & Sindelar, 2112 South Fortieth avenue, Mrs. Millie Sikyta has been kept busy in the absence of her partner, Miss Georgie Sindelar, who has been suffering from blood poisoning in her arm for over three weeks. Funeral work has been particularly pressing.

Fred C. Meyer and Eugene R. Dramm, who left the employ of the Wendland & Keimel Co. a year ago to establish a rose growing business of their own at Elmhurst, have incorpo-

A. H. Budlong, of the J. A. Budlong greenhouses, says that many growers are of the opinion that one cannot grow as successfully in an old greenhouse as one can in a new; but his opinion is that the trouble more generally lies with the grower than with the greenhouse. The grower is getting into a rut. What is needed, he says, is more young blood in the growing end of the business.

At the Peter Reinberg establishment the propagators are working up all the wood of Ophelia and none of the young stock is to be sold. The plan is to bench at least 20,000 Ophelia for next season. The space will be obtained, according to Emil Reichling, by cutting down on Mrs. Ward and Killarney.

H. C. Mulder has as his business as well as life partner Saphrona Dye, whose name appears as one of the proprietors of the University Florists, 1121 East Fifty-fifth street. Mrs. Mulder is a capable store woman, but Mr. Mulder is essentially a greenhouse man and hopes some day to get back to the work under glass.

The excavation for the new 16-story Garland building, at the northeast corner of North Wabash avenue and East Washington street, caused such a marked settling to the south on the part of several of the smaller buildings north of it that they were condemned by the city. This included the building at 131 North Wabash avenue, the home of Bassett & Washburn. As the result of numerous scaffolds and stagings erected in their quarters in the work of bracing the walls, they are inconvenienced not a little. The Bassett & Washburn lease runs to May 1, 1916.

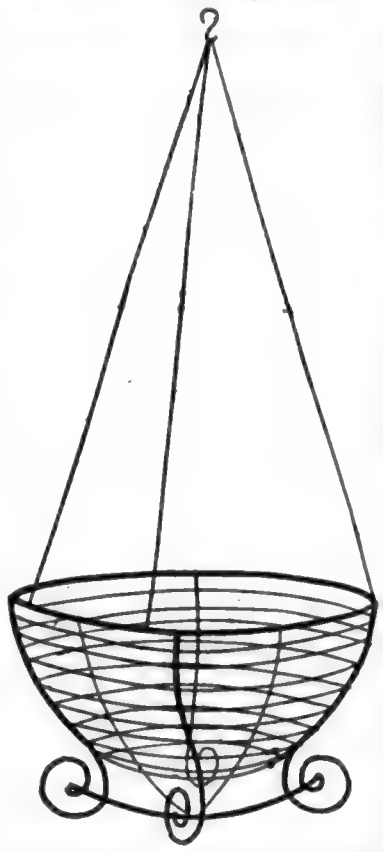
ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was fairly good as to supply and demand, though the dark weather caused a shortage in some lines. The wholesalers say they are well satisfied with trade since Lent set in. Prices last week stiffened a little on fancy stock and the higher prices bid fair to continue this week unless stock becomes more plentiful. The retailers say they have not felt the usual Lenten depression to any great extent. Some roses of extra good quality were received last week, especially in the Killarney varieties, which continue to form the bulk of the rose supply in this market. Carnations, too, are of excellent quality and the demand is brisk. Light colors lead in demand. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily and is holding up well in price. Sweet peas are plentiful and are among the leaders in demand. Violets drag somewhat, as the supply is large. In greens the market is as usual.



The retailers report a large demand for plants, such as tulips, Dutch hyacinths and cyclamens, of which there is a large supply.

BASKETS for EASTER

OUR newest productions in special baskets for cut flowers, bulbous plants and growing flowers to be used Easter day have, in a great measure, created a demand for these favors among the flower buying public. The care with which Raedlein baskets are manufactured, and the attention given to the smallest detail, have made them popular with the retailer and you will do well to send your order now in anticipation of a certain demand.

The Raedlein factories in Ebersdorf and Weidhausen, Germany, and also in Chicago, have set a high mark in the art of basket making. You will find Raedlein styles to be radical styles. We lead in the manufacture of florists' baskets, and in buying from us you buy absolutely at factory prices. Our full line is on display at our show rooms, and you are invited to pay us a visit. This will not obligate you to buy, but will give you an opportunity to become acquainted with us.

TO REACH OUR STORE:—Take a Chicago Avenue, Division Street, Milwaukee Avenue or Armitage Avenue car at State and Randolph Streets and get off at Huron Street. The cars stop right in front of our store.

The Bourdet Floral Co., Sanders, Geo. B. Windler, William Schray & Sons, Charles Beyer and John Held have started active preparations for their Easter blooming stock. These firms supply most of the west end florists with holiday wants in this line.

Joe A. Ent, who ran the establishment known as the Union Floral Co., on Union avenue, has closed his place and left town. Mr. Ent has been on the sick list for some time.

Baseball fans among the local florists who congregate in the wholesale district each morning have started discussing the merits of our two baseball teams. Admirers of both teams are about equal in number, so from now on war talk will be eliminated.

The blooming plant display at Waldbart's, on Grand avenue, last week was quite attractive. The big orange tree, in full bloom and bearing fruit, was a special attraction, as also were the fine tulips in various colors.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Although the Lenten season is here and there is a decided suggestion of spring in the air, business is holding up nicely. The warmer weather has increased production considerably, and the demand has also shown some improvement. There is still considerable social activity and this always calls for flowers. Roses are slightly lower in price, except Beauties, which are in somewhat shorter supply. Carnations were somewhat scarce last week, although there was more sunshine than usual at this time of year. Violets are cheap and there is not the demand for them that there should be. Sweet peas are fine and always sell well. Yellow marguerites were seen in the downtown stores, and these equal the carnations in quality and value. So far there has been no glut in bulbous stock and this is an agreeable surprise to florists. Snapdragons and valley are scarce. Potted plants are fine and abundant, and sell well. Tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, cinerarias and azaleas are among the leaders in this line.

Various Notes.

Florists are cautioned against the habit of changing checks for unknown customers, as there has been more of the bogus check noise in this city. Two men ordering flowers for an Order of Railway Conductors, and offering checks to the amount of $30, worked this town pretty well. They appeared at several stores, ordered flowers to the amount of $10, directed that they be delivered to a certain address and presented their checks. In one instance they almost received the change, but for the quick precaution of the salesman. The secretary of the Florists' Club notified all florists to be on the lookout. The police department also was notified and the men were arrested about one hour after their appearance.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week commencing February 25 opened with a surplus of unsold flowers, due chiefly to the increased production of a couple of warm days. This surplus was pretty well carried off by the end of the week, but it required much effort and price inducement. The principal sufferer was the sweet pea; the pea vines must have been just in shape to respond to the warm sunshine with bounteous crops. The pick was so heavy that even price concessions failed to find buyers for them all at once. Perhaps "at once" seems a sudden way of putting it, but that exactly describes the way the peas came down on the market. Then there were violets, double and single, as good as you could possibly ask, but so many that nothing seemed possible when it came to disposing of them all. Bulbous flowers always suffer badly in times of overproduction. Daffodils were relieved a bit by the arrival of Emperor in such fine form that it brought twice as much as Golden Spur. Couronne d'Or leads the tulips in favor, partly because of its rich color and partly because it is less grown, the margin being smaller. Freesia is badly hit, despite fine quality.

To return to the staple flowers, roses and carnations, the market is in better shape. The shorts have suffered most in roses. The whole carnation list dropped about twenty-five per cent at the beginning of the current week, February 25 to March 3, and then strengthened, not advanced, under decreased receipts. The general volume of business is fairly satisfactory. February, thanks to an improved St. Valentine's day demand, makes a respectable showing when compared with February of 1914, while the early days of March compare quite favorably with those of a year ago, despite the overproduction, because then we had a blizzard, when everybody's stock was reduced and delayed and business was knocked to smithereens.

Visitors and Club Meeting.

The Lancaster florists and their friends had a great day March 2, in Philadelphia and vicinity. The party consisted of Charles B. Herr, E. S. Loeffler, B. Frank Barr, L. H. Duelman, Charles N. Weaver, John R. Shreiner, B. J. Passmore, Isaac Passmore, Edward C. Marshall, William Swayne, I. H. Landis, Albert M. Herr, Frank L. Kohr, H. B. Weaver, J. Rudolph Hess, J. Ralph E. Hess, A. H. Lanser, Elmer Weaver, J. Brown, M. J. Brinton, R. W. Denlinger, H. K. Rohrer. They were met by Samuel S. Pennock at Strafford, where they visited Edward A. Stroud's carnation range, going thence to the Reading terminal, where Eugene Bernheimer and William J. Muth joined them on their way to North Wales, where the Florex Gardens and dinner were enjoyed. The way to Hatboro was made by every known means of locomotion, the Great Sam leading the walkers. At Hatboro the party discovered D. T. Connor and admired Gorgeous at the establishment of Henry M. Weiss & Sons. Oak Lane followed, where the party saw the place of J. Stephenson and its roses.

The entire party of Lancaster visitors swelled the carnation meeting of the Florists' Club in the evening. It was a large audience that assembled to hear Edmond A. Harvey's excellent paper on the divine flower. Every seat was taken. J. Otto Thilow offered a bowling trophy on behalf of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., for which everyone will have a chance. The exhibits were: Florex Gardens, North Wales, Beacon, Ruth, Enchantress, White Enchantress, and a pink seedling; B. F. Dewitt, Croydon, white seedling No. 13; A. Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., Grace and Alice Coombs; Edward Reid, choice varieties from stock; J. M. Palmer, Mrs. C. W. Ward; Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., Alice; C. Akehurst, White Marsh, Md., Mrs. C. E. Akehurst; Edward Winkler, Wakefield, Mass., Morning Glow; Hugh B. Barkley, Darwin tulips; Victor Groshens, Roslyn, new pink rose of John Cook's; Charles F. Edgar, suction vases, approved by M. J. Callahan.

Lake Superior.

Quite a while ago an advertisement appeared in The Review that made an impression. It contained an outline, in faithful, atlas style, of the first of our five great lakes, described by the words Lake Superior, and went on to say that these "Lake Superior Violet Ties" were the nicest you can get, or words to that effect, adding that they were to be had from William B. Lake, who chanced, happily, to be a Philadelphian. It struck me that William B. Lake must be a bright man, so it was with a special interest that I accepted an invitation to visit his factory and office at 2535-37 North Thirty-fourth street. Mr. Lake was out of town, but his representative courteously showed me over the place. The specialties today are pot covers and ties, with other accessories. The pot covers are adjustable; no tying on is necessary. What pleased me particularly about those covers was their simplicity and the preference given to various shades of green. The ties are dainty little creations in all flower colors, used chiefly for orchids, violets and sweet peas, although there are ties for Sunburst, Killarney and the other leading roses.

A. New Commission House.

Stuart H. Miller opened his wholesale cut flower house auspiciously March 1. It is well appointed, light, perhaps I should more truly say white, and attractive in appearance. It may be that I can best convey to you an idea of Mr. Miller's new place of business by saying that in effect it resembles a Baltimore retail flower store and in shape and appointments a New York wholesale commission house. The other thing you will want to know is whether Mr. Miller has the goods. To this query I can truly say that a friend assured me that on Monday morning, March 1, he tried every wholesale house for a hurry-up order for 150 Richmond roses, which happened to be scarce that morning. Where do you think he got them? Why, from Stuart H. Miller.

Various Notes.

Through an error, which I regret, the former address of Joseph G. Neidinger was given in this paper last month, instead of that of his present handsome new building at 1309-11 North Second street.

The Johnson Seed Co. reports activity in incubators and brooders.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. are tremendously busy with their seed orders. Sweet peas are an important factor.

Robert A. Craig reports the first two months of the present year as showing increased plant activity, in happy contrast to the dullness of the closing months of last year. Mr. Craig says his Easter stock is in most promising condition at both places.

George Burton left for Chicago February 27. He was followed next day by Adolph Farenwald and William P. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

February went out "like a lion," with frost and bitter winds, after a week of spring. The 80-year-young head of J. M. Thorburn & Co. reminded me February 27 of the great blizzard of March, 1888, and said, "Plenty of time yet for cold weather." But he anticipates an early spring.

Business braced up generally at the end of last week, after a characteristic week of Lent, during most of which dullness prevailed. The holiday February 22 gave the week a bad start, from which it was slow in recovering.

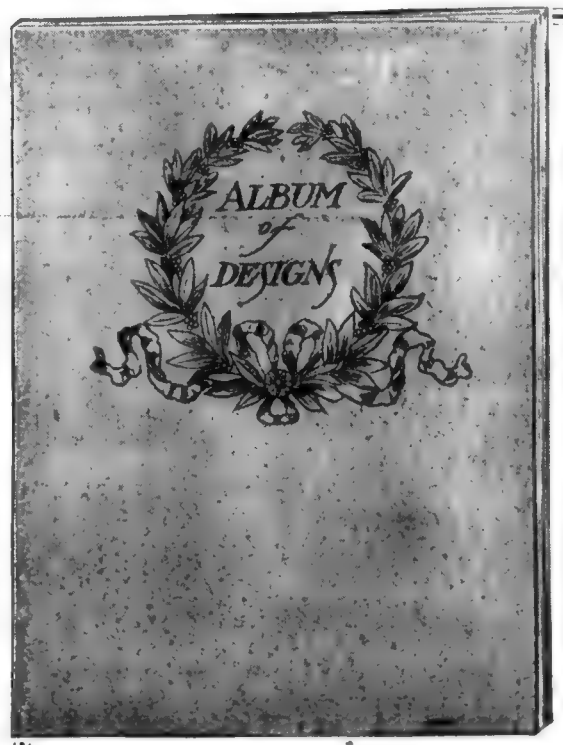
American Beauties are down to $25 and $30 per hundred for the selected, and have carried all varieties of roses with them. Hadley and a few others of the novelties hold well, but of the lower grades and older varieties the break has been, in quantities, as low as $20 per thousand.

Carnations are in large supply, and prices are falling. But few sold at over $2 per hundred, except the novelties, and $10 per thousand was the quotation for the commoner stock, and even less, to the big buyers.

Lilies are lower, few selling above $6 per hundred, and in large lots are offered at $5 and less. Valley seldom sells above $2.50 per hundred for the selects. Gardenias do not vary from last week's quotations. All kinds of bulbous stock are still in great profusion, and prices are at rock-bottom. Southern daffodils are expected shortly.

Of spring flowers there is no end. Acacia pubescens, lilac, pansies, stocks, tulips, sweet peas—of these there are enough and to spare. Violets seldom sell above 25 cents per hundred, and orchids seldom over 25 cents each; the latter are gradually decreasing in shipments.

Bowling.



The following are the scores made by the bowlers February 25:

Player.	1st	2d
P. Jacobson	159	167
J. Miesem	169	178
H. C. Riedel	159	179

Secretary John Young was in Chicago this week, attending S. A. F. meetings.

The officers of the Greater New York Florists' Association, Brooklyn, for the ensuing year are: President, Hugo H. Jahn; vice-president, George I. Laird; treasurer, Robert G. Wilson; secretary, William A. Phillips; directors in addition to the foregoing, John V. Phillips, Charles Weber and F. G. Van Mater. George W. Crawbuck is manager.

The Greek American Florists' Association's eighth annual ball, at Terrace Gardens, February 25, was a tremendous success, as usual. The decorations, by Malandre Bros., were beautiful and elaborate, the entertainment first-class. The grand march at midnight was followed by dancing until 5 a. m. All branches of the trade were represented in the big crowd. The officers of the society are: President, George Cotsonas; vice-president, D. J. Pappas; secretary, C. Tsoumis; treasurer, P. Theophine; assistant secretary, E. Stavropoulos. The chairman of the committee on arrangements was C. Sakelos and the floor manager was John Wilson.

Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, who has five stores in that city, shortly will open his sixth establishment, on Flatbush avenue, with greenhouses 50x100, and fittings that he says will put it in the front rank of flower stores for both cities.

The Pierson U-Bar Co. has completed the range of greenhouses at the Missouri Botanical Gardens.

Lord & Burnham Co. has finished the $50,000 greenhouses at Great Barrington, Mass., for W. H. Walker.

March 9 the MacNiff Horticultural Co. will open the plant auction season at 54 Vesey street. This is the earliest spring opening the firm has had.

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

At the invitation of W. Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., the State Florists' Association of Indiana held its monthly meeting with them March 2. Automobiles were in waiting to carry the delegation to the greenhouses. Frank & Sons have a modern range of 100,000 feet of glass, consisting of seven houses 30 x 309, ridge and furrow style. Mr. Frank is of the opinion that if space were available they would in future build disconnected houses with a vacuum heating system. All the newer roses are being tried out and it looks as if they would hit Easter with an excellent crop. The carnations show expert culture. May Day is grown for light pink and from the look of the benches as they stand today one would say it is a winner. A new red seedling looks promising.

DAYTON, O.

Club Reorganizing.

The formation of a new organization, to be known as the Montgomery County Florists' and Gardeners' Association, will be effected early in March, when the old Dayton Florists' Club will meet and dissolve. Preliminary plans for the formation of the new association were discussed at a luncheon of the Dayton Florists' Club at the Algonquin, February 19.

The present officers of the Dayton Florists' Club, George W. Bartholomew, president; Arthur E. Schmidt, vice-president; Horace M. Frank, secretary and treasurer, will end their terms in March. It was concluded, therefore, at the next annual meeting, to extend the membership of the organization to gardeners and reorganize under a new charter and by-laws.

Secretary J. M. Guild, of the Greater Dayton Association, attended the luncheon of the florists and discussed with the members plans for the first annual

Self-watering Flower Boxes

The Opinion of CONARD & JONES CO.

2/22/1915.

Illinois Flower Box Co.,
180 N. Dearborn Street,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: Seven years ago the possible value of the Illinois Self-Watering Flower Boxes appealed to us. They had just come on the market. We tried them out, satisfied ourselves beyond question as to their value, placed an order for a carload; have since then not only been distributing them widely, recommending them to our customers, but using them ourselves about our homes, inside and out, and after a period of seven years of use under all conditions we are not surprised that the Five-year Guarantee that goes with them has brought none of our customers back to get a box replaced because of leakage, or being unsatisfactory in any other respect.

They induce strong root growth and produce uniformly luxurious results. They please customers and help make more trade. We find it essential to maintain a good stock of them at all times.

Sincerely yours,
THE CONARD & JONES CO.
Robert Pyle, Pres.

To every dealer who has never handled them we will give absolutely FREE a full sized box for demonstrating purposes. Write for particulars.

floral and gardening display. The campaign of the G. D. A. and the Florists' Club for window flower boxes in the stores was also discussed. The members of the organization will coöperate with plans for observance of Arbor Day, April 9.

Miami Valley Exhibition.

The first annual floral and landscape gardening exhibition of the Miami valley was held March 1 to 6. The proceeds from the tickets, 50 cents, for the week were for the purchasing of trees and shrubs for Arbor day, to beautify the parks and highways of the city. Twelve lectures on different subjects were delivered, one every afternoon and evening.

The Heiss Co. exhibited decorative plants and bulbous stock, the latter in the form of an old-fashioned spring garden. Some nice specimens of azaleas were shown.

W. W. Horlacher had large Japanese baskets filled with spring flowers, which brought favorable comment.

The Advance Floral Co. exhibited decorative plants, palms and ferns, bedding stock, etc., and a full-sized pig with a good crop of timothy in place of hair.

Louis Lott showed landscape gardening views.

John Siebenthaler, of Dayton, and the Wagner Park Conservatories, of Sidney, had general displays of nursery stock.

The Spring Hill Nurseries, of Tippecanoe, showed evergreens, shrubbery and some fine specimens of pyramid and standard boxwoods.

The Leedle Floral Co., of Springfield, had a general display of roses, etc.

The Skinner system was shown by the Skinner Irrigation Co., of Troy.

The National Cash Register Co. every evening showed some interesting films on landscape gardening, with talks by the company's representatives.

Visitors: A. Miller, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, and Henry Ehrhardt, of Sidney.

Charlotte, N. C.—Scholtz, Florists, Inc., the greenhouse end being conducted under the name of the Charlotte Cut Flower Co., has had exceptional success this season with cyclamens. Quite a few of the plants grown in 7-inch azalea pots had a spread of twenty-two to twenty-six inches.

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
508 S. Dearborn St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened;

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

The Market.

Business has taken a considerable slump since last week's report was written. We had extraordinarily warm weather for a number of days, which caused the flowers to come along with a rush, while the demand seemed to decline. During the hot weather flowers arrived quite soft; violets, in particular, suffered severely. Special Beauties are scarce, but the demand is light. Short-stemmed stock is abundant. Short-stemmed hybrid teas are down once more to $1 per hundred and are moving with greater difficulty. Select Ophelia, Russell, Hadley and Killarney Queen still bring good prices, but the older varieties are much lower. Some nice Taft is seen and sells well. Prince d'Arenberg from one or two growers is good. Carnations in a few cases reach $4, but the bulk of the flowers sold realize only half this price. Pink Delight remains the leader.

Sweet peas are now fine and much more plentiful. Some specials make $2 per hundred, but the general average is 35c to $1 per hundred. Violets continue to sell at low prices. Bulbous stock is getting somewhat more unwieldy, but has cleaned up remarkably well, everything considered. Freesias are plentiful; so are yellow marguerites. Trade on the latter is not so good. Pink snapdragon sells much better than white and other colors. Gardenias go slowly; the same holds true of cat-tleyas and cypripediums. Valley moves somewhat slowly; so do callas and lilies, both speciosums and longiflorums. There is an abundance of wallflowers, English primroses, pansies, bachelor's buttons and dimorphothecas. Other flowers seen in considerable numbers are acacias, amaryllis, lilacs and imantophyllums. Acacia is much used in window decorations.

Pot plant trade is somewhat improved, but lacks the activity general at this season in past years. There is a strong demand for bedding geraniums to grow on, but rooted carnation cuttings do not move so well as usual.

Various Notes.

The J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, R. I., is strong just now on Killarney Queen, Ophelia, Shawyer and Double White Killarney. Their Beauties, which were abundant when prices were high, are now off crop. Their Sunburst and Killarney Brilliant are good, while they have a fine quartet of dark roses in Prince d'Arenberg, Hadley, Richmond and Black Beauty, or Crimson Queen.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold the next meeting, March 16, as rose night. This comes only two days before the opening of the Boston spring flower show and the meeting of the American Rose Society. Banquet tickets are selling fast and will soon be exhausted. The banquet will be at the New American House, March 10.

The Boston delegation to the S. A. F. executive committee meeting in Chicago left February 27. One or two of the local growers will visit a number of the big Chicago growers before returning.

Thomas Roland is finishing his big house of Spencer sweet peas and will follow it with tomatoes. This will give him two mammoth houses of tomatoes. He is getting a fine cut of roses now, particularly Ward, Hadley, Richmond, Russell and Shawyer.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro, are just finishing their carnation crop, which has been in season since November. They still have remarkably fine mignonette. Carnations are the great specialty here. Particularly fine now are Benora, Yellow Prince, Pocahontas, Champion, Pink Delight and White Wonder. Matchless in some cases has given as many as nine and ten flowers per plant already. Gorgeous has done well and will be planted again.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. is well pleased with Lenten business so far. Mr. Rosenthal says business holds up splendidly, particularly in funeral work.

February gave us one or two moderately cool days at the close, but it was the warmest second month of the year experienced in Boston for thirty-eight years. There was an average excess in temperature of 6 degrees per day.

J. T. Butterworth is sending in handsome lily of the valley. His principal orchids now are Cattleya Trianæ, dendrobiums and cypripediums, but he still has some Cattleya labiata.

Penn this week is pushing plant trade and has a splendid show of pot plants. Henry Penn is active in behalf of the Hebrew relief committee for sufferers in the war zone, and many local florists have subscribed liberally toward it.

J. W. Foote, of Reading, is sending in a nice lot of schizanthus. His carnations are always fine. Pink Delight, White Wonder and Beacon are his three favorites.

P. J. Donahoe, from the Montgomery Co., is getting splendid shipments of Hadley, Ophelia, Russell, Killarney and White Killarney. His Beauties from Scarboro, N. Y., are not coming in quite so abundantly now, but the quality remains fine.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, is marketing fine batches of Pink Pearl rhododendrons, azaleas, Tausendschon roses and bulbous flowers in pans. His lilies for Easter are in prime condition.

Richard D. Kimball, of Waban, is bringing in a nice lot of annual lupines; also dimorphothecas, calendulas and snapdragons.

The Hanover Greenhouses, Hanover, Mass., do carnations particularly well. Their favorite sorts are Benora, White Wonder, Matchless, Pink Delight and Fenn.

Mann Bros. are getting a fine lot of

There was a good audience at Horticultural hall February 27 to hear A. E. Thatcher, of Bar Harbor, Me., speak on "Hardy Shrubs and Their Culture." "The Insect Outlook for New England" is the subject to be handled March 6, by Dr. H. T. Fernald.

William C. Stickel, the genial president of the Boston Flower Exchange, is a carnation specialist who handles all the best varieties, novelties included, but he finds Pink Delight and White Wonder are a little ahead of all others.

Harry Quint's new Back Bay store, in the Hotel Brunswick, is now completed. It is certainly a handsome place and does his artistic taste credit. He finds business good at his Tremont street store.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, is one of our finest growers of Carnation Beacon. Other varieties which are grand with him are Pink Delight, White Wonder and Benora.

The Market.

There has been a marked decrease in the price of flowers of all kinds during the last week, and a still further drop is expected within the next few days. There are quantities of flowers on the market, following several days of warm and sunny weather, and the florists are feeling the full force of the Lenten season. Roses and carnations continue quite scarce, but the only roses that clean up are such novelties as Ward, Taft, Hillingdon, Radiance and Mock. The prices on other varieties are from $3 up. American Beauty roses and gardenias are also scarce, with the result that the latter hold their price of $3 per dozen. There is little call for valley. Violets can be had at the buyer's price. While these are being sold on contract at $5 to $6 per thousand, there are enough left of good stock to sell at half that price, and in consequence the street men are doing the bulk of the business on violets. This applies also to sweet peas, which have dropped from $1 per hundred to $4 per thousand on ordinary varieties, while those of the Spencer type have dropped from $1.50 per hundred to $7.50 per thousand in quantities.

Various Notes.

William F. Gude has left for Chicago to be present at the executive meetings of the S. A. F. and Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

A large party of Maryland florists was here last week. They made the round of the stores and some of the greenhouses nearby. In the party were George S. Kalb, Charles H. Cook, John B. Harmon and Robert Cook, all of Catonsville, Md., and Robert Cook, of Arlington, Md. Other visitors were John H. Bockman, New York; W. H. Massmann, Montclair, N. J.; Jerome O'Leary, Uniontown, Pa.; A. Nans, Ghent, Belgium; W. J. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Sidney H. Bayersdorfer and Charles Schackleman, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia.

Frank W. Bolgiano has been elected to membership in the Washington Board of Trade.

President R. P. Andrews has appointed several of the local florists as members of the various committees of the Retail Merchants' Association to serve during the ensuing year. Of these William Marché will be on the home trade committee; J. Henry Small, credits and collections, and Z. D. Blackistone, trade abuses.

The Senate has passed a bill appropriating $11,000 towards the fund being raised by the citizens' committee to be used for the fiftieth encampment of the Grand Army of the Potomac. William F. Gude, who is chairman of the committee, states that he expects the people of the city to pledge $50,000 more for the purpose and states that he has already received financial support along this line from several of the florists.

Attorney Charles F. Diggs has been appointed receiver for the business of the Washington Florists' Co., 1408 H street, northwest, with bonds fixed at $4,000. This concern was recently adjudicated bankrupt. C. L. L.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

When the Indians come to town from the reservation and sell sassafras and wintergreens on our street corners, it is a sure sign of spring. The mild days are good for violet sales and for flowers in general. Stock is plentiful. Roses are abundant. There are some excellent Sunbursts on the market. Killarneys are fine. Taft, Ward and Milady have splendid color at present. Beauties are good. Carnations are all excellent. There is an abundance of bulbous stock. Sweet peas, mignonette, daisies and forget-me-nots are coming into the market in large quantities. Harrisii and speciosum lilies are plentiful. White orchids, cattleyas, valley and orchid sweet peas are arriving in large quantities. Cinerarias, primulas, cyclamens, Dutch hyacinths and Boston ferns are selling well.

Various Notes.

A novel order was recently placed at the branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son. It called for fifty varieties of flowers to be used for a dinner party. Each of the male guests was to select a certain flower from a large vase and then find the lady who wore a corsage corresponding to the flower he wore in his buttonhole; in this way partners for the evening were chosen.

The Lenox Flower Shop had a sale of Primula obconica last week at a low figure. The plants sold quite well, but as the weather was mild, cut flowers sold better. As one approached the store, one gained the impression that there was something special in primroses for that day, for the entire window was given over to these plants. An immense screen, the full length of the window, held the plants in position.

Stephen J. Mahoney had a few rest days last week and took a trip to Niagara Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson spent a few days last week in Pittsburgh, Pa.

J. H. Rebstock is showing some excellent Golden Spur daffodils, Primula obconica and cyclamens.

The Buffalo bowling team will go to Rochester March 5, and a big time is expected. The team is confident of bringing back the Lord & Burnham trophy.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., spent February 25 visiting the wholesale commission houses and a few of our flower shops. Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, and Mr. Dyces, of Ed. Jansen, New York, were also visitors here last week.

One of the youngest growers in this vicinity who is making good is Harold Brookins, of Orchard Park, the son of Jerry Brookins. Never before have we had such excellent orchid sweet peas in large quantities as Jerry Brookins and his son are growing. They are supplying all of the large downtown florists with daily shipments. These peas bring fancy prices, too.

Good-sized sprays of acacia have been received from growers in New Jersey. The stock is exquisite and has found favor with flower buyers. The price, however, is so high that it has not a large sale. E. C. A.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

During last week business was not brisk, which caused a slump in about all kinds of flowers. However, the tradesmen are not expecting large things during the Lenten season, but are looking forward to a successful Easter trade. There is a lot of potted stock on the market, in fine shape. Azaleas, however, drag considerably. The weather, which has been spring-like, has not hurt the quality of cut flowers to any great extent. There are large quantities of roses of all kinds and grades. As usual, the yellows and reds and a good proportion of pink varieties sell well. Carnations are plentiful and are used extensively for funeral work, being about the cheapest flowers at the present time. Easter lilies and callas are plentiful and are in fine condition. The same is true of violets, but the demand is none too good. Orchids are not overplentiful, but are quite cheap. There is an abundance of jonquils, daffodils and poeticus, which move slowly. Lily of the valley is still plentiful, and dealers are overstocked. There has been quite a lot of short-stemmed Beauties on the market, which have sold well. Pansies, marguerites and acacia have sold well fixed into colonial bouquets and baskets. For corsage work, pink or yellow roses with a liberal quantity of freesia are becoming a popular hit.

Various Notes.

George T. Boucher says, considering the strain business is under at the present time, he is holding his own. He has had two or three small decorations at some of the automobile stores, which have kept him busy. His store trade is fairly good.

Miss H. B. Ellis has been on the sick list for a few days, suffering with an attack of grip.

H. E. Wilson's business during the week has not been up to the standard. He had a fine window display for the week-end which consisted of a huge basket of Easter lilies. Bulbous stock, trimmed with pink mats, added to the attraction. The L. & B. bowling trophy was also shown.

H. E. Bates has just returned from New York city.

The return bowling match between the Buffalo Florists' Club and the Rochester Florists' Association has been fixed for March 5, at the Central bowling alley. The Rochester boys are practicing at the Elks' Club.

W. Arthur Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., is away on a two weeks' business trip through central and western Pennsylvania.

A flower stand has been opened in one of the smaller stores in the Triangle building and appears to be doing fairly well.

Arrangements for the flower show, which is to be a new feature of the 1915 Rochester exposition, were discussed February 22. Assurances have already been received from some of the largest growers of the country that they will display their choicest products. George B. Hart, Al Salter, H. E. Bates and others were down at building Number 5 and carefully measured and found there would be ample room to accommodate the floral exhibits and that the building would lend itself to decoration. Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

THE seed potato market is quite active and is rapidly strengthening.

THE situation in beans is not encouraging. It looks as though next season's acreage is almost sure to be light.

HOLLAND has prohibited the export of peas and beans except that a special license is granted seed growers, on proper application, to fill bona fide foreign orders in limited quantity.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. W. Scott, New York representative of the Yokohama Nursery Co., and S. Suzuki, of Yokohama, head of the company, en route to New York.

EIGHT cases of lily of the valley pips arrived at New York February 23 on the steamer Frederik VIII from Copenhagen, consigned to Lunham & Moore. The season's total is now 9,428.

GERMANY prohibited, after February 5, the exportation of beet, mangel and other root crop seeds. An embargo also was placed on the export of agricultural seeds, including grass and clover.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of S. Y. Haines, for nearly seven years connected with the advertising department of H. W. Buckbee's seed business, at Rockford, Ill.

ONION SETS, in which there was a little recession last week, have more than recovered, as dealers realize that stocks are not overabundant. The southern dealers held back as long as they could, but were compelled to fall in line.

FEBRUARY was a good month for the mail-order seed trade; in many cases it made up for the January decrease, so the big month starts without a handicap. The next three weeks will tell the season's story for the catalogue houses.

A. H. HUMMERT, secretary of the St. Louis Seed Co., says mail orders became heavy early in February, with counter trade opening about the middle of the month. He considers the prospect good for a record season, especially in garden seeds.

ALFRED L. JONES, associated with Kelway & Son, Langport, England, for the last three years and formerly secretary to W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., the well-known Lincolnshire seed growers, Boston, England, sails per S.S. Missanabie March 12, to take up a position with one of the largest seed houses in Canada.

WATCHFUL WAITING

When little Willie swallowed a $10 gold piece, his father made him pursue the policy of "watchful waiting" Many florists are pursuing the same policy just now without the certainty Willie had. When business is dull you can do one of two things—sit down and wait until something turns up, or go out and turn something up. If you want to be successful, follow the latter route. The fellow who waits, rusts. Get your benches filled with good stuff, and then go out and sell it. The trouble with most florists is their inability to sell what they produce. Sell your goods—don't give them away. Don't send them blindly into the market—go out and sell them. In June flowers are scarce. In order to have something to sell at that time, why not plant a case or more of good Cold Storage Giganteum bulbs? Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are the kind that will produce good results—none better anywhere. Suppose they do cost you a few dollars more a case—they are worth more than they cost. It's the profit you want, and Horseshoe Brand Bulbs will net more profit per dollar invested than any brand ever known. Giganteum, size 7x9, $20.00 per case of 300; size 9/10, $20.00 per case of 200. Order now.

Not how cheap but how good.

DISCLAIMER AGAIN UPHELD.

Another suit in which the disclaimer was the defense has been decided in the Circuit court of Jefferson county, Kentucky, in favor of Wood, Stubbs & Co., of Louisville, Ky. Thomas Wallace, a newspaper man and the owner of a farm in Jefferson and Oldham counties, claimed damages of $488.50 because he was given a garden variety of corn when he wanted field corn. Mr. Wallace said he is not an experienced farmer, and went to Wood, Stubbs & Co. last May and asked for seed for field corn. He purchased and paid for seed of Boone County White, which is the defendant's leading variety of field corn. The plaintiff charged that the corn was not Boone County White, but a garden variety, which produced a smaller crop than that which he would have obtained had the variety been Boone County White. His crop was worth, he stated, only $271.50, whereas a crop of the field variety specified would have been worth $760, and he sued for the difference, $488.50.

In this particular instance, the customer dealt directly in person at the company's store, without having consulted a catalogue, so that in the store was the only place where the disclaimer could have been brought to his notice. Wood, Stubbs & Co. make regular use of the standard form of disclaimer and it was on this they based their successful defense.

FUMIGATING IMPORTED SEED.

A satisfactory method of destroying injurious insects in imported seed without affecting the value of the seed has been used by the United States Department of Agriculture, and is described in a new bulletin (No. 186) entitled, "A Method of Fumigating Seed," which will be sent to those who apply to the department, at Washington, D. C.

In the new method, the infested seed is placed in a chamber in which a partial vacuum has been created. The chamber is then filled with hydrocyanic acid gas, which penetrates more effectively into the seed because of the previously created vacuum. It has been found that a considerably shorter exposure is necessary in using this method of fumigation than in the usual method. The bulletin describes the experiment completely, giving details and illustrations of the chamber used in the experiment.

Hydrocyanic acid is, of course, a most dangerous poison and should not be handled by any except those who are thoroughly familiar with it. Another gas, carbon bisulphide, is to be used by the department in a similar experiment, the results of which will be announced later.

coördinate body, the House of Representatives. Although in the last three agricultural appropriation bills the Senate committee has tried to cut out this practice, the Senate has overruled the committee and voted for the continuance of the distribution. That faithful champion of the people, Senator James E. Martine, of New Jersey, accomplished the downfall of the committee this year. He moved to disagree to the committee amendment striking out the $252,000 appropriation for the distribution, which was adopted by a vote of 36 to 21, the appropriation thus remaining in the bill as adopted by the House.

The senators voting for the abolition of free seeds were: Republicans—Brandegee, Conn.; Burton, O.; Fall, N. M.; Jones, Wash.; Lodge, Mass.; Nelson, Minn.; Norris, Neb.; Page, Vt.; Poindexter, Wash.; Root, N. Y.; Townsend, Mich.; Weeks, Mass. Democrats—Bryan and Fletcher, Fla.; Gore, Okla.; Lane, Ore.; Lewis, Ill.; Ransdell, La.; Robinson, Ark.; Sheppard, Tex.; Thomas, Colo.

Senators voting to continue the distribution were: Republicans—Catron, N. M.; Dillingham, Vt.; Du Pont, Del.; Gallinger, N. H.; La Follette, Wis.; McCumber, N. D.; McLean, Conn.; Oliver and Penrose, Pa.; Perkins and Works, Cal.; Smoot, Utah. Democrats—Ashurst and Smith, Ariz.; Bankhead and White, Ala.; Chamberlain, Ore.; Chilton, W. Va.; Culberson, Tex.; Hardwick, Ga.; Hollis, N. H.; Kern, Ind.; Martin and Swanson, Va.; Martine, N. J.; Myers, Mont.; O'Gorman, N. Y.; Overman and Simmons, N. C.; Pittman, Nev.; Pomerene, O.; Saulsbury, Del.; Shafroth, Colo.; Smith, Md.; Thompson, Kan.; Vardaman, Miss.

Thirty-nine senators did not vote.

IN THE VALLEY OF THE RHINE.

Conrad Appel, whose establishment in the valley of the Rhine has dealt in grass, clover and tree seeds since 1789, sent the following under date of January 25:

"On account of the cruel war in Europe, the harvesting of all sorts of seeds was heavily delayed and diminished. Especially the deciduous tree seeds, which are usually collected in August, are in short supply, while the new crop of cones of the various home-grown evergreen tree seeds is at present brought in under difficult conditions, as part of my trusted gatherers are with the army. We have, therefore, to reckon with only small quantities of all species and the stocks may soon be disposed of.

"As the direct cable communication between the States and Germany is interrupted, I will thank you to address all telegrams to my agents, who will promptly forward them to me without delay through the intervention of a Rotterdam dealer. I wish to point out particularly, that I am able to make prompt shipment via neutral ports and that the war does not interfere in any way with my export business. All my grass seed consignments during the last few months reached the port of New York safely and with the usual promptness."

United States, according to E. Turbat, general secretary of the Federation Nationale des Syndicats Horticoles de France, who wrote as follows at Orleans February 15:

"January 9 the French government issued a decree prohibiting the export of French seeds. In order to avoid any misinterpretation of this decree several bodies and the president of our federation have demanded explanations to the ministry of agriculture, which has answered us that:

"This decree is not applicable to England, English colonies, or the United States, whence seeds can be exported as formerly without any permission. They also can be exported to Switzerland and Spain after having obtained special permission. Their export seems to be prohibited for all other countries."

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

The Danish Seed Import, Minneapolis, Minn.—Wholesale and retail catalogues of Danish seeds. The two 16-page books contain the same descriptions and illustrations and differ only in the prices quoted. Both vegetable and flower seeds are listed, with cabbage and cauliflower as specialties.

Burdell Floral Co., Bowling Green, Ky.—Wholesale list of rooted cuttings and plants, with chrysanthemums as the most conspicuous item, but with extensive assortments, also, of miscellaneous stock, such as geraniums, cannas, etc. The firm makes a specialty of cuttings and 2½-inch pot plants.

E. Neubert, Wandsbek, Germany.—Illustrated wholesale list of ferns, begonias, cyclamens, asparagus, azaleas, lilacs and other plants. Ferns are most prominently featured; the list is printed in German.

Wm. Toole & Son, Baraboo, Wis.—A 4-page wholesale list of pansy plants, pansy seeds, hardy perennials and bedding plants. The arrival of this firm's general catalogue, with the "Guide to Pansy Culture," was announced in The Review of February 25.

Rockmont Nursery, Boulder, Colo.—Ornamental trees, shrubs, vines, perennials, ferns, Shasta daisies, tritomas and other plants; an illustrated 40-page catalogue, carefully compiled and well printed. Though the stock listed is general in character, prominence is given to distinctively Coloradoan products, "Colorado native shrubs, evergreens and flowers; western-grown ornamentals for western planters."

M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Easter Portfolio of Keystone Quality Florists' Supplies," freely and finely illustrated. Baskets occupy the largest space; among the other lines of stock are ivory porcelain ware, oxidized metal ware, ostrich feather fans, chiffons, pot covers, mats, cycas and magnolia leaves, wheat sheaves, etc.

Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Wholesale Price List for Market Gardeners and Florists." This is the third catalogue of the season from this firm. The first was a 140-page general catalogue, or "Seed Buyers' Guide," and the second was a 30-page florists' wholesale list, which treated principally of flower seeds and limited the vegetable seeds to about four pages. The present wholesale book makes no mention of flowers, but the entire seventy-four pages are devoted to vegetable and farm seeds, fruit plants, implements and sundries. All three books are freely illustrated.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, N. Y.—A comprehensive, accurate, attractive, clearly printed, well illustrated catalogue of flower, vegetable and farm seeds, bulbs, plants, shrubs, fruits, implements, plant tubs, rustic settees and vases, fertilizers, insecticides and other supplies; 144 pages and cover. The firm's statement as to terms of shipment is unusually clear and concise: "We will deliver all seeds and bulbs listed in our catalogue anywhere in the United States, if your purchase amounts to $1 or over, when cash accompanies your order, by mail, express or freight at our option, to your town or city. On implements, fertilizers, insecticides, plants and potatoes, we do not pay mail, express or freight charges."

George H. Walker, North Dighton, Mass.—Eleventh annual list of "the world's choicest dahlias," arranged alphabetically. "This catalogue," says Mr. Walker, "is issued as a supplement to my 1914 catalogue, which was mailed to all names on my mailing list last season."

Smith Bros. Seed Co., Inc., Auburn, N. Y.—A freely illustrated, 64-page catalogue of vegetable, farm and flower seeds, plants and small fruits. This, says the firm, is "an enlarged book, double the size of former years and with many new and choice varieties added."

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING

VIOLETS

BY GEORGE SALTFORD.

The cultural directions are clear and concise and every detail of successful growing is covered in this neatly printed, freely illustrated pamphlet of 48 pages.

It is said that this book, more than any other agency, has contributed to the wonderful expansion of the Hudson River violet industry the past three years.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

THE LADY OF THE ROSES.

From the number of fair damsels in fair southern California a queen has to be chosen for the Los Angeles fiestas during 1915, and although the candidates are many and their charms so dazzling that none but a native or an adopted son can look at such an array of beauty and retain his eyesight, yet the florists and firemen have no doubt as to who will be elected. Regiments, battalions or armies of beauty may come, but they remain unmoved—they know their queen will win.

In order that other and less fortunate citizens of these United States may see for themselves what this glorious southland produces in the way of lovely roses and beautiful girls, H. W. Turner, who is running the campaign for Miss Dieterich, has induced her to wear a choice bouquet of September Morn and pay a visit to the photographer. The result, as published herewith—strictly, as aforesaid, out of mercy to the inhabitants of less favored climes—speaks for itself. Is it any wonder the brave firemen and the gallant florists have come out as one man and are moving heaven and earth to crown fair Martha? We need hardly say that Miss Dieterich is a native daughter, her father, Jacob Dieterich, being known to everyone here and many elsewhere in the trade. R.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The arrival of the Lenten season has decreased social activities and has affected the demand for flowers. Orchids and other high-priced stock suffer the most. The demand for medium priced and cheap cut or potted stock holds up well and keeps the market cleared of these grades. Bulbous stock is in full supply and there is a tendency to lower the retail prices. Paper Whites and Romans are still to be had, but their quality is not prime. Easter lilies are plentiful and good. In potted plants bulbous stock still leads, with cinerarias, genistas, aralias and primroses following in about the order named. Some home-grown violets of the large varieties have appeared. In sweet peas, carnations, freesias and roses the supply is nearly equal to the demand. Some cut stock is still coming from California.

The seedsmen and nurserymen are unusually busy for this time of year. In some cases they report a February business nearly double that of last year.

Various Notes.

Captain George Pope, president of the Oregon Sweet Pea Society, has donated a large quantity of choice seed of his own growing to be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The seed is put up in popular-priced packages and is distributed by the Martin & Forbes Co. and by some of the seedsmen. A neat folder on sweet pea culture, written by Capt. Pope, goes with each purchase.

Home-grown violets are now coming from A. Byron, of Oregon City, and from Julius Brotje, of Oak Grove.

Thanking you for the excellent results we have had to date from our ad. in The Review.—

J. C. Mohr is putting a combination hot water and hot air furnace of his own design into his greenhouse at Lents. He is also putting in raised concrete benches. He intends in the future to grow more flowers and fewer vegetables.

Miss Martha Dieterich.

Clarke Bros. have a large display of Easter lilies.

Henry Clemmens, of Newberg, R. M. Bodley, of this city, and Joseph Betz, of Jennings Lodge, share the honors in growing the splendid sweet peas now seen on display.

The Nippon Floral Co. is bringing in the excellent freesias seen at some of the stores.

The engagement is announced of S. G. Lubliner to Miss Rose Strauss, of Walla Walla, Wash. The wedding will occur soon after Easter. S. W. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Funeral work has been the outlet for most of the stock in the city this week, but such work has been plentiful and dealers have cleaned up well. Shipments to outside points have been heavy and several large decorations were secured for Washington's birthday. Indoor roses are improving in color with the lengthening days, but the supply is still unequal to the demand. Retailers are relying to a great extent on outdoor flowers and fruit tree boughs for window displays; some arrangements of daffodils and blue cornflowers and marigolds, with violets, are particularly effective. Carnations are plentiful, and much more free from splits since the weather has been warmer. Violets, valley and orchids are abundant. Outdoor Cecile Brunner roses are scarce as yet, but a few are being sent in from under glass. Flowering plants are selling better, especially azaleas, rhododendrons and lilacs.

Various Notes.

For several years I have been watching the hybrid freesias at Rudolph Fischer's place at Santa Anita and I have mentioned them several times in these notes. This year, by a stroke of luck, I was able to take with me on my visit J. Grullemans, Jr., of Lisse, Holland, a man who knows a good deal about bulbs in general, as all will admit, and quite a little about colored freesias in particular. Mr. Grullemans was loud in his praises of the great advance made by Mr. Fischer and said unhesitatingly that the plants were away beyond anything he had seen of their kind in Holland. The colors of these freesias are wonderfully rich and varied, while their size and substance are also wonderful, far surpassing the Italian types that the Dutch and other growers have been working on. To get an idea of these fine varieties, one has to imagine a house 100 feet or more in length and twelve to fifteen feet wide, just full of the largest freesias in almost every imaginable shade of color. In the mass they present convincing evidence of the good work being done here, while the individual flowers are more remarkable still, and this is only the flowering quarters of the selected types. In other houses there are literally acres of fine seedling forms awaiting the critical eye of Mr. and Mrs. Fischer, for it should be known that Mrs. Fischer is just as great an enthusiast as her husband. They are not yet quite ready to give these wonderful novelties to the world, for raising stocks of these bulbs is not the easiest or the quickest thing known, but there are some great surprises coming shortly from the raiser and introducer of Freesia Purity.

R. W. Saakes reports a much better demand the last few weeks than at any time since he moved to Broadway. Though doubtless for a time he missed some of the old customers from Main street, where he had so long been established, "Billy" has a most persuasive manner and soon makes lots of new friends. He is handling the entire cut of R. Fischer's freesias.

Our old friend, D. R. Woods, has a new home in Wilmington and is going to make it a gardener's paradise by planting things not usually seen here. His long experience will stand him in good stead, for, though no longer active in horticultural pursuits, he does not forget the old love.

A superb decoration was carried out at Homburger's department store last week, on the occasion of the dinner and dance given to the employees, of whom over 800 sat down to an elegant repast. A large stage was built and banked with Whitmani ferns and En-

SUPERIOR-GROWN ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

September Morn Our sensational light pink rose. Throws extra strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet, producing high-grade stock without pinching. Wonderful keeper, full, double, with petals of grand substance waved on edges, giving it a most distinct appearance. Light shade of flesh-pink on outside, shading to pure rose-pink in center. We planted 10,000 of it for cutting and have had more repeat orders on it than on any other rose and at better prices. Flowers every day in the year and never soft in the hottest weather. Strong stems, no mildew or spot. (See our full-page ads in issues of January 21 and 28.)

Own root plants only, from 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000, 5000 for $1000.00.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. F. F. Thompson The beautiful shell-pink sport of the well known Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. It combines all the fine qualities of its parent, and this surely is recommendation enough when added to its magnificent coloring. Always in bloom and already proved a money-maker.

$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000

Hadley Brilliant, deep, velvety crimson, a color which it retains all the year round. Flowers borne on stiff, upright stems, and a first-class variety in every particular.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys; an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color; is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season. We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

DARK GREEN FOLIAGE

chantress carnations. Seventy-eight centerpieces of the same variety of carnations, with Asparagus plumosus, were used on as many tables. On the speakers' table was a low centerpiece thirty feet long, made of Killarney roses. The pillars in the hall had large, circular baskets of ferns and pendent strings of plumosus. Four hundred corsage bouquets and 450 boutonnieres were made up for the occasion, and among other stock used were 3,500 carnations, 2,000 roses, 4,000 freesias and hundreds of potted ferns. The whole affair passed off finely and E. R. Hunt, manager of the flower department, and Miss Rose Lathrop, his capable assistant, came in for unstinted praise for the beautiful effect produced.

At the Pioneer Nursery, Monrovia, the stock in all departments is looking fine and trade is reported brisk. As the place is situated near the beautiful Foothill boulevard, there is considerable transient trade from automobilists using that thoroughfare.

Seizo Suzuki, representing the Yokohama Nursery Co., of New York and Yokohama, has been several weeks on the coast and left here for the east February 24. Besides calling on the trade, Mr. Suzuki has been superintending his firm's exhibit at the San Francisco exposition.

Large quantities of valley are being shipped daily from the establishment of Murata & Co. The large consignments from their regular growers insure a good supply at all times.

Forced lilac and clematis are meeting with a good demand at the nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Continued rains are hindering seed growing and other outdoor work here. After several weeks of wet weather, the last week has been fine and the surface was just in condition for working when another storm reached us. As the soil is full of water, the rain does no good, but runs off, causing floods and washouts and delaying business. All seed and nursery planting will be late this season.

Another well known nurseryman in the hands of the speed cops! Being named after the father of his country, he cannot tell a lie, and as he said he was only going forty-six miles an hour, there is every reason to believe him.

Jacob Dieterich celebrated his forty-eighth birthday February 23 and was the recipient of congratulations from his hosts of friends here and elsewhere.

EGYPTIAN PAPER REED.

Can you tell me the name of the tall grass that I have marked in the enclosed picture? It is seen a great deal around Los Angeles homes? The stem is tall and slim, like a reed, and has a bunch of green on the top. J. L. G.

The plant shown in the photograph accompanying the query of J. L. G. is the Egyptian paper reed, Papyrus antiquorum. As J. L. G. says, it is largely used in the home gardens around Los Angeles and is the plant from which the papyrus of antiquity was made. It is a most beautiful plant for a sheltered position when it gets plenty of water, being, in fact, quite aquatic in its needs. It will not thrive in a dry position or where cold winds can reach it, but, suitably placed, it throws up immense tasseled umbels of small leaves at the ends of the tall, reed-like stems. It will not stand frost, and if grown in cold localities, should be placed in tubs or large pots partly submerged in summer, and taken to a greenhouse or other frost-proof place on the approach of cold weather. In southern California it makes immense clumps six or eight feet high and as much across in a few years. The plant is easily propagated by division in early spring. It is also known as Cyperus Papyrus.

GREENHOUSE CLIMBERS.

I should like to get a list of about eight greenhouse climbers, to be planted in a conservatory. They will be trained on a trellis to cover the back wall of the conservatory. The house will have a minimum temperature of 50 degrees. What firm can supply such stock?

H. H.—Pa.

The following will be found excellent varieties for your purpose: Allamanda Hendersoni, Bougainvillea Sanderiana, Stephanotis floribunda, Passiflora princeps, Jasminum primulinum, Clerodendron Balfouri, Clematis indivisa and Plumbago Capensis. Some roses are available, such as Cherokee. As a close cover for a brick or stone wall, Ficus repens is good. Such specialists in greenhouse plants as Dreer, of Philadelphia, and other advertisers in The Review, can supply these plants.

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

Mississippi nurserymen are alarmed at the appearance of the citrus canker. It is said to have been found near Wiggins.

Harold C. Black, a 1914 graduate of the Massachusetts College of Agriculture, has joined the staff of the Glenwood Nurseries, Morrisville, Pa.

Hard times? Not in the grain growing sections. Listen: "Our retail sales for the week ending February 13 showed an increase of between eighty-eight and ninety per cent over the same week last year, while the wholesale department showed a gain of twenty-five per cent. The wholesale department also showed a much larger percentage of cash orders." Lloyd C. Stark, vice-president of Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., said that.

Preferred stock is being sold in what will be the Pioneer Nursery Co., of New Ulm, Minn. The plan is to capitalize for $50,000, all except $12,000 of which will be common stock, of which a majority will be held by Wm. Pfaender, Jr. The preferred stock will be a first lien upon the growing stock, which is at the present time valued at $12,000, and the property, including forty acres of land and the buildings upon them, valued at about $30,000. Oscar Bierbauer, formerly of Mankato, Minn., is in charge of the agents' department of the concern.

Inasmuch as "a multitude of dire calamities—the war, business inactivity, the low price of cotton, etc.—have fallen upon the Texas nurserymen, preventing their usual volume of sales, and leaving unsold many thousand valuable trees, vines and plants," E. W. Kirkpatrick, for many years in the nursery business at Sherman and McKinney, Tex., and now president of the Texas Industrial Congress, believes, according to a letter of his in the public press of Texas, that an appeal from the schools, clubs and civic authorities for stock that would otherwise go up in smoke, would meet with a generous response by nurserymen of the state. Let the public pay the necessary expense, he says, and the nurserymen furnish the stock, and the two together make Texas a land of trees. Something of the kind may be done by nurserymen in other sections in their effort to utilize the silver lining of the cloud.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

RESHIPMENT NOTICE REQUIRED.

According to a notice of the Department of Agriculture, a number of notices of shipments of imported nursery stock returned to the office of the Federal Horticultural Board by state inspectors bear a notation to the effect that the stock was reshipped to some other state prior to inspection and that the state inspector concerned was so notified, such notice apparently being given by the inspector who called to examine the goods. It is the duty, under the law, of persons making such reshipments, to notify prior to such shipments both the Department of Agriculture and the state inspector of the state to which the goods are forwarded, and failure on their part to give either of said notices makes them liable to prosecution under the plant quarantine act. The notification by the state inspector on his return report does not meet this legal requirement. This subject is fully covered in the following paragraph quoted from regulation 8 of the "Rules and Regulations under the Plant Quarantine Act; General, including Nursery Stock":

"Should a consignee named in such a notice (importer's or broker's report to the Department of Agriculture and to the state inspector) ship or deliver for shipment to any other state, territory, or district such nursery stock before it has been inspected by a duly authorized state, territorial, or district inspector or officer, he shall prior to such shipment give like notice to the secretary of agriculture and to the duly authorized inspector or other officer of the state, territory, or district to which the nursery stock is to be reshipped."

A. A. N. AFTER ADDITIONS.

Miss Ida Tarbell recently spoke before the Civic Club of Rochester, N. Y., her audience numbering over 400 business men. Among other good things uttered by the speaker was this: "You must coöperate, or you will not get results;" and this leads us to remark that the executive officers of the American Association of Nurserymen are in full accord with the sentiment expressed by this noted journalist. Whenever a man fails to renew his membership in the American Association he is likely to get from one to three reminder cards, which bear respectively such injunctions as "The Association is working in your interest; you should give it your support;" "Results can only be achieved by united action," etc.

The fortieth annual convention of this association will be held in the city of Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25. In a week or two every member of the association and every legitimate nurseryman in the United States will receive the announcement of the event, which, in addition to containing much of the details of arrangement, program of speakers and of entertainment, will make an urgent plea for prompt renewal of membership, as well as for responses from those who, while daily living in the enjoyment of the privileges and benefits secured for them by this association, have hitherto turned a deaf ear to our appeals for their coöperation.

TOMATOES (Bonny Best) TOMATOES

Most prolific for forcing or outside crop. Size and color are right. Will produce double the fruit of any other tomato in existence. No trick in growing tomatoes; just plant them, tie and run them to single or two stems; keep side shoots out; no hand fertilizing needed. That isn't all—try this in your carnation benches. They will make you money. No higher temperature needed.

That the Detroit meeting is going to be a success no one questions, but it will be a much greater success in point of numbers and influence if every nurseryman who ought to belong responds to this invitation. A fee of $5 per year is exceedingly small compared with the benefits afforded by a membership.

It is the expectation that a special railroad car will be chartered to convey the nurserymen of Rochester, N. Y., and the immediate vicinity. Those interested should write E. S. Osborne, of the Charlton Nursery Co. Final particulars regarding special rates and special car parties will be contained in the announcement. In the meantime, John Hall, secretary, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y., will gladly respond to requests for further information concerning membership, etc.

John Hall, Sec'y.

UPHOLDS COLLECTOR'S COUNT.

The Board of General Appraisers has overruled the protest of the Marble City Nursery Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., against the assessment of duty on nursery stock by the collector of customs at Memphis. The question involved was the number of plants, which were dutiable at the rate of $1 per thousand. The collector examined two cases of the importation and reported an excess, upon which basis he estimated an excess in the whole shipment. The importer claimed the enumeration by the collector was wrong. The board holds that as no evidence was produced by the importer, the protest could not be accepted as proof, being in the nature of an ex parte affidavit. The board holds that the finding of the collector is presumptively correct and was not overcome by any testimony in the case.

P.

PRUNING DECIDUOUS SHRUBS.

I should like to know whether it makes any difference to shrubs if they are trimmed at this time of the year, and what effect it has on the blossoms. The shrubs are bush honeysuckle, hardy hydrangea, lilac, Viburnum Opulus sterile or Snowball, Spiræa Van Houttei and Philadelphus coronarius or Garland syringa.

L. T. P.—Ill.

The proper time to prune all the shrubs named, with the exception of the hydrangeas, is after they have flowered. Cut the hydrangeas back moderately hard now, leaving merely two or three eyes of the previous year's growths. If the plants are young, you can leave the growths somewhat longer.

Lilacs, viburnums, spiræas, philadelphus, etc., must not be pruned now, or you will simply be cutting away the flowering wood. Just as soon as these shrubs have flowered you should cut out all dead, dying and weak wood, and head back any runaway shoots. The plants will then make a good growth and ripen some before winter. Any of the shrubs named, which have become too tall and ungainly, can be cut down close to the ground now. They will make considerable growth before fall. Reduce the number of shoots somewhat, leaving the strongest. In a couple of seasons you will have strong plants again. If the plants are extremely old, it pays better to plant young stock.

A good many so-called gardeners give their customers' shrubs an annual spring shearing, cutting away the flowering wood and at the same time giving the shrubs a topiary appearance.

C. W.

SALVIA GREGGII

HARDY EVER-BLOOMING SHRUB

Last season we advertised this remarkable new plant and soon sold all our stock. This seasons orders have poured in so rapidly from all sections of the country, from Georgia to Oregon and from Massachusetts to California, that it has not been necessary to do much advertising. Some nurserymen who ordered only a few last season are ordering them by the 1000 this year.

It is extremely hardy. Has withstood a temperature of ten degrees below zero. Is a great drouth resister. It flourishes and blooms profusely in the hottest and driest weather. It is as near an everblooming plant as we have ever seen. It begins to bloom in early spring soon after growth commences. The blossoms literally cover the plant for two months or more. Then for a few months it does not bloom so freely, but is perhaps never without some flowers. In the fall it puts on another full crop of blossoms that continue until long after the early frosts have set in. It requires a killing frost to check its flowering.

The color is an indescribable lovely shade of red. It is a dark soft cerise crimson, much the color of a well grown American Beauty rose. It has none of the harsh, glaring shades of the salvia splendens. The beautiful color is perhaps the most attractive feature of this novelty.

It is a hard-wooded shrub. Grows three to four feet high and three to four feet wide in a compact globe, very full and neat in appearance. It is beautiful when massed in a solid bed, and is as useful as the Spiræa Van Houttei for bordering shrub beds. It is not so tall, but as compact and graceful as the Spiræa, and in addition it is a blaze of beautiful red nearly all the season.

or SWEET PEPPER, like we import from Spain—the best money-maker on the market as a plant or producer. I have grown plants that produced 94 ripe peppers to the plant. They are the most beautiful peppers grown, sweet as an apple and thick meat; weigh 38 lbs. to the bu. Sold on the open market in Columbus for $3.00 per bu. Will yield 500 bu. per acre. The Pimento Cheese is made from them in a fresh state, as you see from reference. I have a limited supply at $1.00 per trade packet or $2.00 per oz. Every greenhouse or gardener should have it. Sow early in March in temperature of 65 and treat as mangoes.

My Dear Mr. Adsit: Your letter of February 8 at hand, and in reply will say that the pimento seed which we bought of you last spring germinated in the greenhouse and the plants bore an abundant supply of pimentos.

We used the pimentos for making our pimento cheese, and the quality was just as good as those that were imported from Spain.

FERTILIZERS FOR CABBAGE.

I want to grow an acre of Early Jersey Wakefield cabbage. Please tell me what is the best fertilizer to use, the quantity per acre and the cost. I am going to plant frost-proof cabbage plants. E. W. P.—Ill.

Cabbages prefer a rich, heavy loam. They succeed best where the ground has been given twenty to thirty tons of barnyard manure in the fall and has been deeply plowed. If the land is at all sour and has not been recently limed, apply 1,000 pounds per acre in early spring and harrow it in well. The fall manuring can be supplemented by commercial fertilizer in spring. As you probably wish to apply commercial fertilizer only, I would apply 600 pounds of acid phosphate, or its equivalent. This furnishes the phosphoric acid which is necessary to successful cabbage culture. Also use 200 pounds muriate of potash and 100 pounds nitrate of soda, harrowing these in well. I would also give a couple of applications of nitrate of soda after the plants are started; the first when the plants are five to six inches high, the second fourteen days later. This will greatly stimulate the growth. Do not use over seventy-five pounds per acre at each application.

Acid phosphate costs about $15 per ton, nitrate of soda $4.50 to $5 per hundred pounds. Potash comes high this season, owing to cessation of im-

Our New Rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong, upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large, handsome, dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink, deepening toward the center, with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose. It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

CUCUMBERS DAMPING OFF.

I am sending, under separate cover, a few specimen roots of cucumbers with which I have been having trouble during the last few weeks. I wish you would kindly tell me the cause of the trouble and how to remedy it.

J. S.—Ore.

The stems and roots were much dried up when received. I did not notice any root-gall and conclude that your plants probably have the damping-off fungi. This trouble is caused by a hot, moist atmosphere, with insufficient ventilation and light. If the soil has been infected by some previous crop, the trouble will be worse in the case of succeeding crops. Thorough freezing of the soil or steam sterilization, especially the latter, is the remedy. The former cannot be adopted at this late date, nor can you sterilize with plants in the house. If you can manage until summer, I would advise sterilization then. C. W.

SPIRÆAS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

When should Spiræa Gladstone and S. Queen Alexandra be benched for Memorial day? What is the best insecticide to use? I understand that smoke burns the foliage.

J. H.—R. I.

Bench Gladstone about April 5. Queen Alexandra takes a little longer to come in and would better be started ten days earlier. Much depends on the amount of heat you will give them. I have figured on 50 to 55 degrees at night. If they are allowed 60 to 65 degrees, you can start them at least a week later. With Queen Alexandra it is necessary to shade the plants when the flowers start to open, or the sun will soon bleach out the beautiful peach-pink color. The cooler it can be opened the better will be the color.

Tobacco stems must not be used for fumigating, as they would burn the spiræa foliage badly, but the tobacco papers are all right. Insects seldom trouble spiræas. Be sure you give them an abundant water supply. C. W.

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

WE WILL BE GLAD TO QUOTE ON APPLICATION PRICES ON ALL THE NEWER AND STANDARD VARIETIES—STRONG, GRAFTED PLANTS READY IN MARCH

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

CLEVELAND.

The Cleveland public was treated to an elegant show at the Hollenden hotel as a feature of the work of the Cleveland Florists' Club. The retailers made a fine display, arranged attractively on tables.

The James Eadie Co. showed Crimson Brilliant, Yellow Prince and La Reine tulips, which were tastefully arranged and finished off with ribbons to match each variety. A unique exhibit was also staged by this company, which consisted of a cradle effectively trimmed with corsages of Killarney roses and valley.

On the table arranged by the J. M. Gasser Co. were clusters of lilacs, forget-me-nots, acacia, cherries and heather. A blue bowl placed in one corner contained goldfish with natural butterflies placed here and there on the brim.

The Jones-Russell Co. had a frame, back of which was placed a nosegay made of tight-budded Ward roses, forget-me-nots, acacia and the acacia foliage. This was tied with a large bow of Dresden ribbon and made a beautiful picture.

S. N. Pentecost showed some excellent hydrangea and daffodil plants.

A basket artistically filled with spring flowers was shown by Knoble Bros. Pink tulips, jonquils, daffodils, freesias, mignonette, Sunburst and Ward roses, primroses, violets, maidenhair ferns and pussy willows were all tastefully arranged in the basket.

A large art vase filled with Carnation Philadelphia, grown by the Brookline Floral Co., was shown by the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co. Prosperity, Keizerskroon, Yellow Prince, Couronne d'Or and Thomas Moore tulips were also shown by this exhibitor. A shallow bowl filled with cattleyas, which were superb, completed its exhibit.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange staged a large basket filled with extra fine Killarney roses. A fine display of carnations, which were grown by Claude Tyler, of North Olmsted, O., also was shown.

Smith & Fetters Co. had a large basket filled with white snapdragons, Hoosier Beauty roses and maidenhair. Ribbons matching the roses in color were used to trim the basket.

On W. A. Calhoun's table was a white porcelain bowl with a vase in the center, which was filled with allium and Farleyense. The bowl was filled with violets.

Hart Bros. showed a beautiful John Waterer rhododendron.

The McCallum Co. had a large exhibit of Marie Louise violets.

Carl Hagenburger staged six specimen plants of acacia, Butterfly sweet peas, violets and Philadelphia carnations.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. had baskets filled with several varieties of roses, carnations and tulips.

The Kirchner Floral Co. had a large variety of highly colored cinerarias with fine foliage.

The Naumann Co. had an effective exhibit of hyacinths in pans and Primula obconica plants.

The Market.

There have been a good many funerals during the week and these have kept the market pretty well cleaned up. In general, business is not quite so brisk as it was before Lent. All the florists are busy, however, preparing for Easter. They all agree that Easter is likely to be a record-breaker this year. At present there are plenty of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi in pots and pans. Violets also are plentiful and of excellent quality. One of the local florists has been supplying the Twenty-five-cent Store with potted hyacinths, which have seemed to sell well.

Various Notes.

Williams the Florist has been doing a large amount of funeral work lately.

Post & Gray have a large crop of splendid violets, for which they find a ready market. They report business as good.

Spencer peas of first-class quality are being sent to this market by S. E. Shaw, of Kempton street, North Dartmouth.

Fred Reynolds says business with him is good. He has a fine crop of sweet peas coming along. They will be in good crop for Easter.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society met in the Library building March 1. W. M. P.

Oakwood, Ill.—A greenhouse, 20x100 feet, has been erected by Charles Hewitt, at his property at Blue Corners, and is now being stocked.

A recent visitor remarked while passing along our propagating bed filled with carnation cuttings, "Why, you don't seem to lose any cuttings at all!" You see, it's this way:—we select our cuttings to a uniform size. That gets them all in about the same stage of growth, hence they root evenly and very few of them are lost. They are bound to be vigorous under those conditions, don't you think? We have in sand now, most of them ready for immediate shipment:

MARCH!

A much used word at present, sometimes meaning victory and as often meaning defeat. We would apply it to profit and "hit up" a continuous march throughout the whole of the old, blowy month now with us. Decide upon making some extra money this spring and summer on snapdragon and begin sowing seed at once. Our Silver Pink will come first, and if you want the other colors we have them. But Silver Pink is the one for show and profit. It is not a mite dwarf and every one of the dozens of flower spikes produced will be of salable length. Messrs. Jagger & Halsey, of Westhampton, N. Y., say that it is the heaviest producer of cut flowers out of doors, and the best seller they have seen. This is the story of all who have tried it. Get ready for a winning march.

Price of seed of my original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00.

We still have at sacrifice prices a few good plants that will crop for Memorial. Silver Pink seedlings, $3.00 per 100; 200 for $5.00; $25.00 per 1,000. Yellow, Garnet, and Nelrose, $4.00 per 100; 300 for $10.00.

All orders cash. Free directions. Make up your order, remembering that we grow snapdragons, not only in March, but every other month of the year.

LANCASTER, PA.

Last week opened with springlike weather, most welcome to the growers, but March came in like a lion. Business among the retailers, however, has been quite good.

George Goldbach had a pretty window display of daffodils, which he grows extensively.

H. A. Schroyer's display of bulbous stock in pans and boxes was of extra fine quality.

B. F. Barr & Co. had an unusually attractive window decoration last week. It consisted of calendulas and showed many dainty and novel methods of arranging these old-fashioned annuals for home use.

We regret to record the death of Mrs. M. E. Hammond, mother of Walter A. Hammond.

The decorations for the banquet given by the Young Republicans at the Stevens House, in honor of Governor Brumbaugh and our fellow townsman, Lieutenant Governor Frank McClain, were furnished by B. F. Barr & Co. and H. A. Schoryer.

There was an elaborate display of flowers at the funeral of W. U. Hensel, former attorney-general of Pennsylvania. All the florists in the city had a share of the orders.

Mr. McUttley, of Harrisburg, Pa., was a visitor this week.

We trust no one interested in the florists' business will fail to attend the next meeting of the Florists' Club, March 18. Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, will give an address on "Are You Ready?" Those who have previously heard Mr. Grakelow know what a treat there is in store for those who attend. H. K. R.

Shenandoah, Ia.—The new store building, with the greenhouses in the rear, of the Shenandoah Greenhouses is nearly completed. O. B. Stevens says that he expects to occupy it in time to handle the Easter trade there. The additional glass doubles the area of the firm, and the store offers more commodious and convenient quarters than the present place. St. Valentine's day trade was good.

PARK RIDGE, ILL.

The old Ahrnsfelt property at Orchard place, consisting of 20,000 feet of glass, has been purchased by Walter J. Pasvogel for carnation growing. He will not, however, take possession until July, as Hunt Bros. have a lease extending to the last of June.

The little daughter of A. S. Tunsberg is slowly recovering from a severe case of typhoid fever. She has been confined to her bed five weeks. There has been an epidemic of the disease.

Gladiolus bulbs to the number of 3,000, for outdoor growing, and 3,000 plants of Spanish iris will be added to Emil Ehrhart's stock this spring. This is a new venture for Mr. Ehrhart, as he has never grown them on his own grounds before. He is now getting his heaviest pick of violets, his staple crop.

Emil Buettner expects to visit the International Flower Show to be held in New York beginning March 17. He says he can kill two birds with one stone this way, as he has friends there he wishes to visit.

William Pasvogel is thinking of building two greenhouses, each 28 x 150 feet, on his 10-acre tract this spring. He intends to grow nothing but his specialty, Enchantress carnations.

Plans for a section of a new house, and for a new propagating house, are occupying some of the spare time with Schultz Bros.

No more violets for Gustave Stege after this year. He only tried them as an experiment, but he says he is going to give all of his space in the future to his old love, carnations.

The two sons of Gus Ehrhart, who have been down with typhoid fever for a month, are slowly improving.

Only one complaint can be heard from Klug & Stahmer: They do not have enough pansies and violets to supply the demand on them. So they are seriously considering the building of another house this year. N.

Huron, S. D.—The Huron Greenhouse Co., which was recently incorporated, is adding a 20-foot house to its range. Trade is fairly good here, although the weather has been cold and disagreeable.

Spirit Lake, Ia.—Judson M. Klein, proprietor of the Spirit Lake Greenhouses, has completed another greenhouse, 20x70 feet, which will be used exclusively for bedding plants. Mr. Klein now has about 10,000 feet of glass. He devotes most of his time to growing cut flowers, and reports business excellent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Balmy days last week tended to make business slightly better and cut flowers moved with more celerity than for several weeks. Prices are low, but the supply is good and advantage is being taken thereof.

Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, which was postponed from December, was held February 22, in Swarts Lodge hall, about fifty members and guests being present. During the evening an informal entertainment was provided by the following: Benjamin Whitaker, pianist; John Canning, Philip F. Lavery, John White and James Dillon, vocalists, monologists and speakers. Cornelius G. Hartstra, president of the club, officiated as toastmaster, and at the conclusion of the banquet the entire company was called upon to join in singing the Star Spangled Banner. In the absence of the secretary, William E. Chappell, who was detained on account of illness, Robert Johnston filled the position during the brief business session that preceded the festivities. The committee of arrangements consisted of Robert Johnston and Alexander Macrae.

Various Notes.

Smith the Florist had the flowers and decoration for the French ball and concert at Elks' Emporium March 1.

The Quality Florist Shop, at Pawtucket, has secured a new automobile for its delivery department.

Maurice Miller slipped in front of his store February 25 and fractured his right arm. He went to the hospital for treatment.

Charles Hunt has been confined to the house for several days, threatened with pneumonia.

John Macrae has the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances in the serious illness of his wife, whose recovery is doubtful.

George T. McCullough, of East Providence, joined the ranks of the benedicts last week and, with his bride, made a honeymoon trip to New York.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was a business visitor in New York and Philadelphia last week.

Edgar L. Nock had a narrow escape from serious injury a few days ago, when his automobile came in collision with another machine. He was considerably shaken up, but not seriously hurt. W. H. M.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Market.

Cold weather has kept the florists busy shoveling coal the last few days, though before that mild, springlike temperatures seemed to be the vogue.

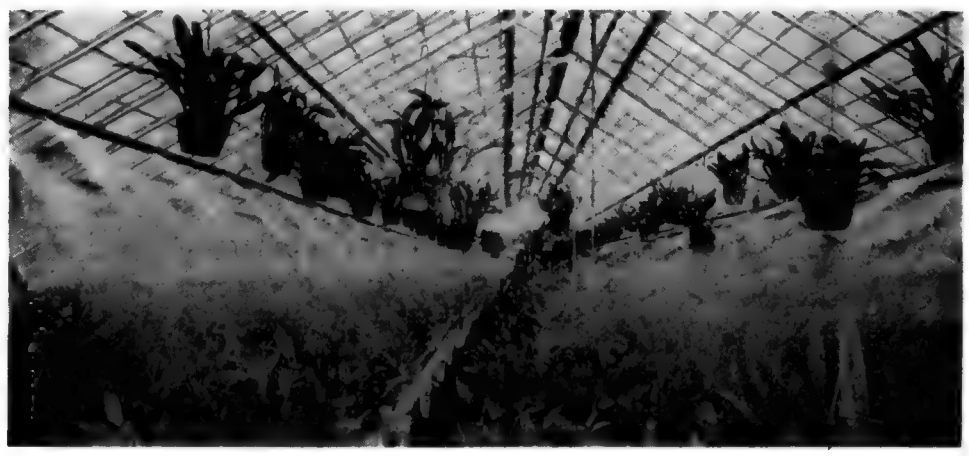
St. Valentine's day and February 22 helped the trade to dispose of large quantities of cut flowers and plants. All the florists advertised flowers as Cupid's aid in carrying love messages to wives, mothers and sweethearts. For Washington's birthday, red, white and blue hatchets adorned many windows and delicious looking artificial cherries reminded one of the famous cherry tree. Both days gave florists a chance to show what they could do in the line of decorations, for various halls had to be made ready for the numerous festivities.

The next thing is Easter. Various growers are looking anxiously at the lilies and searching for buds, to make sure the flowers will be ready when the important time arrives. Carnations are at their best, with large flowers and long stems, but the supply is not equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

In Mark Aitken's greenhouses, at Agawam, are to be found some good azaleas and Easter lilies and an exceptionally fine bench of Silver Pink snapdragons, which will be ready for the Easter season. His roses, carnations, violets, etc., are looking fine.

William Schlatter, who was recently operated on for appendicitis, is much improved.



T. F. Sheehan has been rushed with funeral work for the last few weeks.

The Posey Shop reports a successful business, especially in the holiday and Saturday sales.

Louis Robinson is turning out some fine bulbous stock. He is, without exception, the largest grower of this kind of stock in this part of the state and has no difficulty in disposing of all he produces.

In N. F. Higgins' greenhouses, on Pine street, are to be found some fine carnations, which have yielded unusually well this season. The yield was larger than last year by several thousands, due to a different method of culture. Here, also, are to be found over 1,000 pots of lilies in anticipation of Easter trade, and a large number of geraniums for Memorial day.

Marshall Headle, proprietor of the Adams greenhouses, has a fine lot of geraniums and other bedding plants which will be in readiness for the spring trade. F. J. C.

Most of Antoine Schultheis' Houses at Whitestone, L. I., are Skinner System Equipped.

Cut Down Expenses
Save Water—Save Labor
Water Your Orchid Houses with the Skinner System of Irrigation

Antoine Schultheis says he cuts down both his water and labor cost in watering his orchids with the Skinner System.

Not only does he strongly endorse it for watering, but puts great emphasis on its value in filling the air with moisture.

So fine is the spray, that every part of every plant can be reached without the least injury to the delicate flowers.

The distribution is even and thorough.

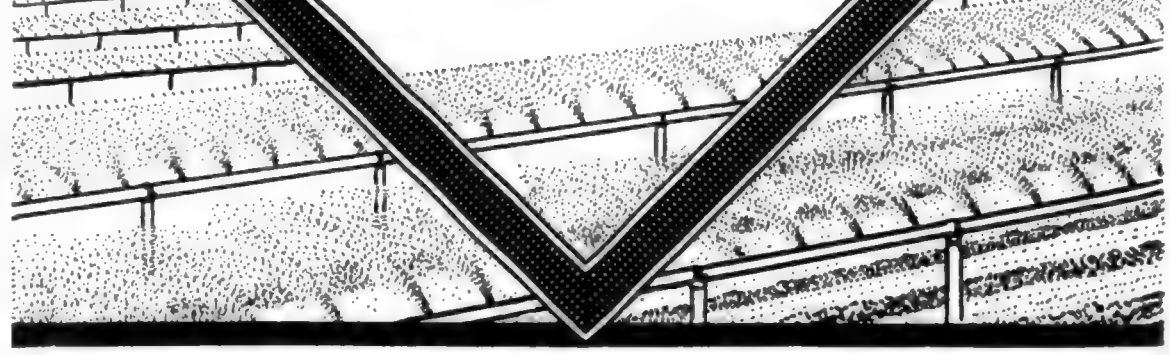
We will sell you the Skinner System equipment, which includes the Scatter Mist Nozzles, the Turning Unions and the Roller Hangers, and a drilling machine.

The galvanized pipe you can buy and drill it yourself for the nozzles, if you wish. Or we can furnish it fully equipped, all ready to set right up.

SPECIAL OFFER

For so little as $11.75 we will send you a fully equipped, Complete Portable line of 50 feet for a tryout.

It will have quick acting couplings, so each length of pipe can be easily disconnected.



If you send cash with order, we will pay the freight or send you two sets of nozzles. The greenhouse nozzles for inside use, and the outdoor nozzles for outside use, so that the line can be tried out in both places.

100 feet will cost you $23.00.

An acre $125.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been a surprise to most of us in the way it has been keeping up for the last two weeks. Funeral work has been heavy. Stock has been unusually good, especially such roses as the Killarneys, Richmond, Sunburst and Ward. Home-grown Beauties have been scarce here and the shipped in stock has been of poor quality. Carnations are in fair supply, but are usually cleaned up early, as the demand for them is always heavy, regardless of other stock in the market. Bulbous stock is plentiful and is generally cleaned up fairly well. Some fine daffodils and jonquils are in the market, and a good lot of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. Valley is a little more plentiful. Violets are moving nicely and a good supply is on hand, as a rule.

Potted plants are selling well, as there is a large variety to pick from now. The bulbous stock in pans has helped to fill up the tables, along with azaleas, primroses, cinerarias, cyclamens, etc.

Various Notes.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business satisfactory, with a good line of stock to work on. While the firm was putting up a decoration at the Columbus Club, the ladder on which Fred Linnecker was working broke and he had a severe fall, but is reported as getting along as well as could be expected.

Underwood Bros. report a heavy business in funeral work.

The Indianola Florists say nearly all their business lately has been funeral work.

The Munk Floral Co. is handling a nice lot of primroses; the quality is considerably above the average.

Charles Buehler, formerly of Columbus but now with E. J. Gould, of London, O., was a visitor here last week, looking up old friends. J. M.

St. Paul, Minn.—A display of bulbous stock is to be the feature of the next meeting of the St. Paul Florists' Club, March 9, at 318 Minnesota street.

Hinsdale, Ill.—Among the enthusiastic supporters of the John Baer tomato is M. Fleming. He says he had unqualified success growing the variety outdoors last year, and he is trying them in the greenhouses this year.

Our Square Paper Dirt Bands are the original of all that are on the market today. All others being sold are imitations of these we advertise, and some of the imitations being sold are made of cheap paper, costing only about half as much as our heavy stock. We sell no experiments. Ours have been tried out by long use in the greenhouse. They will stand up in any wet and heat as long as wanted. Samples of all sizes FREE.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Dear Sirs: You may send me 70,000 two-inch Dirt Bands instead of 60,000. I enclose a check for same. If you will send me a few circulars and price lists I will distribute them among my friends. We have a florists' club in our county of about sixty members.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., 135,000 2-inch dirt bands.

393% MORE EARLY FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7⅝ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

CHICAGO FUEL MARKET.

"There was no new business in the smokeless coal trade" at Chicago during the last week in February, says the Black Diamond, "with buying extremely light, contractors taking only their minimum requirements and in some instances even less. Prices are still firm at $1.40 on mine run among the bigger operators, but smaller producers are accepting any reasonable offer. The Illinois output is being limited to an average of about two days a week at the mines and operators see no improvement ahead for March. Circular prices are maintained, but no quantity of tonnage is moving. A few weak-kneed dealers are quoting below circular and have fairly well cleared up their stocks by so doing, but even at that there is almost no business, the bottom having fallen out of the market."

BUILDING AND PIPING.

I am contemplating the building of two greenhouses, one of them 20x100 and the other 25x110. They will have concrete walls, eight inches thick, and the side walls will be six feet high. Would the houses be satisfactory without any glass in the sides? I shall install an overhead system of hot water heating. There is a 4-inch main pipe through the shed, which is forty feet long. Should there be a 5-inch main? What size of flows and how many should there be in each house? How many 2-inch returns will be needed? The outside temperature here may drop as low as 15 degrees below zero, but only for about a week during the entire winter. How deep is it necessary to dig for the foundations of the concrete walls, so as to keep the walls from heaving?

L. M. & S.—Nova Scotia.

The letter does not state the temperature desired in the houses, but for about 60 degrees I would prefer to run a 4-inch main flow to each of the houses and would use returns of the same size. This would be preferable to putting in one 5-inch flow to supply both of the houses.

For the 20-foot house use three 2½-inch flow pipes and eleven 2-inch returns for a temperature of 60 degrees, while eight or nine returns would answer for 50 degrees. For the 25-foot house use three 2½-inch flows and fourteen returns for 60 degrees and ten or eleven for 50 degrees. Run one of the 2½-inch flows on each plate and the other about two or three feet below the ridge, with about one-half of the returns either on the side walls or under the side benches, and the others distributed under the middle benches.

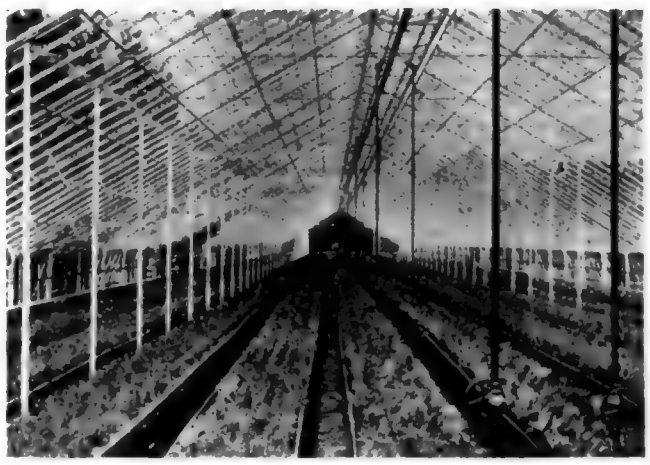
It would be well to have at least three feet of glass in each of the side walls, in which case there should be an additional return under each of the side benches. As a rule it is not neces-

WHEN YOU BUY—GET A KROESCHELL
"THE BOILER OF GENUINE EFFICIENCY"

Our Boilers were installed to heat 2,304,450 sq. ft. glass in 1914

The Kroeschell is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

10,788,000 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years.



The Kroeschell has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell with the same piping and with less fuel.

The Kroeschell is sold direct from our factory to users. This eliminates the unnecessary greenhouse builder's profit.

Hundreds of Florists' Review readers are using the Kroeschell Boiler, and mighty is their praise. The year of 1914 brought an enormous number of new customers who saw our boiler in operation at other places. We attribute the large sales of this season to the good work the Kroeschell Boiler is doing everywhere.

With our policy—"the customer's interest first"—perfection of construction—factory-to-user prices—honest and "true-blue" boiler ratings—you simply cannot lose.

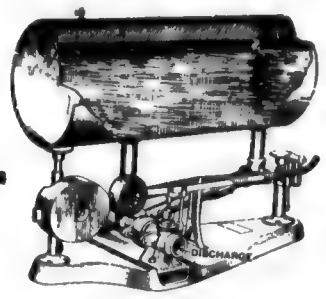
A FAMOUS LONG ISLAND ESTABLISHMENT

During the last cold wave, 6 above zero with a 90-mile gale blowing, one end of houses was as warm as the other, no variation at all, which speaks well for your heating plan.



There are no remarks or suggestions to make regarding your boilers, as we consider same the acme of perfection for greenhouse hot water heating in every way.

The steam boiler you furnished us last summer for pumping and heating purposes is certainly a "GEM." An easier, more effective as well as economical boiler as to fuel consumption I have not seen.

sary to excavate more than two feet for the side walls, especially if the ground outside is graded so that the water will be turned away from the wall.

WILL REARRANGE THE PIPING.

Will you kindly give me some advice on the heating of my greenhouse, which is 20x50 feet? The side walls are six feet high; the lower half of the walls consists of concrete blocks; the upper half is glass. The house is twelve feet two inches high to the ridge. It runs east and west. The boiler is at the west end of the greenhouse, at the back of the residence. It is a steel tubular boiler, thirty-eight inches in diameter and six feet high, and contains eighty-five 2-inch flues. The top of the boiler is on a level with the greenhouse floor. I had a 4-inch flow and a 4-inch return cut in the side of the boiler, so as to heat with hot water. The 4-inch flow and return pipes run along the west end of the greenhouse. From the 4-inch main a 2-inch pipe runs under each side of the middle bench, and each is connected with three 2-inch returns. There is also one 2-inch pipe under each gutter, each connected with three 1¼-inch returns.

The 4-inch flow and return pipes have packed joints; these joints leak and I wish to take the pipes out, put in pipes with screw joints and change to the overhead system. I wish to make arrangements, also, to heat another house which I propose to build and which will run parallel with the present house and be connected with its south side. Please tell me how much more pipe to put in for a night temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. The space between the top of the boiler and the roof of the boiler room is eleven feet; does that allow the expansion tank to be placed high enough? It holds thirty gallons. I enclose some photographs which will probably give you a better idea of the house than a rough sketch would.

O. B.—Ohio.

To heat a greenhouse 20x50, with three feet of glass in each wall, I would use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the other about two or three feet below the ridge. To each of these flows connect a coil of four 2-inch returns. One coil may be on each side wall or under the side

The Value of a Thermostat

LET A FLORIST TELL IT

HERE is what a greenhouse man said in a letter to The Review: "The value of a thermostat in a greenhouse may possibly interest you, so I take the present opportunity of explaining its advantages. Three weeks ago I installed a Standard thermostat, made by the Standard Thermometer Co., putting it in my rose house, 200 feet from the residence. After sundown each day I set the low contact hand at 57 degrees and the high contact hand at 65 degrees. The black temperature hand, to record 60 degrees, plays between these figures. Should the temperature rise or fall, the alarm bell, just over my bed, rings loudly. I consider this instrument a boon to any florist with a medium-sized range, for it dispenses with the services of a night fireman. With correct firing, I can keep a steady temperature of 60 degrees at night in the rose house and also in four other houses, in all about 5000 feet of glass."—THOMAS E. TOWERSON, Spring Station, Ky.

benches, according to the arrangement of the house. The pipes that make up the other coil may be distributed under the middle bench.

Connect the expansion tank with the highest part of the system, which should be arranged with the flow pipes running downhill, making connection with each of the flow pipes unless they start as one main flow. The expansion tank should be located two feet above the highest part of the system. The mains should be used as radiating surface.

TARDY RETURN OF WATER.

I have a new range of four houses. Two of them are each 35x300, one is 22x200 and one is 9x100. The boilers, which are sectional, are located at the southeast corner and the water line is thirty inches below the surface at the end of the return. My steam fitter insisted on a "wet" return and placed it so that the highest point of the return is six inches below the water line in the boilers. The main steam line is 6-inch and it extends through the workroom, sixty-five feet; next through the 22-foot house a distance of fifty feet; then at an angle across the 22-foot house and across one 35-foot house, terminating three feet inside the second 35-foot house. It drains from the boiler and is reduced to 3-inch and dropped directly into the return at a point thirty feet from the end of the return. The 3-inch coupling line between the end of the main and the return is always open. Should it have a valve of some sort? The return is extremely tardy and I intend to install a Morehead return trap. Would it be advisable to raise the return?

When we fire up and raise five or six pounds of steam, the water spouts about two feet high out of the air valves before the check valves act. It occurs to me that the pressure of direct steam via the 3-inch connecting pipe is retarding the discharge of condensation through the checks, and that 155 feet of 3-inch pipe filled with water allows the water to be cooled too much before being again converted into steam.

F. W. A.—Ohio.

It is difficult to determine, from the description and sketches furnished, just how the flow pipes are arranged or where they connect with the coils. It appears that there is a 3-inch connection between the main flow and the return. This, I infer, is nothing more than a drip pipe. A considerably smaller pipe would answer for this purpose and I would either put in a smaller pipe or a valve by which the size may be reduced. This will be particularly necessary with a "wet" return.

My suggestion is, however, that the return be raised so that it will drain back to the boiler. I would give the return a fall of one inch in twenty feet, and keep it two feet above water level until it reaches the boiler room. If this can be done, good results can be obtained with a gravity system, but unless the upper end of the return is three feet above the water level I prefer to use either a steam trap, or an automatic pump, worked preferably by electricity, for returning the water.

The Market.

Business in general has been pretty good during the last week. The cloudy weather has kept stock somewhat scarce. The demand has been good, despite the fact that Lent is here.

The supply of roses is a little heavier than it has been, and the color is better than ever. Carnations are comparatively scarce, and are moving at fairly good prices. The quality is fine and the percentage of splits is small. The demand is unusually heavy.

Valley is overabundant. The quality has improved. The demand, however, is light. Sweet peas are coming in more heavily every day and the quality is excellent. Some exceedingly fine Spencers are seen. The stock is moving freely, and little or none is held over from day to day. Spring stock is arriving in fine shape and is moving fairly well. Lilies have become more plentiful and are cleaning up well.

Various Notes.

Currie Bros. Co., which recently moved its seed store to 384 East Water street, is moving the flower store from 108 Wisconsin street to the same location.

Henry A. Schimmels, formerly employed by Gust. Rusch & Co., has opened a retail store on Twelfth street, where he is busy putting things in shape.

Holton & Hunkel Co. is issuing an advance price list showing the large variety of plants the firm has to offer for Easter trade.

William Zimmermann reports that his business during February more than held its own with last year.

Miss Irma Jens, with Holton & Hunkel Co., was confined to her home for a few days last week. She has resumed her duties. H. J. S.

Charleston, S. C.—T. T. Bolger has bought out the Bolger & Ernest Co., of which he was president, the successor of the Connelley-McCarty Co., the oldest florists' establishment in Charleston. Mr. Bolger has moved from 296 King street to 88 Society street, where he has opened an exceedingly pretty and up-to-date store. He reports a steady increase in business. With him, as designer and salesman, is Alex. S. Sawyer, formerly with Gude Bros. Co., of Washington, D. C.

The Market.

As a whole, everyone seems satisfied with the balance on the books for February. Out-of-town business was good last week, but local business was not up to the average. The warm weather has caused people to start work in the gardens, and seeds of all kinds are in big demand. Roses were scarce last week and brought a fair price. There are indications that these will be more plentiful next week. Carnations are more plentiful and of better quality. Dutch bulbous stock is coming in heavily, which is fortunate, as the market was kept clean all the week.

Various Notes.

From general reports, there will be plenty of Easter lilies and pot plants to meet the demand of the retailers for Easter.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that business is good and that more orders for stock are received than can be filled. The consignments of roses and carnations have been slow; the demand exceeds the supply.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting a fine lot of spring stock. Funeral work last week was heavy. Potted lilies for Easter are of exceptionally good quality here.

Arthur Newell says last month was the best he has had in the pot plant line. He sold more than in any other month, except for the holiday trade. He is well pleased with business for the close of the month.

Biedermann & Son are busy with spring bedding plants. Their houses are well filled with bedding stock, except the space devoted to Easter plants.

William Foith is cutting some extra fine carnations. He is well satisfied with the success he has had with roses so far this year. W. J. B.

New Berlin, O.—G. L. Nidy has completed one of his houses and is preparing for spring. He feels that he is assured of a fair business, as he is located in a rural district that long has needed a greenhouse establishment.

FLORISTS' REVIEW
When Writing Advertisers

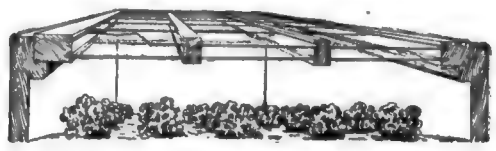
BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The first ten days of Lent brought a decided slump in business in the cut flower line and, owing to the bright weather, stock of all kinds is becoming more plentiful. As the demand has fallen off, prices have dropped. Roses are among the worst sufferers. Carnations are still holding up in price fairly well. Bulbous stock, especially tulips, is too plentiful and hard to move. Lilies, valley and violets, both single and double, are hanging at a low price. The wholesale stores disposed of quantities to the street venders February 27, but even this left a large surplus on hand, as the weather was cold and they could not handle a large amount of stock.

Various Notes.

Walter Conroy has given up the store he formerly occupied at 853 West Baltimore street.



Leo Niessen, accompanied by George Burton, both of Philadelphia, paid a visit last week to William E. McKissick, manager of the local branch of the Leo Niessen Co., and also went over to Brooklyn to look over the rose range of Lehr Bros. These boys are growing quite a lot of Mr. Burton's new pink sport of My Maryland, Thora, which promises quite a heavy spring crop. A house of Killarney also showed up well.

E. W. Pierce took a trip last week to Boston and stopped at some of the other northern cities on his way home. He is quite optimistic over the business outlook and says the Easter trade will be heavy.

C. E. Akehurst & Son's carnation houses are in good shape. Their new variety, Mrs. C. E. Akehurst, is giving a heavy cut and the flowers are of good size and color. This variety can be cut with a long stem, which also supports the flower in good shape.

Charles H. Cook and John Harmon, of Catonsville, took a trip to Washington in Mr. Cook's machine last week to look over some of the greenhouse establishments. Mr. Cook says one of the rose houses of Gude Bros. Co. looked like a wheat field, there were so many buds and flowers showing.

The next club meeting will be held March 8 at the club rooms. As this is election night, the meeting will be called at 7 p. m. The annual banquet will be held at Hotel Rennert at 8:30 p. m. Tickets can be had from any of the banquet committee, I. H. Moss, James Boone or F. C. Bauer, on the night of the banquet. W. F. E.

Two layers of glass instead of one

One small inexpensive greenhouse made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash.

Early plants make the profitable garden

You cannot possibly have vegetables ready for the early prices or flower beds to bloom right unless you use hot-beds and cold frames for starting and expediting them.

Now is the time

Sunlight Double Glass Sash make the earliest and strongest plants at the least cost of labor and money. They are complete without mats or shutters. As they are never covered the plants get all the light and warmth that the sun affords and are secure against the cold night and day.

Expert gardeners and florists, men who know from experience, look upon the Sunlight Double Glass Sash as the standard of efficiency in gardening.

Immediate shipment is made and freights are equalized to the customer according to the distance. Ask about this when you write—and write today.

The Market.

The demand for stock shows little falling off from that immediately preceding Lent. The beginning and close of each week are generally good, while at the middle of the week demand is somewhat slow. Shipping business is good. The supply of roses is larger than for weeks and they meet with a fair market. American Beauty receipts, too, are somewhat heavier than they have been. Carnations, although heavier supplies are received, continue to clean up daily. Easter lilies are becoming plentiful. The pick of sweet peas is large and of high quality. The supply of bulbous stock is fully up to the demand. Other offerings include violets, double and single; valley, orchids, callas, rubrum lilies, forget-me-nots and primulas.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

STEAMING UP THE EASTER SELLING

The man who doesn't order stock till after he's made the sale never gets far in the florists' business. You've got to be ready. And having the stock isn't enough; you've got to tell the people—you've got to advertise to fire up the business engine.

NOT so many years ago the retail florists trusted to luck and a bright window for their Easter business. Some still do. Perhaps in certain cases it's justified, by strong and increasing demand with little competition, but numbers each year join the ranks of the advertisers. It might almost be said it now is universally recognized that it pays for a florist to advertise. The only doubt is as to the best method. Pretty nearly every florist among those who do not advertise is ready to do something along that line if somebody will show him how. The showing is best if it takes the work off the florist's shoulders, as well as supplying the ideas. The florist stands ready to pay the bills if someone will show him results.

Expert Help.

There are any number of people who stand ready to help, for a consideration, and the florist who is not prepared to give his advertising the necessary time and mental effort will do well to call in one of the bright young men who do such work for a fee. And do it now, else it will be too late for Easter.

Practically every retail florist recognizes the importance of making holiday preparations in good time, but the last detail to have attention almost invariably is the advertising. It should be attended to as promptly as any other matter of importance. It may be true that some last-minute advertising is good advertising and successful, but it is undeniable that nothing ever was lost by making plans early; good copy isn't usually written on the back of an envelope while out to lunch, although a bright idea often is so recorded, nor is the best typesetting done, as a rule, on the ad that reaches the newspaper just as the forms are closing.

Planning How.

No one but the store buyer can advise on what to advertise for Easter, and none but the man who directs the store policy is in position to say how it should be advertised. There are almost as many ways to advertise as there are types of flower stores. There is the little neighborhood store that almost nobody outside the block ever heard of. It surely needs advertising as badly as the big store downtown, but its entire Easter receipts wouldn't pay for a page in a metropolitan daily. Its recourse, therefore, is to circulars distributed from door to door. The store up the street, putting on a little stronger front, will use an attractive piece of printing, mailing it to all regular customers and a selected list of desirable people. An excellent means of starting the buying early is to send out a letter inviting people to come ahead of the rush, while the assortment is complete and the display space not crowded. If the clerks have customers they call their own, it will be still more effective if the salesman sign under the proprietor's typewritten signature.

Do It Now.

Each of these methods is susceptible of variation to fit the individual needs of the business to be advertised, but they demand early preparation and entail much careful work. The longer one puts it off the surer he is to have final recourse to the newspapers, or to pass the chance.

The newspaper affords the quick and easy way to advertise. A man who has something to say, in a business way, can tell his story to more people and in shorter time by using the newspaper than by any other method.

Doubtless the reason why florists do not do more advertising in the newspapers is that so many florists are located at one side of town and draw their patronage, not from the whole population of the place, but from some certain section of it; they feel that the newspaper, with its general circulation, reaches too many people who are not apt to become buyers, the rate being high when only the effective circulation is considered. There is, of course, some fact in the theory, but florists with stores in the center of town are rapidly increasing their use of newspaper space and all will agree that for the man who has put off planning, the newspaper affords the one means of getting quick action.

Cooperative Ads Radiate the Modern Business Spirit.

An Excellent Eye-Catcher.

The newspaper is organized for speed. The florist can call in the solicitor at the close of the business day and have his ad appear in the morning edition. Of course it's better to take several days to planning the ad, writing the copy and setting the type, but the newspaper gives the advertiser what he wants when he wants it. It reaches more people for less money and in quicker time than does any other medium.

Working Together.

The coöperative style of advertising has had a big run since The Review began showing how it is done. It meets the objection of the man who says his business does not warrant the use of large space; also, it meets the objection of the one who says his store is off too far to one side of town, for he can combine his effort with that of the man on the other side so that each gets the benefit of a big display at half price, or a third, a quarter or a tenth, according to how many are in on it.

The coöperative ad exemplifies the modern tendencies in business. It wouldn't have been possible in the old days, when every man distrusted the others in the business. It isn't combination in restraint of trade, but combination to create business, to bring the uses of flowers to the attention of the people and to do it more forcefully than would be possible through individual effort.

Most of the coöperative ads are worked up by the newspapers. Phone the advertising manager of the best paper in your town and he will put a solicitor at work on the details—take the whole thing off your shoulders and fix up a deal whereby a few dollars will cover each man's share of a strong full page display. But he will need a little time, so don't delay.

Going It Alone.

There is scarcely any city so small the coöperative style of advertising can not be worked successfully. If there are half a dozen florists in the town, it can be done. Trouble comes only in the cities where the florists are big enough to feel like going it alone; there they buy big space for individual use and fill it each to his liking. And it rarely fails to pay, and pay well. Some will advertise prices, others will feature service. It is easy to see that the more direct and specific the offer made the more direct and tangible the response will be. It requires careful thought, so don't put it off. It's one of the most important things to plan early.

SEA MOSS IS SCARCE.

The trade has known for some time that so-called Japanese air plant, or sea moss, is scarce, but the United States government has just found it out. As witness the following from Washington:

"According to information just received by Secretary of Commerce Redfield from the Bureau of Fisheries, one of the minor consequences of present conditions in Europe is the practical stoppage of the supply of sea moss, of which several hundred thousand pounds,

Where Dignity is Paramount.

The Department Store Style.

Street Front of Detroit's Newest Retail Flower Store.

valued at upwards of $50,000, have been imported annually, principally from France and Germany.

"Sea moss is the popular name of several kinds of small marine animals which grow in colonies, of branching, plantlike form, and their commercial value is due to their possession of a horny skeleton which retains the general shape of the growth after the small amount of animal matter has disintegrated. These skeletons, which are normally dark colored, are dyed and employed for decorative and millinery purposes.

"Sea mosses, believed to be equal in quality to the imported, grow in profusion in various places on both coasts of the United States, particularly in New England, where they are often taken on the lines and nets of fishermen. The kinds with large, bushy fronds are the most valuable. It is believed the United States can develop a domestic supply equal in quality to that imported from Germany."

FELTON APPROVES.

R. F. Felton is, let us say, the Charles Henry Fox of London, constantly in search of novelty. Recently he has been using a berried plant that has attracted much attention in decorations. Nobody knew what it was or whence it came, but Mr. Felton has enlightened the curious. He says:

"Regarding the new decorative berry I have been running, I hasten to advise that the name has been pronounced by the Kew authorities to be Solanum aculeatissimum (Ciliatum). If it were not for the horrible thorns with which it is armed, I am certain it would become a most popular winter decorative plant, as the color is beautiful and unique, and the sprays take most decorative and artistic lines. The berries last throughout the winter without water, and do not become dull and dry looking; indeed, those I have had on a mantelpiece in my house for nearly two months are even more intense in color than when I put them there. I am convinced that the first man who grows it well in England, and shows it as full of fruit as I get it from the south, will have the R. H. S. award of merit, as it is one of the most interesting plants that have turned up for some time."

SCHROETER-STAHELIN STORE.

The newest store in Detroit, where the trade interests have been growing at a splendid rate the last few years, is that of the Schroeter-Stahelin Co. Although incorporated, this is practically a partnership undertaking of A. J. Stahelin, the Redfield grower, and Hugo Schroeter, who from boyhood has been associated with his father's retail business. Their store is on Woodward avenue, in an excellent district, surrounded by specialty shops and close to the best residence section of the city. The front is of distinctive design, as will be seen from the accompanying illustration. The store itself is 19 x 43, trimmed in mahogany with fixtures in white enamel. The windows are enclosed, with tile flooring, and have three long, narrow glazed doors that make it possible to keep the windows cool; Mr. Schroeter says cut flowers will last there as long as in a display refrigerator. Business at the new store has been good from the start.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

St. Elmo, Tenn.—To avoid the expense of several large suits that had been filed against him, Fred C. Higley has gone into bankruptcy. Aside from the three greenhouses, 30x150, which were built last June, the property, comprising two large two-story dwellings, two cottages and a barn, has been valued at $50,000, while the entire indebtedness amounts to $15,000 or $16,000. Of this amount, a mortgage for $7,000 has two and one-half years to run, but the other debts are pressing. Mr. and Mrs. Higley hope to sell the greenhouses and land and thus pay off the debts, so that they will be able to keep their home and rental property. A trustee has been appointed, but no date has as yet been appointed for the sale, though one will be set soon. Mrs. Higley has sent out a circular letter to members of the trade, asking for aid.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—A petition in bankruptcy and asking for the appointment of a receiver has been filed by Attorney Neil Crisman against Ira G. Marvin. It is alleged that he is insolvent and that he owes money to W. M. Miller, Plymouth Coal Co., I. L. Dillon, and others. Mr. Marvin did not join in the proceedings and may resist the naming of a receiver.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bouvardia Humboldtii.

To propagate the beautiful and deliciously scented Bouvardia Humboldtii, start one or two of the old plants, which have been resting since the flowering period ended, in a brisk heat. Do not give too much water at the roots, but spray the tops freely. A fine crop of succulent cuttings will soon appear and these can be rubbed off with a heel and easily rooted in a warm cutting bench. These will make nice flowering plants before fall. They will not bloom as will older plants, however. The finest B. Humboldtii are those carried over for three or four years. Root cuttings can also be used, but soft shoots make plants more quickly. The small-flowered red, white and pink bouvardias, both single and double, are best propagated by root cuttings, which soon start in a brisk bottom heat.

Antirrhinums.

Snapdragons in the benches are now carrying an abundance of nice cuttings. Propagate some of these, pot them off, give one pinching and you will have nice stock to sell for bedding out. Have you ever realized that the improved snapdragons, such as Nelrose, Phelps' White, Silver Pink and other named kinds, in addition to being splendid for cutting under glass, are also valuable bedders? They have long been valued as such in Europe and have done specially well near the ocean, but farther inland they also do surprisingly well and you would do well to provide a good stock for your customers the coming planting season. Seedlings are more vigorous than cuttings and it is not too late to sow seeds now to have fine plants in 3-inch pots in May. There are three types of snapdragons—dwarf, intermediate and tall. All are purchasable in a considerable number of colors and if good seed is bought few rogues will be found and the plants will come quite uniform in color and height. For bedding out I consider the intermediate strain the best. You may find some fine varieties you could grow to advantage under glass. Remember, however, that cuttings from outside snapdragons do not root with the ease of those grown indoors. It is a good plan, therefore, to dig up carefully and pot any specially promising plants, and, once these are nicely established, propagate from them.

Antirrhinums can be successfully flowered from November to July, no matter whether they are grown in benches or beds, if they are grown fairly cool, averaging 45 degrees at night, and are carefully watered, fed and disbudded in some measure. By disbudding I mean reducing the number of shoots on plants which throw up a heavy crop, as well as rubbing off some of the shoots which grow on the flowering stems. It is considerable labor to rub off all these side shoots and it is not altogether necessary. They do not seem to weaken the flower spikes and, when the foliage is a little scanty, somewhat improve the appearance of the spikes.

The sun now becomes increasingly strong and plants in raised benches, which have been flowering through the winter, will now be carrying a heavy second crop and will need an abundant water supply, with an occasional top-dressing or soaking of liquid manure. Either half an inch of old cow manure, or pulverized sheep manure mixed with rather moist loam, makes an excellent mulch.

IT IS A CRASSULA.

About ten years ago two little twigs, like the sample I am sending you, were given to me. I planted them and both grew quite large, now looking like dwarf trees. One of them has a little white flower, like sample enclosed, and the bloom lasts for about three months, during midwinter. Can you tell me the name and habit of this plant? I have at present a good many plants, some quite large, but only two have given a sign of blooming. Is there any way in which I can tell which one is going to have flowers?

P. C. M.—Pa.

It is one of the crassulas, probably portulaca. The genus is now called rochea by botanists. A thorough drying, keeping the plants full in the sun for eight to ten weeks before the flowering season, is necessary to make the plants flower well. Grow them in a porous soil, containing broken brick, broken sandstone and coarse loam. When propagating it is well to let cuttings lie in the sun a couple of days to dry well before placing in the sand. There is then less liability of damping off.

SCHIZANTHUS WISETONENSIS.

Please let me know how to grow Schizanthus Wisetonensis. I have small plants just out of seed boxes. Can they be grown from cuttings as well as from seed?

J. P.—N. Y.

This beautiful plant succeeds best in a low temperature. The night temperature should not exceed 45 degrees. Keep your plants potted on, and flower in 6-inch to 8-inch pots, according to how large you wish your plants to grow. Give them a light but rich soil. Once they are well rooted in their last pots, give an abundance of water and liquid manure every four or five days. S. Wisetonensis is the best pot variety, as it is naturally of dwarf habit. While schizanthus can be propagated from cuttings, not nearly as good plants are obtained as by using seedlings.

SOME VINES FOR BOXES.

My customers want something new in blooming vines for porch boxes. Will you please suggest something? Any suggestion will be thankfully received.

J. A. S.—Ill.

The following you will find good: Swainsona galegifolia, alba and rosea; Maurandia Barclaiana, Abutilon Megapotamicum, Ipomœa Heavenly Blue, Thunbergia alata, white, orange and yellow; Cobæa scandens and Vinca major variegata. The petunias and verbenas also are valuable for boxes, as are Lobelia speciosa, tall nasturtiums, Ficus repens and Asparagus Sprengeri.

THE CARNATION; WILL IT COME BACK?

A Well Known Philadelphian Sums up the Past, Present and Future of the Flower that Makes Many Men Their Livelihood

An address by Edmund A. Harvey, of the firm of Alban Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, Pa., delivered March 2, 1915, before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

ONE of the weakest spots, during the present season, in a flower market of unusually low prices, has been the carnation. During the chrysanthemum season we are accustomed to seeing carnations neglected, but by Thanksgiving we expect to find them take their proper place. However, this year we saw practically no improvement at Thanksgiving, and Christmas was remarkable for the lowest carnation prices for many years.

Numerous reasons have been advanced for this condition, some going so far as to say that the divine flower is losing its popular favor and is fast following the violet. While this view is extreme, there are three general causes for the present unprofitable season for carnation growers. They may be summarized as follows:

1. The general business depression, due to tariff changes and the European war.
2. Overproduction.
3. Poor keeping and shipping qualities of many carnations of later years.

Business Blues.

We could scarcely hope for high prices for carnations, or, in fact, for any flower that is largely grown, during a period of so many uncertainties as there have been since August 1, 1914. When the United States Steel Corporation was operating on a basis of thirty-five per cent of capacity, when all railroads were reporting greatly reduced earnings and even the time-tried Pennsylvania's dividend was in doubt; when all business had the blues, it would be unreasonable to expect that the florists should pursue an uninterrupted course of prosperity.

Although many contend that flowers have become a necessity, they are not so fundamentally, and in the face of stationary or advancing cost of food and reduced incomes, or no incomes at all, flowers can be dispensed with readily. So the carnation has not been the only flower to suffer; even the aristocratic orchid has fallen with the rest.

Although the carnation growers have not made the great additions to their establishments that the rosarians have in recent years, still there are more of them and the total increase has amounted to many thousands of square feet and proportionate production or overproduction has fully kept pace with other staple flowers. Again, last summer was unusually favorable for carnations in the field and plants were probably never benched in better condition. The autumn months were practically ideal for building up a strong, healthy foundation and December found nearly every grower with an unusually large cut.

During the last few years we have heard many complaints that carnations have been giving poor satisfaction and many retail stores have ceased to push them at all.

Here is a vital problem that we as growers have to face. We can not blame the retailer if he does not feel kindly toward the carnation when he finds his stock, that was apparently fresh when he bought it, unsalable at the end of twenty-four hours. Nor is the customer who purchases them, and finds them asleep the next morning, likely to go back soon for more.

The Remedies.

Now, what are the remedies for these conditions that confront us?

As to general business, although it has not fully recovered by any means, it is improving and many of the uncertainties are passing away. That great barometer of trade, the steel corporation, is operating at sixty per cent of capacity, as compared with thirty-five per cent in November, and, with a record breaking foreign trade balance of $500,000,000 in our favor since the war started, we may look for a slow but steady improvement in general business. As this comes the florists will certainly get their share.

The problem of overproduction is a difficult one to solve. It is practically impossible to limit the erection of new glass and it is extremely doubtful whether this ever will be done arbitrarily. The only certain limit would seem to be when the prices received by the grower cease to render operation profitable; and the point at which this limit is reached for one may not be so for another.

We might temporarily turn our carnation space to the production of something else, such as greenhouse vegetables, but for the fact that the vegetable growers are faced by the same problem of overproduction and in addition have to meet the increasing competition of the south.

Finally, we come to what would seem to be the real solution of the problem, that of increasing the popularity of the carnation with the flower buying public, and we can only do this by the hearty coöperation of the grower, wholesaler and retailer, and by giving the public full value for its money.

It is unfortunate that there is so much distrust still lingering between the three branches of our business. There should be more coöperation, and we must remember that we are all mutually dependent on one another.

If the retailer thinks someone is a robber when asked $8 or $10 per hundred for carnations at Christmas, let him remember the grower probably thinks the same thing when he sees the consumer paying 75 cents per dozen at a time when the grower is receiving $1.50 or $2 per hundred. Moreover, the retailer can pass the high prices on, while the grower has no one to come back at.

On the other hand, let the grower produce the best he can and put his flowers in the retailer's hand in such condition that he can make a good profit and the consumer will be pleased with his purchase.

It seems to me that many carnations are left on the plants too long before cutting. The longer they stay on the plants in the grower's house the shorter will be their life on the purchaser's table. Almost all carnations will keep and ship better if they are cut just before reaching full maturity. The houses may not look as well, but this is not what the buyer pays for and I do not think there would be so much objection to higher prices at the holidays if the retailer could be sure of getting stock that would keep.

It is right here that we carnation growers are allowing roses to force our product from many retail stores. This is especially true since roses have become more moderate in price.

Promoting Popularity.

Finally, there is the part of the hybridizer and introducer of new varieties in helping to popularize the carnation. Too much effort seems to be spent on attaining size in new carnations. Although this is desirable, if other good points are not sacrificed, keeping and shipping qualities are more important and should have first consideration. The largest carnation ever produced is, when asleep, no better than the old Lizzie McGowan.

Fragrance is another feature that is missing from so many of our new varieties, and one that would be extremely valuable. How many of our carnations now have the fragrance of the Flora Hill?

Again, I would urge the grower to work in closer sympathy with the wholesaler. Let him talk over his problems with his commission man and get his advice as to what the retailer wants and how he wants it. Too many of us are inclined to resent any suggestion or criticism from one who, we may think, knows nothing of our end of the business. None of us knows it all and we must every one strive to take a broader view of affairs. Remember the wholesaler's prosperity depends on our prosperity and we both depend on that of the retailer. So when the commission man makes a suggestion or criticism, we may be sure he is doing so for the benefit of each of us. He may not always be right, and we need not follow his advice, but we can be sure it is given for the purpose of helping us both, and we owe it to him and to ourselves to consider it carefully and without offense.

This problem, then, that of distribution rather than production, is the one that demands our closest attention; it is the problem we must solve before we can obtain the full profit to which the employment of our energy, skill and capital entitles us.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

GUNS AND GROWERS AT GHENT.

By a Belgian Soldier.

Until the outbreak of the war I was an employee at Louis Van Houtte's nurseries, at Ghent. After I was wounded I received my discharge from the Belgian army, and have just reached America direct from Ghent. How the war has affected the horticultural trade there, up to the time of my departure, I will tell you, as follows:

At the end of September there were some small battles at Melle, near Ghent. In a large house of the firm of Bier & Ankersmit some hundreds of palms were destroyed and thousands of lights were broken by shrapnel. Several greenhouses in Melle were heavily damaged by rifle fire.

During the first days of October, with the tidings of the fall of Antwerp, the news reached Ghent that the cactus nurseries of Frantz de Laet, at Contich, were completely destroyed; nothing was left. Other small nurseries in the suburbs of Antwerp suffered greatly. The whole population of Malines (Mechlin) and surrounding villages, all vegetable gardeners, were in flight, and thousands of frames and tomato houses were destroyed there.

October 6, Pays de Waes (Waesland), a district between Ghent and Antwerp, where there are many large nurseries and greenhouses, was abandoned by the population, terrified by the approaching Germans. In that district the plants in the houses suffered from sun and dryness.

The province of Ghent was invaded by the Germans October 12, and the city was abandoned by the allied armies. There were no battles there, and the population was calm, but all the young people were leaving for Holland or France. All the surrounding villages, such as Loochristy, Destelbergen, Meulebeke and Melle, were deserted. All these places have important nurseries, and the plants were left without care for several days.

Present Situation.

Since the Germans have been in Ghent all exportation of plants has been stopped. By application to the kommandantur, the Chambre Syndicale obtained some permits for the exportation of plants to Holland. All the means of communication were so slow and so difficult that little business has been done. All the smaller nurserymen of the Ghent district are ruined; not less than that. For a time there was a shortage of coal; in the latter part of October coal came in, but it was sold at more than double the usual price. The houses are crowded with twice the proper number of plants, and they are dying as a result of standing too close together. The palms and azaleas have lost their leaves. Millions of begonias are unsold. What will become of the Ghent nurseries if the Germans are shelled as they retreat? What will remain of the thousands of greenhouses, of the valuable collections of stove plants and orchids, after a bombardment? These are questions which the growers of Ghent ask themselves every day.

All the young nursery hands are serving their country. A small number have crossed the Holland frontier. In most of the nurseries the older hands are working half days. Great misery exists among the working people. There is great desolation in Ghent, all having relatives in the trenches and being unable to get news of them. In each home there are six to eight German soldiers to be lodged and fed.

From the nursery of Louis Van Houtte, twenty-five of the men have become soldiers by conscription, and there were many volunteers. Two of these were killed in the early days of August, and one was wounded near Liege. The son of J. Forck, the general foreman, was badly wounded on the Yser, and his son-in-law has been interned in Holland since the fall of Antwerp. The whole staff, all aged men, are still on duty, working hard to save the plants. Mr. Van Bockstaele, the director, and J. Forck, the foreman, are in their places, having to meet the most difficult problems. Francois Marchand, the old and faithful servant of the firm, after sixty-two years of valuable service, will stay near his darling bertolonias and sonerilas, of many varieties of which he was the originator, until, perhaps, German bombs kill him in his propagating house. Leave them? No, never, he said. As he had lived among them, so would he die with them, he assured me. Cyrille Philips.

ALEXANDER ON THE DAHLIA.

A Specialist's Culture.

Dahlias will grow and do equally well in any kind of soil. I have sand, gravel, heavy and light loam, lowland and hills, and find little difference, so far as the number of flowers is concerned; the only difference being that in sand and gravel they form a short, sturdy, compact plant, and in heavy loam and lowland they grow tall and rank, blooming about a week later than those planted at the same time in sandy soil.

The soil should be thoroughly cultivated, plowed or spaded eight to ten inches deep, well pulverized and thoroughly worked over. To secure exceptional results, have your soil plowed or spaded in the fall, or as early as practicable in the spring; then just before planting have the soil thoroughly plowed or spaded again.

Fertilization.

Fertilization is one of the most important factors, to be successful with dahlias. Every other fall I give my land a top-dressing of stable manure, plowing it under, and alternate with lime, using this as a top-dressing.

The manure restores the properties necessary, makes the soil light and mellow and keeps it from being heavy, and caking, while lime has the same tendency and keeps the soil sweet. When planting in the spring I use commercial fertilizers exclusively, a complete potato fertilizer and ground bone meal, in equal proportions. Every fourth or fifth year I make a fall planting of winter rye, then turn under in the spring, planting the roots with commercial fertilizers.

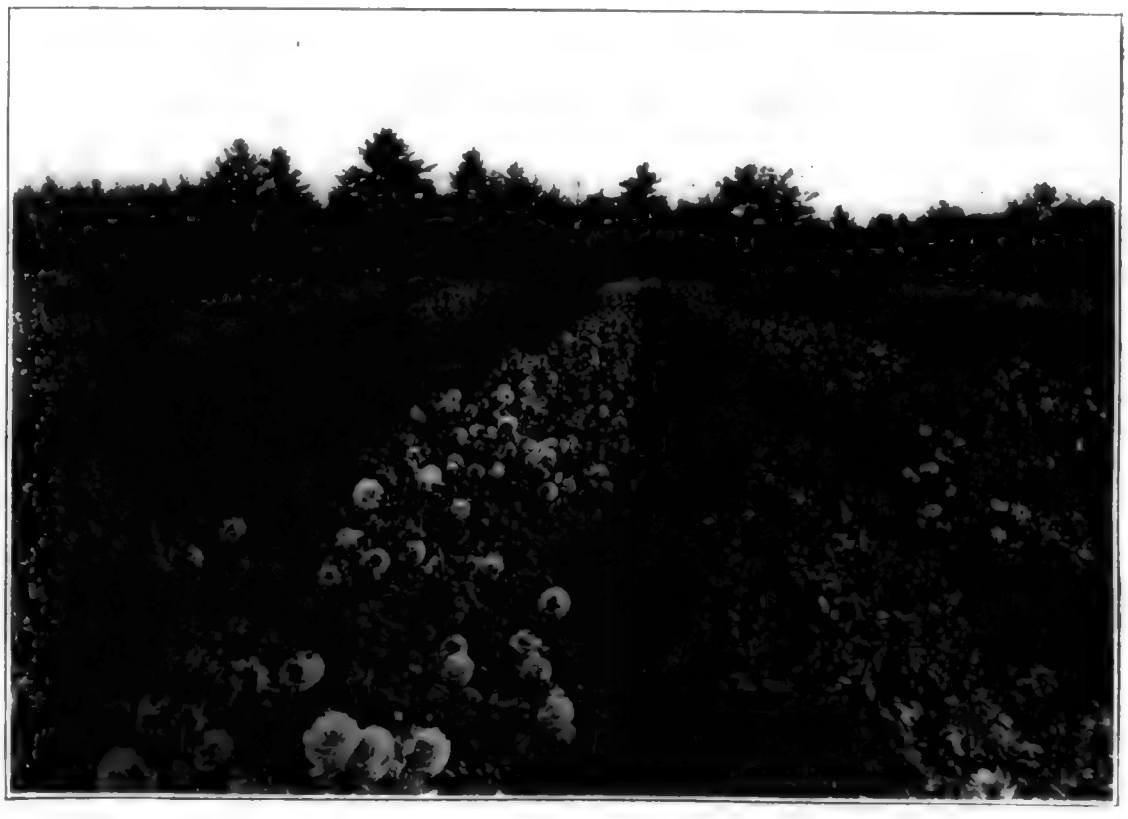
An application of manure, either in liquid or ordinary form, several times throughout the growing season proves beneficial.

Planting and Cultivating.

The time for planting dahlias varies according to the locality, whether your spot is sheltered or open, early or lateness of the season, and the time when the general crop of flowers is desired. Dahlias can be planted any time after danger of frost is over, and under ordinary conditions will bloom in from six to eight weeks after they have been planted. It is always best to wait until the ground becomes thoroughly warmed. Plant roots six inches deep, flat down, having sprout or eye facing upward, cover with soil an inch or so, apply dressing, and cover in level.

Give thorough cultivation, deep at first, and continue once a week until the plants commence to flower. After they commence to bloom do not cultivate, as then is the time the new roots are forming, and you are apt to cut off the new tubers, weakening the growth of the plant. Do not fail to stir the soil after every rain, keeping the soil from forming a crust on the surface or baking, and conserving the moisture in the soil, thus avoiding the necessity of watering.

As the shoot or plant commences to show itself above ground, care should be taken for the prevention of cutworms and other pests that destroy the young shoots.



After the plants attain eighteen inches in height an occasional spraying will kill and keep away the aphis or green fly, which often infests dahlias.

Both wood ashes and lime are good at all times, and in addition to being good fertilizers, are effective as preventives of insect pests.

For Exhibition Blooms.

To produce the finest flowers for exhibition purposes: Plant three to five feet apart, using a liberal amount of manure or fertilizer; cultivate frequently; apply at each or every other hoeing, fertilizer or manure, broad-cast or in liquid form, and disbud. Nitrate of soda proves exceedingly effective for forcing; apply in liquid or crystal form, when plants are in bud; make applications often, but do not use too much at a time. Nitrate of soda is powerful, and if too much is used it will burn up your plants, or force them to such an overgrowth that the roots will decay during the winter. Apply nitrate of soda in crystal form on top of the ground, or in liquid form, using one tablespoonful of nitrate of soda crystals to a gallon of water, using sprayer or watering can.

When the flower buds appear, only one bud should be allowed to come to maturity. The flowers, for quality, must not be allowed to receive the drenching rains or scalding sun, when nearing full bloom.

Field of Show and Cactus Dahlias Grown Under the Massing System.

It is always advisable to cut flowers that are to be exhibited, as late as possible at night, when the dew is on them, placing them in water, and keeping them as cool as possible over night, thereby enabling them to withstand handling, packing and transportation.

Although I wish it understood that I do not believe in watering, and find from experience it is unnecessary, a thorough soaking once or twice a week during a drought, with the soil stirred the following day, is an excellent thing where water and time are at hand. However, for commercial purposes, we receive better results by not using water.

Harvesting the Roots.

Dahlias should be harvested shortly after their foliage has been killed by frost. I find from experience that as soon as the frost kills the foliage the strength of the stalk recedes to the roots, and that if they are not harvested shortly, each root sends forth a sprout which becomes a shoot, and if left long enough, a stalk, and as there is danger of frost any time after the first severe frost, this stalk, no matter how long left, can never grow long enough to reach maturity and bloom before being killed. This sprout or shoot is new, brittle growth, not hard and woody like the stalk, and when the clumps are dry, if the sprout is two or three inches long, it is generally left to remain; if a foot or so long, is cut off, the same as the stalk. In either case, as this new and brittle growth has not sufficient substance to carry it through the winter, the sprout commences to decay during the winter months, often causing the whole clump to decay. If dug two or three days after the plant has been killed by frost, the clumps are in a perfectly dormant condition, having no sprouts, and keep perfectly all winter, sending forth sprouts in the spring, which is the proper time.

Dahlias may be dug with fork, spade or plow. In digging or harvesting the clump, great care should be taken; dig carefully, do not pull them up. You have a large cluster of bulbs or clump; each bulb has a neck, which is the small portion between the bulb and where it joins the stalk. The clump should be dug or lifted carefully, so as not to break the necks of the bulbs; if you crack, girdle, or break a neck, sometimes they will dry up, other times decay; however, when the clump is divided, the root with a broken neck is weak and requires longer to become established before it commences to grow after being planted in the ground. After removing the clump, shake gently to remove what soil naturally falls off. Cut off top within two or three inches of clump, allowing them to be exposed to the sun and air for only an hour or two. Do not allow them to stay out two or three days to dry up and then wonder why they are withered and fail to sprout. Pack in a cool, frost-proof place, where extremes in temperature may be avoided, a place having an average temperature of about 45 degrees. Do not cover, or pack in any material or with any substance; cork, sawdust, shavings, coal ashes, sand or earth, all hold and retain dampness or moisture, are too close, compact and damp, causing the roots to start, to mildew, or to decay. Simply pack clumps one on top of the other, placing each clump upside down. Undoubtedly you are aware that the dahlia stalk is hollow, and that this hollow contains a watery substance or acid. If you pack your clumps with the stalk up, the acid will flow back into the crown of the clump, causing decay; whereas, if you turn your clumps upside down the acid must flow out, and the clump will remain in a perfectly dormant condition. Covering with paper or burlap excludes the air and preserves a more even temperature. In heated places the circulation of air and heat causes the roots to shrivel and dry up; a covering of this kind prevents the roots from shriveling.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

Preparing the Carnation Field.

To obtain the best results, careful attention should be given to putting the ground into the best possible shape to receive the young plants in the spring. As soon as the last of the old plants have been lifted from the field, in the late summer or early fall, a liberal dressing of good stable manure should be applied and plowed under, plowing as deeply as possible. Sow down with either oats or rye, and, when these are well harrowed in and the soil is properly pulverized, follow with a sowing of crimson clover. Clover seed requires hardly any covering, so simply drag the ground with a good switchy branch of a tree instead of a harrow. These crops will conserve the fertility of the soil and put it in good heart.

As soon as the ground is dry enough in the early spring, say in the end of February in southern latitudes, plow the field again, turning the whole winter's growth under. Leave it rough until you are nearly ready to plant and then disc it thoroughly, going over the field a few times, till it is well broken up. Follow with a spring tooth or smoothing harrow, making the whole as fine as that implement will make it. To break up the small lumps still left, there is nothing better than dragging it with an old door or several boards nailed together, which can be weighted down with a few heavy stones to make the work more effective. This puts a smooth finish on the work and makes the job of planting much easier.

Ready for Spring Planting.

A top-dressing of commercial guano, say 400 or 500 pounds to the acre, may be given with advantage if the ground previously was in poor shape. If your soil is rather clayey, see that it is not too wet when working it, or it cannot be put in good shape for planting. A little extra labor to put the ground in fit condition for planting is a good investment, as the plants can be set out much more quickly, will make a much better growth during the summer, and the whole can be much more easily worked and kept clean.

Good judgment must be used as to the time to set out the young plants. Spring rains are rather infrequent in some sections, so you are fortunate if you can get one or two days' planting ahead of a good shower. Plant also as soon after a rain as the ground will work freely, and immediately follow with the hand cultivator, to loosen the surface soil and conserve the moisture. If the young plants are well soaked before planting, and the field moist, they will start out and do well without rain for a long spell, but by all means keep the cultivator going steadily.

The plants do not require to be firmed hard in the ground. Set them just a shade shallower than they were in the benches. The cultivator always throws more or less soil to the row, which the hoe never quite displaces, and every rain also washes up more. Start planting in the south as early in March as the season will allow. A few light frosts will not hurt the plants, particularly if they have been grown as cool as possible indoors or in a coldframe.

Preparing Soil for Benches.

To properly prepare soil, fit for filling benches in rose, carnation or chrysanthemum houses, requires more than a year's time. Most soils in the south are deficient in humus, and there is practically no fiber, except in the sections where Bermuda grass is native. To overcome these defects is the object sought in preparing the soil for the greenhouse.

First select a portion of your field that is naturally good and as well situated as possible. Give a good dressing of stable manure early in October, plow under and sow down in rye. When the rye is about six or eight inches high in the spring, plow it under and prepare the ground for planting corn. Use enough commercial fertilizer to mature the corn crop, and give continuous good culture. If the ground will produce good corn you can use it with all confidence in the greenhouse.

With the corn crop gathered in the fall, top-dress again with manure, plow and plant in rye. In early spring turn the rye under, and leave the ground lying rough for a few weeks, or until the rye decomposes. Apply about two inches of good cow manure, plow it under and disc thoroughly. The soil will now be in good shape to be used in the benches, unless it is lumpy, when another plowing and discing will improve it.

Any soil left after filling the houses may be stacked up in ridges or put in an open shed, where it will come in handy for potting material during the wet winter season. The spent soil from the house can then be spread on the bared place and sown with rye, crimson clover and grass seed, say Kentucky blue. The rye can be cut when ready and used for hay, when the grass and clover will have a chance to develop. After lying in grass for a year or two, this ground can again be prepared for filling the houses if needed. By breaking up a new piece of ground each year and treating it as described, a small patch may be used almost indefinitely with good results.

FIRE IN GREENHOUSES.

Rochester, N. Y.—Fire started by an overheated firebox caused damage estimated at $350 at the greenhouses owned by Charles Schleyer, on Winton road, February 28. The fire had a good start before it was discovered by Herman Deisel, who has charge of the place and lives near.

Boundbrook, N. J.—An overheated stove in the store of Henry Winkowsky is given as the origin of a fire that caused $15,000 damages March 4. It not only destroyed his store, but the two adjoining to the south as well, and damaged the building of the Boundbrook National bank, adjoining to the north. Mr. Winkowsky's loss is placed at $500.

Rochester, N. Y.—An overheated boiler in the potting shed attached to the municipal greenhouses at Highland park is held responsible for a fire that occurred on the morning of March 3. The firemen broke a number of lights in the greenhouse, but these were covered, so that the loss was confined almost entirely to the potting shed. It is estimated at $150.

CASH AND CUT PRICES.

As Easter approaches, at the greenhouses of the William W. Edgar Co., at Waverley, Mass., there is not a square inch of room wasted. As the reader will see from the illustration on this page, the only space that is not covered with plants is that taken up by the paths. And that cannot be called idle space, for the footsteps of the men are hurrying up and down these stretches, getting everything into the best possible condition for the busy week that will make the houses look like the city of Louvain after the Germans had marched through.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., Cincinnati, has an addition in the person of Frank Wood, a descendant of that well known Richmond seed house, Wood & Sons. Mr. Wood's knowledge of the blue grass region will be an acquisition.

Manthey's Seed Store made its bow last fall to the Queen City public. Chas. Manthey, the proprietor, was with J. Chas. McCullough almost a quarter of a century and will secure a liberal share of patronage.

Chas. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, remarked that any of his customers having stocks and bonds for deposit can be accommodated in the immense vault forming part of his storage. The building was originally used as a bank.

E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, received a shipment from George Hopp of his grand pansy-violet. This really describes this lovely flower, which has the general appearance of a pansy with the color and fragrance of the violet. We measured blooms that averaged one and three-quarters inches across the face. For St. Valentine sales, 12,000 went like the proverbial hot cakes.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, O., are rapidly substituting cement for wood wherever possible. The plant benches are lightly, through strongly made, and are reinforced with poultry wire. The bottom is finished roughly and covered lightly with fine ashes. It is porous, allowing ample drainage, so that the soil cannot get sour. The edges are rounded and neat. Mr. Peterson believes they have the ideal bench. It would be impossible to find thriftier plants, from the wee seedlings to the specimens reserved for stock. The raising of seedlings is fascinating. There are some promising things in sight. Sure it is that the European varieties are not in the same class. Melior is proving to be a fine keeper and an excellent shipper. The latest introduction, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, is a gem. The color, intense cerise, contrasting with the bronze foliage, cannot fail to make it immensely popular. Easter stock is receiving attention. The French varieties of hydrangeas can be depended on positively, while Otaksa will likely be in flower at the right time.

Frank E. Rue, Peoria, Ill., is the recipient of many compliments on his Garden Guide, a comprehensive seed and plant book, bearing his trade-mark, rue, an herb found in old-fashioned gardens. Mr. Rue is an eastern man, and has never rued the day he followed Horace Greeley's advice.

W. W. Horlacher, Dayton, O., notes the return of the camellia to favor for corsage wear. Coquette, a cherry red, is one of the best. The growing of gerberas from seed produces some taking varieties. Buddleia Asiatica is a valuable addition to the stock of the grower of cut flowers for table and funeral work.

E. J. Foster & Son, Findlay, O., are well pleased with business thus far. They receive many orders from out of town, especially for floral pieces.

Henry Ehrhardt, Sidney, O., finds that trade warrants taking his son into the business. The young man is putting in concrete work wherever possible. Spring stock looks good. M.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

MR. GYSEMANS REPLIES.

I read with interest the remarks of Theo. F. Beckert, in The Review for March 4, concerning the grafted tomato-potato plant. I presume the fact that my notes in The Review for February 18 bore the headline "Double Crop With Radium" is the reason for his reply.

Everybody knows that to secure a good union in grafting no radium is needed, but in the development of my plants I had far better success with radium than without. I had my experiment made with three different subjects, all Early Ohio potatoes, and gave all three the same soil, treatment and care, the only difference being that one was handled with radium and the other two without. The two handled without radium did not make half as good specimens as did the plant handled with radium, and although the union was good in each case, their growth and the size of the tomatoes were extremely poor compared to the plant treated with radium. I regret now not having taken a photograph of them. Furthermore, their growing systems not being strong, those two plants were drying down with the others of their kind, Early Ohio, in the field, while my radium-treated plant was still growing during half of September.

I did not save any of the potatoes for seed, but I saved some of the tomato seeds, with the intention of securing, perhaps, some improved variety through the vitalizing influence of the radium process. C. E. Gysemans.

CARNATION GROWERS' RAMBLES.

March 2 was the day set apart by the visiting committee of the Lancaster County Florists' Association for a trip to Philadelphia. Although an account of the journey appeared last week in the Philadelphia newsletter, perhaps some further notes will be welcome.

It was 6 a. m. that a party of eighteen left for Strafford, where automobiles were waiting to convey us to Edward A. Stroud's establishment. In the carnation houses, Gloriosa was in the finest order; when it can be grown as these were, it certainly is one of the best carnations in existence. Philadelphia, Matchless and Mrs. Ward are also extensively planted. The White Wonder and White Perfection were a mass of buds and bloom and were as fine as we have ever seen them. A bench of Pocahontas showed fine blooms and we doubt if it is surpassed by any other crimson. Yellow Prince, with its fine habit and clear color, looked good. A small planting of Dorner's Dainty, a variety the color of which reminded us of old Major Pingree, was much admired. Lilium multiflorum and L. giganteum, in pots, filled a large house and for uniformity and health left nothing to be desired. We were indebted to W. E. Johnson, in charge, for his courtesy in showing us over the place.

Our next stop was at the Florex Gardens, at North Wales, Pa., where we were met at the station by H. C. Geiger, in charge. The largest house here is 700 feet long, 172 feet wide and thirty-six feet high; 79,000 rose plants are in this house and 56,000 feet of pipe are used in heating it. Another house, 154x500, is also planted in roses. A new pink seedling rose, No. 25, fragrant and prolific, is well thought of. Beds of their own selection of White Killarney are interesting in comparison with other White Killarney. Sunburst was extremely fine. Roses in general were clean and healthy and full of young breaking wood. The carnation houses, where Harry Girvin and Ross Zander are in charge, both formerly Lancaster county growers, were of much interest. Their new seedling, Ruth, darker than Philadelphia, looked fine, as did a light pink seedling on the order of Gloriosa, which showed many of the good points of White Enchantress, many measuring four inches in diameter. Beacon, Philadelphia and Enchantress Supreme all showed high culture.

Before leaving North Wales twenty-seven sat down to dinner. The party then proceeded to Hatboro, where a call was made on H. M. Weiss & Sons, who have 30,000 plants of Gorgeous carnations and who say an equal number of them will be grown again next season. A house of Alma Ward looked as though it might not be the least profitable variety grown here. For next season 5,500 Alice will be planted.

Our next stop was at the establishment of J. Stephenson, Oak Lane, to inspect the Lord & Burnham iron-frame house, 71x800. The house is planted entirely to roses and they are in the pink of condition.

In the evening we had the pleasure of inspecting the new varieties of carnations on exhibition at the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club. We regretted that it was impossible to remain to hear Edmund A. Harvey's paper on carnations, as we were compelled to leave for Lancaster at 8:50 p. m.

Those in the party were: Maurice J. Brinton, Elmer J. Weaver, J. Rutter Hess, Albert M. Herr, E. P. Hostetter, W. R. Denlinger, John R. Shreiner, C. S. Loeffler, Ira H. Landis, H. K. Rohrer, Charles B. Herr, Charles M. Weaver, B. F. Barr, J. Ralph Hess, Harry B. Weaver, Frank L. Kohr, of Lancaster; James Brown, of Coatesville; Edward Marshall and William Swayne, Kennett Square; B. J. Passmore, Isaac Passmore, A. H. Lanser, L. H. Duelman, Eugene Bernheimer, William Muth, S. S. Pennock and D. T. Connor. The thanks of the party are due to Elmer J. Weaver and S. S. Pennock for personally conducting our little tour. H. K. R.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Last week saw a relapse into winter, though we have had none of the severe weather that we read of in the papers. Yet we have had snow, and the rush of spring work has been checked for a time. The cold seems to hang on, too, for this time of year. Ten days ago everything promised that we would be shipping outdoor-grown daffodils to the north, but we have yet to see our first outdoor bloom. Two days of seasonable weather will bring them on, however, in plenty.

Business, for the last ten days, has been off, except for funeral work. There is a good supply of the staple flowers, and the quality is all that could be asked for. There are a few novelties in the windows in the way of pot plants, but, on the other hand, more cyclamens are used for cut flowers than I have ever seen before. This seems to indicate that there is less demand for them in pots than formerly.

I have also seen hyacinths and other bulbous flowers used in design work a great deal during the last ten days, showing that they are not selling well in pots. Golden Spur narcissi are in good supply and seem to be selling well, both in pots and as cut flowers. Romans are quite scarce. Sweet peas are the most plentiful I have ever seen good ones here, and in one florist's window I saw bunches with a placard reading "Five cents a bunch." They were fair-sized bunches of excellent Spencers.

Various Notes.

Things point to a heavy demand for canna roots here this season, as a large percentage of them were frozen last winter. It is the prevailing custom to leave them in the ground over winter. This year they froze. As florists here always dig theirs, they should reap a reward.

Haury & Sons are not devoting so large a percentage of their space to geraniums and other pot plants as they were, finding more profit in cut flowers.

At McIntyre Bros.' old place, on Hillsboro road, last week, I saw some houses that were as gorgeous as though they had been prepared for exhibition. They were full of pot plants, mostly cyclamens, cinerarias and their new geranium, Nashville. They say they are having good sales on these items and unusually good sales of specimen box and arbor-vitæ.

The opening of the new Cleveland street viaduct a few days ago saves several miles to Joe Browne, of Lischey's Gardens, in making his deliveries in East Nashville. The new road is one of the best in the city and promises to be a favorite with automobilists.

Frank Cornell's new place gives him more than double the bench room that he had. He has a nice lot of pot plants coming on for the spring sales.

I saw two of the best cyclamen plants at the store of the Joy Floral Co. last week that I have ever noted. One of them carried almost 100 blooms, blood red at that, and the other was almost as good. The company's windows for the last month have shown that some one has been studying window decoration. F. B.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There was little change in market conditions last week. Good quality roses are scarce, but there is plenty of short-stemmed stock. Carnations, sweet peas, snapdragon and valley are in good supply. Bulbous stock, for the first time this season, has almost reached a glut. The quality is "as you like it." Some fancy La Reine, Couronne d'Or and Cardinal tulips are seen. There is the usual run of daffodils.

Easter stock looks good, but nothing new has been seen as yet. There are the usual lilies, azaleas, lilacs, spiræas, and pans of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils. Lilies, on the average, look good.

The Fall Show.

The entertaining in Cleveland of the Chrysanthemum Society of America is expected to develop into one of the largest trade flower shows ever held in the middle west. Both the American Carnation Society and the American Rose Society have been asked to coöperate with the committee in making the show a grand success as a general trade exhibition.

Special prizes have been offered by the Rose Society, in addition to the regular premium list. The preliminary list is now in the printers' hands and will be mailed as soon as ready. Anyone wishing a copy may address the secretary, Frank A. Friedley, 95 Shaw avenue, East Cleveland, Ohio. In addition to over $3,500 in cash prizes, numerous cups and medals are offered. The Wigmore coliseum, containing over 60,000 square feet of floor space, has been secured, war or no war.

Committees have been appointed. For the Ohio Horticultural Society: Executive committee, S. Prentis Baldwin, chairman, and John Boddy, treasurer. For the Cleveland Florists' Club: Frank A. Friedley, secretary; Herman P. Knoble, general manager; Mrs. John E. Newell, president of the Garden Club; Mrs. L. Dean Holden and Mrs. L. A. Ingalls. The active show committee is: H. P. Knoble, chairman; George Bate, publicity; Herbert Bate, premium list; H. P. Merrick, trades' display; Charles E. Russell, retailers' display; Fred C. W. Brown, decorating; T. Smith, admissions; George W. Smith, entertainment, and Frank A. Friedley, superintendent of exhibition.

Various Notes.

The windows of Knoble Bros. continue to attract large crowds. Frank Ritzenthaler, the artist, is to be congratulated on the originality shown in the arrangement and carrying out of the schemes. He has a full sized (diameter only, not in height) telegraph pole, connected to a multitude of "live wires," otherwise F. T. D. orders.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, and Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., Philadelphia, were recent visitors. F. A. F.

REINBERG'S RUSTLERS.

The accompanying illustration was prepared from a Sunday morning snapshot made in the store of Peter Reinberg, Chicago. In the center stands Felix Reichling, the sales manager, and around him are his salesmen and packers. The missing member is Miss Marguerite K. McNulty, whose province is the office. The figure at the left is that of a well-known customer, not the proprietor, as the attitude might indicate.

EVANSTON, ILL.

The Market.

There is no reason for complaint as to the state of business here; the retail trade has not been bad this season and recently has been rather better than usual, perhaps due to the fact that flowers have been rather more plentiful and of better quality than they ordinarily are at this time of year. St. Valentine's day is improving as a special flower day and Lent is having less debilitating effect on demand as the years roll around. March has seen an especially good sale for bulbous stock in decorated pans and boxes. The trade here is specially favored by the proximity of the Chicago market. While an occasional good order goes to a Chicago retailer, the trade here has a practically unlimited source of supply close at hand and also a place to dispose on commission of any surplus production by the local growers, who sometimes are buyers and sometimes consignors, frequently both at the same time.

Various Notes.

The Evanston high school board has selected the greenhouse property of John Weiland as a possible site for a new high school building. The selection will be voted on within the next two months.

H. B. Smith, who bought the entire stock of F. C. Fischer and rented his greenhouses a month ago, is getting things nicely shaped around and expects to do a thriving business. The little daughter of Mr. Smith is seriously ill with pneumonia.

John Weiland, his son, John Weiland, Jr., and his assistant, Nicholas Olinger, who have been on the sick list for several days, are again on the job.

George C. Weiland will put in two benches of Ophelia rose this spring, to take the place of Hadley, which has not been doing well for him.

Weiland & Risch, in South Evanston, are the largest growers in the district. They also are credited with forcing this year the largest number of plants of Mrs. Russell rose to be found on the benches of any one grower anywhere in America. It is said to be approximately 50,000 plants. They are going in still more heavily next season.

P. M. Brodbeck's roses are rapidly recuperating from the overdose of gas recently administered by a leaking main. His cut is sold by Zech & Mann, in Chicago.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business conditions have changed little since last week. There still is a bountiful supply and prices still are low. The store buyers are buying closely and are not carrying heavy stocks, on account of the uncertain demand and the assurance of a plentiful supply to draw from if orders demand it. The wholesale stores sold lots of stock to the street boys on Friday, March 5, but Saturday was cold and stormy and it is doubtful if some received what they had paid for their stock.

Club Meeting and Banquet.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 8. President Johnston had contracted a heavy cold that threatened pneumonia and in his absence Vice-President Hamilton filled the chair. The regular order of business was quickly disposed of, after which the annual election of officers was held. James Hamilton was the choice for president and John M. Rider for vice-president. The following officers were retained: Secretary, N. F. Flitton; financial secretary, George Talbot; treasurer, F. G. Burger; librarian, C. M. Wagner.

After the election adjournment was taken to Hotel Rennert, where an excellent banquet was served. The hall was decorated with Killarney roses, light pink carnations and pink snapdragon, all being well arranged by Charles F. Feast, the flowers donated by members.

After cigars were burning freely Toastmaster George Morrison called on President-elect Hamilton, whose speech, while brief, was well delivered. He was followed by Prof. T. B. Symonds, Vice-President Rider, and Robert L. Graham. Arthur A. Niessen spoke on the national flower show to be held in Philadelphia next spring and extended the hospitality of the Philadelphia florists to all who attend this exhibition. I. H. Moss was next called upon and made a short address. Then came Edwin A. Seidewitz, who made a most stirring speech. He called on the members individually and as an organization to cooperate in educating the public to the proper and liberal use of flowers. The address deserved the hearty applause which followed. Charles F. Feast, Richard Vincent, Jr., and Treasurer Burger were next called upon and the evening's festivities were brought to a close by rising and joining in Auld Lang Syne, led by Prof. Symonds.

Those present from out of town were: Otto Bauer, of Washington; Arthur A. Niessen, I. Rosnosky and D. T. Connor, of Philadelphia. Local members present were: James Hamilton, John M. Rider, George Morrison, N. F. Flitton, F. G. Burger, George Talbot, E. A. Seidewitz, Charles F. Feast, William Feast, I. H. Moss, Richard Vincent, Jr., William E. McKissick, Henry Lehr, L. B. Glick, Joseph Merritt, William Bauer, R. Harrison, A. Fiedler, William Christie, Edward Kress, Joseph Glass, John Nuth, W. E. Seidewitz, J. J. Miller, Robert L. Graham, W. G. Anderson, Simon Cordner, Harry Ekas, R. A. Vincent, John Vincent, William Lehr, Thomas Stevenson, Mack Richmond, Joseph Boone, M. Thau, C. Uffler, J. J. Sheehan, John Wagner, J. L. Towner, Herbert H. Wagner, C. Harry Wagner, J. Ward Perry, A. McGuire, Thomas Barker and William F. Ekas.

Various Notes.

There will soon be another addition to the retail stores on Charles street, as James Hamilton has leased the store at 509 North Charles street, formerly occupied by Pierce & Co. The interior of the store is being remodeled and decorated, and up-to-date equipment will be installed. It is hoped to have it in shape for opening about March 15. A Ford car has been purchased to take care of the delivery end of the business.

A party of ladies well known in Washington trade circles came over from that city March 2 and were entertained at luncheon and at an afternoon theater party by the Baltimore ladies. Those in the out-of-town delegation were: Mrs. George Cooke, Mrs. Stolph, Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. Oehmler. The Baltimore ladies were Mrs. Boone, Mrs. Bauer, Mrs. Klein and Mrs. Quick. After the theater a bowling contest was held at the Plaza alleys.

A movement has been started by the merchants of Charles street to improve that thoroughfare and make it the shopping center of the city. An association has been formed with this object in view and its members include Charles F. Feast, E. A. Seidewitz, John Halliday and other well known Charles street florists.

Samuel Feast & Sons had a large decoration last week at the spring opening of Hochschild, Kohn & Co. About 500 palms were scattered through the building, besides blooming plants and baskets of cut flowers.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The only real snow storm of the winter arrived March 6. March would seem unnatural without this yearly demonstration. The fall of snow was over a foot on the level around New York. In the city the snow melted as it fell. Saturday's business in the cut flower market was badly interfered with. Values fell to the lowest level since Christmas.

American Beauties are lower, the best of them not selling above $30 per hundred. Hadley has proved an encouraging aid in steadying rose values, and the other novelties have been in such demand that no surplus of these is ever in evidence. The supply of all the older varieties continues abundant, and in the lower grades of these low quotations have been made on thousand lots.

The orchid market has shown no improvement, the finest cattleyas not selling above $25 per hundred. Cypripediums are also lower.

Lilies are abundant, and prices continue at the low level of last week. Rubrums are especially weak. Valley is arriving in such volume that the market has been unable to handle it. The street merchants have been the only medium for the disposal of the surplus. These are reaping a harvest in their sale of violets. Often they have been able to buy a box of leftovers, about 2,000, for 50 cents or $1.

Fresh violets go to the stores as low as 20 cents per hundred.

Apart from the novelties, carnations are selling slowly, at $5 to $7.50 per thousand. Fine stock can be had at $1.50 per hundred. Even the best of the newer kinds seldom rise over $2.

Sweet peas, even the Spencers, are arriving in enormous shipments, and, apart from the selects, prices are unmentionable. Callas are down, and there is a large surplus of freesias. A few gladioli arrive daily from the south, and daffodils are looked for soon. There seems to be little call for tulips. All kinds of bulbous stock are accumulating.

Of spring flowers, daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots, mignonette, etc., there is no diminution.

Club Meeting.

As usual, the attendance at the March meeting of the Florists' Club was large. President Harry A. Bunyard returned from a lecturing trip to Detroit in time to occupy the chair. The outing committee announced the date of the club's annual celebration as July 14 and the place as Wetzel's Grove. Chairman Armitage said the steamer Isabel has been chartered, and that tickets will be $5 per couple, $3.50 for men, $2.50 for ladies and $1 for children. Chairman Schenck announced arrangements complete for the club's annual dinner and dance at the Hotel Astor, March 20. A large attendance is assured, including many visitors from a distance.

Chairman Pierson reported progress for the committee on the proposed club house and promised a final report at the April meeting.

Chairman De Forest reported for the San Francisco transportation committee. Coöperation with Boston and Philadelphia gives prospect for a special train for those attending the S. A. F. convention from the east.

Chairman Philip Kessler announced for his committee a souvenir distribution of a handsome mug to every member, in addition to an excellent repast.

Arthur Herrington, who was one of those elected to membership, made an earnest plea for coöperation in making the flower show, of which he is manager, a great success. Others elected to membership were Wm. Bluethgen, Jr., F. R. Newbold, Charles Webber, R. R. McAnney and Frank Dinda. The following were proposed for membership: L. T. Roblin, W. F. Leary, Peter Wait, George W. Cobb and S. A. Woodrow.

Although this was rose night, not a rose was exhibited. On the tables a fine assortment of winter-flowering sweet peas from Charles A. Zvolanek, of Boundbrook; tulips from P. W. Popp and tulips and narcissi from M. Van Waveren & Sons; a handsome Cocos Weddelliana from Henry A. Dreer, and immense blooms of the new carnation, Peace, from Frank Dinda, staged by Guttman & Raynor.

Mr. Colwell, a publicity specialist, gave a humorous talk on the methods necessary to secure recognition from the New York dailies. Prof. J. R. Lynch gave his splendid lecture on the Panama canal and the San Francisco exposition, with stereopticon views.

Various Notes.

The international flower show will open March 17 at the Grand Central Palace. The outlook at this writing is decidedly encouraging, and everybody is now predicting a great success. The flower show committee is in itself a guarantee of accomplishment and consists of F. R. Pierson, chairman; Theodore A. Havemeyer, vice-chairman; John Young, secretary; Frederick R. Newbold, treasurer; F. L. Atkins, M. C. Ebel, James N. Stuart, George V. Nash, Dr. N. L. Britton, Joseph A. Manda, Charles H. Totty, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., William H. Duckham, Frank H. Traendly, Wallace R. Pierson, Julius Roehrs.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. held its first auction sale of the season March 9.

Next week, March 16, the Elliott Auction Co. opens its season.

Joseph Trepel's new store, at 1070 Flatbush avenue, opened March 6, with appropriate ceremonies, including a lady orchestra, roses for the ladies, refreshments and a record crowd of visitors. The store is 25x75, and the basement of equal size. The furnishings are in brass and purple upholstery; the shelving is of glass, as well as the counters. Mirrors are everywhere. The floor is inlaid. A fountain plays in the center of the store. Joseph Trepel's brother Jack is the buyer and distributor for his six Brooklyn stores, of which this is the crowning enterprise.

March 3 fire at the Flushing Rose Gardens destroyed the packing house and four rose houses. Repairs and rebuilding will commence at once. Robert G. Caldwell is manager.

Phillips' store in Brooklyn, since the new front and other improvements have been added, is thoroughly up-to-date. A beautiful window decoration, with mirror effects, gravel paths, etc., is now on exhibition.

The Brooklyn Wholesale & Retail Cut Flower Market, at 356 Fulton street, reports an excellent season. Mrs. Jos. Levy is in charge of the office and retail department.

Masur's new store, at 256 Fulton street, is a great improvement on the old one. Mrs. Masur is an adept in floral work, and a helpmeet in more ways than one.

Miss Golden, owner and manager of the Golden Flower Shop, has no complaint as to the growth and volume of her business. Her handsome store is made attractive by artistic daily window decorations.

Robert Wilson's big store is maintaining its reputation as one of the best decorated in the two cities, the big windows especially being featured, with fountains, Japanese gardens and landscapes. Mr. Wilson will exhibit at the international flower show.

J. K. Allen says he will later erect a greenhouse at his new store, which is midway between the Sixth and Seventh avenue subways.

The buying and distributing center for C. C. Trepel is now 103 West Twenty-eighth street. His brother, Adam A. Trepel, is manager of this department. Mr. Trepel has now twelve stores, five of them on Broadway, and he has a Fifth avenue vision.

The seedsmen will be well represented at the flower show, exhibits being made by the Stumpp & Walter Co., J. M. Thorburn & Co., Knight & Struck Co. and R. J. Irwin.

The Knight & Struck Co. is now occupying its new store at 302 West Twenty-second street.

J. Austin Shaw.

The National Floral Corporation, of Manhattan, has been incorporated as "florists, seedsmen, nurserymen, caterers, confectioners," with a capital stock of $10,000, by Adolph L. Mock, 481 Bainbridge street, Brooklyn; Hugo Mock, of 218 Westervelt avenue, New Brighton, and Harry C. Adams, of 220 Broadway.

Harry A. Bunyard incorporated his business last week as the Harry A. Bunyard Co., with a capital stock of $25,000. Besides him, the incorporators include Frank Ingenthron, Frank Duggan and two others.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The market the last two weeks has been exceptionally good as to demand, but the supply of stock has been shortened somewhat by the continued dark weather. The wholesalers report trade splendid, especially during the Lenten season. Many of the wholesalers cannot begin to meet the demand for cut stock. As a consequence, prices have stiffened, especially on the spring flowers. Bulbous stock was scarce during the first week of March. Considerable social activity has prevailed since Lent began and the retailers report trade exceedingly satisfying. Funeral work has moved considerable stock. Roses are proving of excellent quality, especially Sunburst and Shawyer. Carnations are somewhat scarce, owing to the lack of sunshine. Sweet peas are the best of the season. Forget-me-nots are grown in quantities by one grower and prove successful in combination bouquets and boxes. Violets meet with little demand. Bulbous stock is readily taken up, but sells better in the cut state than in pots, although there is a good demand for both. Charles X and Marie Legraye lilac of splendid quality are in and meet with much favor. Azaleas, hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, cinerarias and valley in pots constitute the variety in blooming stock.

Various Notes.

Mr. Hall, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was a recent visitor.

Herbert Zur Muhlen has a fine showing of bulbous stock in his shop on Washington boulevard. This is a live little shop, splendidly located, in the same block with the new Palace theater, which was recently opened. Mrs. Zur Muhlen assists her husband in the business.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey have had a heavy demand for cut flowers during Lent. Miss S. L. Nelson, secretary of the company, says they are cutting some fine cattleyas. They will have a fine crop of roses for Easter.

The Flick Floral Co. is showing some excellent lilac plants of Charles X and Marie Legraye varieties. This concern had many orders for the funeral of Henry W. Wellman.

The New Haven Floral Co. reports a busy Lenten season and a big run on funeral work. This company also was represented at the Wellman funeral by some fine designs. R. F.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Business last week was not brisk, and consequently there was a slump in about all kinds of flowers. The city found itself locked in the grip of winter again, for snow storms and cold winds prevailed all through the week. There has been a remarkably good trade all over the city in funeral work, and so the florists are rather content. There is a fine variety of blooming plants for sale, and the demand for these, especially for the hospitals, is good.

There are large quantities of cut roses of all grades. As usual, the yellows, pinks and reds sell well. Carnations are good and plentiful, and these are used extensively for funeral work, being about the best and cheapest for short work. Easter lilies and callas are plentiful and of good quality. Violets and sweet peas are in good crop, and always find sale. Jonquils, daffodils, tulips and Narcissus poeticus are in good supply, and fine stock always meets with a good and quick sale. For corsage work, pink and yellow roses, with a liberal quantity of freesia, are becoming popular.

Various Notes.

The two men arrested in Toledo for passing bogus checks on local florists have been arrested and an affidavit has been filed against them by the secretary of the Toledo Florists' Club. Armin Suder and George Schramm are the chief figures in the prosecution of these men, for it was in their places of business that they tried in vain to pass the checks. It was through the watchful eye of Mr. Suder that the crooks were cornered and later arrested. Four hearings have already been held in the police court, but no final decision has been handed down from the bench.

Lester Ritzman, chauffeur for Krueger Bros., is back at work again, after a severe attack of grip for the last week.

Henry Lohfink, night watchman for the last fifteen years at the greenhouses of Krueger Bros., was beaten insensible and robbed by two highwaymen early Sunday morning, February 28. He was severely beaten on the head with billies by the two men, robbed of a revolver and some small change, and left lying on the ground until the arrival of Mr. Krueger in the morning. Mr. Lohfink is still confined to his home as the result of the injuries sustained, and it will be some time till he can resume his duties as night watchman. No reason for the attack can be ascertained. G. B. S.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

No material change has taken place in business conditions during the last week. The weather has been springlike most of the time, and large quantities of stock arrive daily. Every line in the market shows a substantial increase in quantity; consequently, prices are not quite up to standard. The outlook for Easter is excellent. Growers as well as retailers are feeling assured of a successful season. The Lenten season is keeping business quiet, on the whole.

The stock as it arrives is in good condition, but moves slowly. Roses are in the pink of condition; their blooms, stems and foliage are perfect. Especially fine stock can be found in Sunburst, My Maryland, Prince d'Arenberg and White Killarney. Sweetheart roses are selling fairly well. Carnations are also exceptionally good. Large, long-stemmed White Wonder, White Enchantress, Pink Enchantress, Delight and Mrs. Ward are all that could be wished for. Lilies, including Easter lilies, Japanese and callas, meet with fair sale. Valley and violets are moving rather slowly. There are large quantities of daffodils, Victorias, Golden Spurs and narcissi on the market, but they drag somewhat. Orchid-flowering sweet peas, in pink, white and lavender, sell quite well. Present stock also includes pansies, forget-me-nots, acacias, freesias, mignonette and a profusion of red and yellow tulips.

Bowlers Beat Buffalo.

Forty members of the Buffalo Florists' Club paid a visit to Rochester Friday, March 5, to see their bowling team go down to defeat before the five of the Rochester Florists' Association at the Elks' clubhouse. The local florists won the straight games with overwhelming scores. The high individual score was rolled by Charles Sandiford, of the Buffalo team, who hit the wooden sticks for 204.

The contest was one of the series between the two associations for the Lord & Burnham trophy. Both have two victories to their credit and the deciding match will be held in Batavia April 7. The rules provide that it be rolled on neutral alleys in a neutral city.

The Buffalo team was composed of Charles Sandiford, Joseph Speidel, Robert Scott, Louis Neubeck and Joseph Streit. The victorious five was J. M. Keller, Harry Glenn, William Glenn, C. T. Boland and Paul Thomann.

A banquet was held before the contest, at which Charles Vick presided. J. M. Keller was chairman of the entertainment committee, and Fred Thomann of the bowling committee.

Various Notes.

Arthur R. Leutchford has been visiting the Isle of Pines, both for business and pleasure. While there he exhibited a Japanese garden at a show, which attracted considerable attention and for which he was highly commended. H. J. H.

OBITUARY.

Arthur Eugene Pettit.

Arthur Eugene Pettit was born at Gowanda, N. Y., March 10, 1876, and died at Albuquerque, N. M., Wednesday, February 24. When a young lad he moved with his parents to Perry, where he was educated in the public schools and learned the machinist's trade. At the age of 21 he went to Corry, where he worked at his trade until about six years ago, when he erected a small greenhouse at his home, 310 East Main street, and embarked in the florists' business. This venture prospered and necessitated several additions from time to time, until the plant became an extensive one.

Mr. Pettit was married in June, 1878, to Miss Bessie Erickson. To them was born one son, Grant Arthur, now 13 years of age. Besides his wife and son, Mr. Pettit is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ella Pettit, of Perry, N. Y., and a brother, Miles Pettit, of Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Pettit was a member of the Methodist church, of the Masons, the W. O. W., the I. O. O. F., the K. of P. and the K. O. T. M, and members of the most of these lodges turned out in a body at the funeral services, which were held March 1 at the residence The Order of the Eastern Star and Rebekahs also attended in a body.

Mary M. Scott.

Mrs. Mary M. Scott, of the firm of Mary M. Scott & Son, plumosus growers, at 4245 Shreve avenue, St. Louis, died Tuesday, March 2, of pneumonia, at the age of 79 years. Mrs. Scott was born in Perry county, Missouri, in 1836, and was active in business up to a few days before her death. Her husband, Robert Scott, was a landscape gardener. Besides her son, Robert, she leaves a daughter to mourn her loss. The funeral took place March 4. Interment was in Calvary cemetery. Quite a few members of the trade attended. Many beautiful floral offerings were noted.

J. J. B.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Allersma announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Evelyn Allersma, to Henry Elmer Westervelt. The marriage is to take place at the Allersma residence, 642 Benjamin avenue, April 17. Mr. Westervelt is now in the employ of Mr. Allersma, and father-in-law-to-be says he is a good grower.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

POT plants can be locally overdone, the same as cut flowers, but there seems no limit to the sale of bedding stock.

THE average florist makes nothing worth while except by long and continuous application; by hard work at one thing for a long time, and by the conservation of his resources.

SOME florists think good fellowship counts most of all in getting business, while others believe 100 cents of value for a dollar is the only important thing. A little courtesy with first-class service seems the ideal combination.

THE preliminary schedule has been issued for the fifth annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society, to be held at Newport, R. I., August 18 and 19. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, H. Youell, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y.

AN advertisement that speaks of your stock to a thousand possible buyers at a time does you just a thousand times as much good as a salesman's talk to one possible buyer at a time. See that the advertisement is as convincing as the salesman's talk would be.

A FEW years ago there were frequent reports of growers who were dropping roses and putting all their glass to carnations. Today it is the other way around, but it is doubtful if the growers who keep switching from one crop to another reap any special benefit therefrom.

WEALTH ON WESTERN FARMS.

According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the crop reports of which are accepted as authoritative, there remained in farmers' hands March 1, 153,000,000 bushels of wheat of the 1914 crop. When it is considered that the value at the farm that day is stated to have been $1.34 per bushel (it is $1.50 on the Chicago exchange) it can be seen that an almost incomprehensible sum of cash still is to be paid into the hands of the farmers of the middle west. Last year the March 1 farm value was only 83 cents.

No wonder the florists in the country towns and small cities of the wheat belt say business never was better.

—WHO HELP THEMSELVES.

The plant people, looking back on Christmas, are completely confident they will clean up their Easter stock. But it is not well to be too sure; borrowing a phrase, "Never sit down in the meadow and wait for the cow to back up and be milked—go after the cow." In other words, time was when the buyer would hunt the stock, but today the man with the stock would better search out the buyer, personally or by advertisement.

The plantsmen had a splendid Christmas, but just the same there were a good many who would have done better had they started their selling compaign earlier. And a part of the plantsmen's success at Christmas was due to the idea that cut flowers would be higher than usual in price. There is no such fear at Easter—cut flowers will be reasonable.

So it behooves the plantsmen to be up and doing.

"CERTAINLY."

Those who use the classified ads in The Review to dispose of surplus stock frequently express surprise at the wide response. Like this:

Please omit the German ivy ad, as the stock is sold. The Review certainly gets to all parts of the United States.—Geo. M. Wilson, South Lyon, Mich., March 8, 1915.

Please discontinue our cyclamen and mum ads, as they certainly sold the goods.—Constien Bros., Upper Sandusky, O., March 8, 1915.

This is what the publisher expects:

It may interest you to know we are getting excellent results from your classified ads.—A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., March 4, 1915.

EXPRESS COMPANIES HARD UP.

An attempt is understood to be on foot to have the Interstate Commerce Commission modify its old order in regard to express rates and practices. The commission has given notice that it has decided to entertain a petition March 16 for a modification of the express order.

In spite of the fact that few florists are able to see any decrease in their expenditures for express transportation, the finances of the express companies are said to have reached a deplorable condition since the inauguration of the new express rates and practices prescribed by the commission. According to the most complete recent analysis prepared by the commission, the nine reporting companies enjoyed an operating income of but $255,695 during the first four months of the present fiscal year, whereas during the same four months of the fiscal year preceding the operating income was $1,589,774. Total operating revenues of the nine companies during the first four months showed a decrease of more than $2,800,000. The nine reporting express companies included in this analysis were the Adams, American, Canadian, Globe, Great Northern, Northern, Southern, Wells-Fargo and Western.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Parker, John D., Kulpmont, Pa.
Davis, George W., Detroit.
Buena Vista Nursery, Hawthorne, Cal.
Scribner Floral Co., Detroit.
Anderson, A. V., Lindsborg, Kan.
Kalous Bros., Chicago.
Braje, J. D., Chicago.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

THE ROSE MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society will be held in the Massachusetts Horticultural hall in the city of Boston next week. The exhibition of roses will be fine, from what we are now advised. It is hoped that members of the Rose Society will take particular interest in this exhibition. It is expected that the governor of the state and the mayor of Boston will visit the exhibition. The annual business meeting will be called at 3 p. m., March 18, and several things of much interest to rose growers will be brought up, including the election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place, rose test gardens, grading roses for market and the affiliation of local societies.

The Market.

With Lent starting the middle of February, business for the first fortnight was unusually good, the next week fair, but the market now is sinking toward the usual Lenten basis; it is the lull before the storm of Easter orders.

Although the temperature continues moderately low, the sun is gaining power and it has been shining more than usual in the last few days. The result has been a considerable increase in production. The increase has also been felt in the surrounding cities that have been drawing a large part of their stock from this market, with the usual result: As production here increases orders fall off.

Roses are becoming steadily more plentiful. The quality now is fine. The market seldom has seen better stock than is offered this week and there also are good short roses enough to go around at moderate prices. Killarney is, of course, the predominating variety, but there are good supplies of White Killarney. Mrs. Russell is

NOVELTY

ROSES--Mrs. Russell and Killarney Brilliant

LET US call your special attention to our supply of Killarney Brilliant. Try this Rose—you will find it outclasses everything else on this market at this time. We also have a splendid cut of Mrs. Russell. Note our rose list. We offer all lengths in the following:

KILLARNEY BRILLIANT MRS. RUSSELL MILADY
BULGARIE OPHELIA WARD KILLARNEY
SUNBURST RICHMOND WHITE KILLARNEY

FANCY SWEET PEAS

Now is the time to show your customers our fancy Spencer (Butterfly) Sweet Peas—they will sell at sight. Nothing finer for corsage work. Our supply now is so large we can keep you supplied regularly.

NEW BEAUTIES

We are offering a cut of Beauties from young stock—absolutely the finest we ever handled at this time of year. A big crop for Easter.

BULB STOCK

We are the largest handlers of Tulips, Jonquils and Daffodils in the west. Largest quantity, finest quality, and we have the only supply of Freesia in several bright colors; you surely will want this regularly, once you try it.

Double—VIOLETS—Single

You will want a lot of good violets for corsages—especially now that they can be had at such moderate prices. Scarcely any limit to their sale if you push them. We have larger supplies than ever before.

FANCY CARNATIONS

again more plentiful and can be had on long stems, commanding half the price of the best Beauties. Killarney Brilliant is better than at any time heretofore and Hadley is giving nice crops for a few growers. Sunburst is moderately plentiful and there are increased supplies of Mrs. Ward. Evidently the spring crops are coming on all along the line, though red roses are not now much of a factor. Beauties are slightly more plentiful. Much of the stock cut from old plants still is of a quality that makes it difficult to sell, but an occasional grower is beginning on the spring cut from late planted stock and these Beauties are fine. The scarcity promises to be relieved in the near future.

Carnation crops are not showing the increase that is apparent in roses, but the prices are easy. There have been days when it was not possible to pick up just the stock needed to fill orders. White carnations are scarce this week; evidently the growers are cherishing them against the approach of St. Patrick's day.

Violets have afforded a problem for the wholesalers handling them in quantity. It cannot be said there is no demand for violets, as enormous quantities were sold March 6. It was, however, impossible to clean up until Saturday and then it could only be done at extremely low prices, possibly the lowest averages ever made in this market for the first week in March. The quality seems quite fair, with the probability that there will be more violets of usable quality for Easter than has been the case in several years.

Cattleyas are much less plentiful than they were. Valley continues abundant. Sweet peas are much more plentiful and the price even of the best has fallen twenty-five per cent.

ly blanket of them last week. Bulbous stock of all kinds continues plentiful and selling at the lowest prices of the season to date. Southern stock begins to be a factor. Easter lilies are in quite heavy supply in certain quarters and some fine rubrums are seen. Callas also are more abundant than heretofore.

Following the shortage of Mexican ivy, so much of this article has been called in that prices have been depressed to a point where there seems little profit in it. Otherwise the greens market is unchanged.

Various Notes.

S. Freund, widely known in the trade as sales manager for the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., has become associated with the Morris Paper Manufacturing Co., Morris, Ill., which is preparing to make a line of florists' boxes. Mr. Freund's headquarters will be in the Chicago office of the company, in the Harris Trust building.

It is evident to the most casual observer that Henry Van Gelder, president of Percy Jones, Inc., is an ardent believer in the established truth that appearances count, for he generally manages to have his place as neat as a new pin, more like a display room than like the average wholesale store.

A new flower store was opened at 2558 North Clark street March 10, by L. Beckers.

Returning March 5 from one of his periodical trips to California, where he and three friends have large partnership orchard interests, Fritz Bahr is more enthusiastic than ever. He plans his next trip for August.

The Easter lilies at Anton Then's this season number 15,000 pots. He says that some of his neighbors will have to keep their stock pretty warm to be ready, but he can not see anything that looks like a shortage. Nevtheless, he counts every Easter pot plant as good as sold.

Eleven carloads of lumber, principally pecky cypress, has just been unloaded at the Morton Grove greenhouses of Poehlmann Bros. Co., for the manufacture of flats and boxes and for bench repair purposes.

To gradually work into roses to the exclusion of everything else is the purpose of Hoerber Bros., according to Fred Hoerber, who says they have only five houses of carnations left and they are dropping these as rapidly as they can. This spring they have put in 2,000 Ophelia rose plants to take the place of as many Maryland.

SELF-WATERING FLOWER BOXES

THE OPINION OF CONARD & JONES CO.

2/22/1915.

Illinois Flower Box Co., 180 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: Seven years ago the possible value of the Illinois Self-Watering Flower Boxes appealed to us. They had just come on the market. We tried them out, satisfied ourselves beyond question as to their value, placed an order for a carload; have since then not only been distributing them widely, recommending them to our customers, but using them ourselves about our homes, inside and out, and after a period of seven years of use under all conditions we are not surprised that the Five-year Guarantee that goes with them has brought none of our customers back to get a box replaced because of leakage, or being unsatisfactory in any other respect.

They induce strong root growth and produce uniformly luxurious results. They please customers and help make more trade. We find it essential to maintain a good stock of them at all times.

Sincerely yours,
THE CONARD & JONES CO.

shape for St. Patrick's day. Mr. O'Carroll will send some of the plants to President Wilson, also to Governor Dunne, Judge McGoorty and other prominent sons of Erin.

The offices and plant of the H. M. Hooker Co., dealers in greenhouse glass, paints and putty, were closed March 8 because of the funeral of George M. Vial, late president of the company. Mr. Vial died March 5.

J. C. Craig, 120 South Wabash avenue, has been confined to his home for several days. His two sons are running the business in his absence.

A. L. Randall and Mrs. Randall left March 8 for their annual spring visit to West Baden.

C. W. Crum, formerly a Chicago retailer and more recently with the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., is to take charge of the new U. L. Crawford store to be opened in the Shops building in Des Moines. Mr. Crum will leave for Des Moines this week.

Erne & Klingel say they can see nothing among the growers that looks like a scarcity for Easter.

Winterson's Seed Store reports wholesale business opening well, but only a ripple of retail demand as yet.

N. J. Wietor says the lily never had any attractions for him—Wietor Bros. confine their attention to Beauties, roses and carnations after the mums are cut.

Max Ringier, secretary of Kennicott Bros. Co., wears an unusually broad smile this week, but the only explanation he will give is "Things are coming my way just now."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The stores are beginning to take on the appearance of the approach of Easter, with the steadily growing stock of potted plants, tulips, hyacinths, lilies, azaleas, etc. Several of the florists and growers who do not have downtown stands are seeking desirable locations for the Eastertide and or all hands are seen the indications of a good season. Business last week was satisfactory, demand being more active and the supply somewhat easier than during the preceding week. Prices are normal and the outlook promising.

Various Notes.

The Cumberland Hill Nursery, Woonsocket, has received the contract to trim and care for the trees in the village of Manville.

Joseph Koppelman is cutting more than 5,000 Spencer sweet peas daily from his East Providence houses. His rose houses at Oaklawn promise well for Easter.

The business of Michael Sweeney, corner of Broad and Pine streets, who recently died, will be continued by the estate under the name of M. Sweeney.

Conrad Schultz is cutting some fine daffodils at his greenhouses on Beach street, Westerly.

The Hogan Greenhouses, Richard L. Hogan, proprietor, Elmhurst avenue and Eaton street, have a fine line of plants for Easter.

Staples' flower store, in the Cook block, 138 Main street, Woonsocket, was damaged to the extent of $200 by water and smoke from a fire in an adjoining store a few nights ago.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, who also is an officer of the Industrial Trust Co., gave an interesting lecture on "Tales of a Teller" at the meeting of the Rhode Island Kindergarten League at the state normal school March 2.

Mrs. Mary A. Conley, 53 Moore street, with her daughter and two friends, had a narrow escape from serious injury when the automobile in which they were riding March 3 ran over an embankment and overturned at Spring Green, in Warwick. They were all bruised and shaken but otherwise uninjured.

James Quinn, one of the best known landscape gardeners in the vicinity of this city, died at his home, 28 School street, in the Olneyville section, at an early hour March 2, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Quinn's family has had its full share of deaths during the last eight months, the wife and four children having passed away. The deceased leaves three children, the oldest a daughter of 15 years.

Edgar Nock, grower of orchids, has taken the agency for the Kissel Kar automobiles.

The Smith Floral Co., Mineral Spring avenue, Pawtucket, has purchased a delivery car.

Miss Nellie O'Connor, for several years with T. O'Connor and later with Smith the Florist and Eugene McCarron, has opened a store for herself at the corner of Cushing and Thayer streets.

George E. Lindeman, who recently opened a store at 1137 Pleasant street, Fall River, was a business visitor last week.

Johnston Bros. have been showing a particularly attractive window of greens and tulips. They had the big decorations for the Sons of the American Revolution and the Spanish War Veterans at their annual banquet last week.

The Hoxsie Nurseries have commenced cutting the first of their tulips from their own bulbs.

Walter J. Sword, of Valley Falls, returned from a several days' fishing trip on Cape Cod last week.

Hoffman, of Pawtucket, has taken a stand for the sale of cut flowers and plants in Hall & Lyon's store, Westminster and Eddy streets, every Friday and Saturday. W. H. M.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—The new greenhouse of Mrs. C. C. Miller is nearly completed. She will soon have a store built.

Gentlemen:-

The display refrigerator, built by you and installed in our Clark street establishment, has now been in service for several months. We are pleased to say that it is giving entire satisfaction and fully up to every claim you make for it.

Since its installation we have noted a decrease in ice consumption, and an increase in the length of time stock will keep fresh, both of which is a big item in the florists' business. We are also proud of its appearance.

We wish to thank you for the prompt and courteous service in our dealings with you and shall be glad to say a good word to any prospective buyer you refer to us.

Very truly yours,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is depression in the cut flower market, most noticeable in the bulbous flowers. Violets are considered even worse, were that possible, by some of the wholesalers, while valley and sweet peas are also in oversupply. This is especially unfortunate as regards sweet peas, because they are so unusually fine. The market has taken more sweet peas than ever before at this season, but it seems as though all the growers are on crop at once and prices have declined. The Spencers are taken in preference to the ordinary peas where quality is desired, and the prices obtained for Spencers are so moderate that ordinary peas sell for figures quite ridiculous.

There are so many bulbous flowers now that they deserve further mention. Tulips suffer sadly. Couronne d'Or is the only variety short of the demand; all the others are woefully cheap. Paper Whites are worse still. Freesia will only sell in limited quantity. The supply of daffodils has fallen off a little; Emperor leads, with Golden Spur and Double Von Sion following.

Lady Campbell violets command a shade better price than Marie Louise, but that is not saying much.

Carnations and roses are the stronger features of the market; neither are in heavy supply, but there are enough of both to fill all orders at prices that sag in sympathy with the market for bulbous stock.

Calla lilies, though increasing in number, sell fairly well at an average that is lower than a week ago. Easter lilies, when they arrive in perfect condition, are in fair request, but, unfortunately, many are bruised in transit; this should be prevented. Acacia is about over. Forget-me-not and mignonette are plentiful. Pussy-willow and forsythia are quite often used.

The out-of-town demand, usually for selected stock, is of course the strength of a market on which two-thirds of the supply is grown for shipping. Without this demand chaos would follow.

The Carnation Meeting.

Last week's report of the carnation meeting of the Florists' Club may be properly supplemented by a little sketch made up of a few scenes that occurred during the evening. When J. Otto Thilow rose from a forward bench and in a clear voice, with well chosen words, offered the Henry A. Dreer handicap bowling cup, he assured every member present that the handicaps would be so arranged that he could win that cup once, or, with a bit of luck, even three consecutive times. During the heat of the debate the vice-president, who was in the chair, was so stung by the taunts of the opposition that he flew to the assistance of his comrades, taking the floor in person. C. E. Larzalere at once arose to a point of parliamentary order, telling the presiding officer with biting satire that he could not address the meeting until he put someone else in the chair. Mr. Gracey listened patiently, amid cries from his supporters that the interrupting member "sit down." Then, when he alone remained standing, he went calmly on.

William E. Simon, of Wilmington, suddenly exclaimed with a look of intense delight, "There's Alice!" It was at first thought that Mrs. Sarah E. Smith must have arrived with a bevy of young ladies, but later it was found that Mr. Simon had just caught sight of Peter Fisher's beautiful carnation.

In reply to a question about his new pink rose on the exhibition table, Victor Groshens said it was a novelty of John Cook's, of which he had a number of plants. Its future, Mr. Groshens said, had not been determined. He added that the flowers shown were second growth, not pinched. The rose was a rich pink, of good substance, size and form, stout stems and good foliage.

Charles E. Meehan asserted that if there were no wholesalers there would be no growers, by which he was understood that without the wholesaler the grower could not rise as a specialist.

The Farmers' Institute.

A farmers' institute for Philadelphia county was held in Horticultural hall on the afternoon and evening of March 5 and 6. David Rust presided. There was a strong array of talent on the platform and a dispiriting emptiness on the benches. All manner of interesting subjects for farm, orchard and garden were ably discussed by speakers of renown. Chief among these, from a florists' standpoint, were Antoine Wintzer, vice-president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, who denied the right of any man to cast a shadow over the luster of 5,988 varieties of roses by naming the best twelve, but who, in the interest of thirsty students of horticulture and to oblige the committee, did so under protest. George W. Kerr, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Doylestown, spoke on sweet peas, a subject on which he is a past master. A meeting that brought out Mr. Wintzer on roses and Mr. Kerr on sweet peas is so noteworthy that the hall should have been packed, even without the excellent talent brought together by the committee of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club.

Various Notes.

The national flower show committee has heeded Alfred M. Campbell's resolution, passed at the February meeting of the Florists' Club, by empowering Adolph Farenwald and William P. Craig to secure the tabernacle on Logan square instead of Convention hall at Broad and Allegheny streets for next mittee of three, consisting of John Young, of New York; J. J. Hess, of Omaha, and Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, was appointed on the trade exhibition to be held in conjunction with the San Francisco meeting, to report as to rates for space, etc. This committee recommended the adoption of the same rules that prevailed at the exhibition at the convention in Boston and that the same 40 cents per square foot be charged for space, which on motion of S. J. Goddard was concurred in.

A motion was adopted to dispense with the reading of essays at the San Francisco meeting, but to invite a limited number of prominent people to prepare such essays, the same to be furnished in advance of the meeting in time for publication in the various trade papers. On motion of Ex-President Wirth a committee of five on program was appointed, consisting of John Young, chairman, New York; Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; August Poehlmann, Chicago; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, and George Burton, Philadelphia.

On motion of W. R. Nicholson the chair appointed the following committee on publicity: George Burton, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia, chairman; Irwin Bertermann, president Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Indianapolis, and Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Theodore Wirth and J. J. Hess were appointed auditing committee, to pass upon the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and they reported that the accounts were correct and in first-class shape.

R. C. Kerr reported quite at length in regard to the energetic work he has been doing in Texas in the shape of organizing. In the course of this report he referred to the possibility of the organization of sectional associations. This brought out a spirited discussion in which a number of the members participated, and the result of the discussion was that Mr. Kerr expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the recent broad movement toward nationalism and the dominance of the parent society, the same not to interfere with complete autonomy on the part of state or other florists' associations, all of which are invited to come into the fold under the affiliation plan, which at the close of the discussion Mr. Kerr acknowledged the paramount advantages of and expressed himself as having gained much from the discussion and as prepared to go back home and push organization harder than ever.

On motion, the chair appointed three representatives in the east as an addition to the Chicago Club's committee on transportation, who will furnish eastern members all information in their power regarding the trip to San Francisco to the August convention, viz.: H. H. Bartsch, president Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston; George Burton, president Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and Harry A. Bunyard, president New York Florists' Club.

Representatives of subsidiary societies announced that it was not their intention to hold special meetings of their societies at San Francisco, further than to participate in the general meeting of the S. A. F.

In response to a telegram, Daniel MacRorie announced that the local committee on convention garden will undertake to carry out the same on the same basis as it was carried out in Minneapolis. At the suggestion of Mr. Roland, Theodore Wirth was appointed by the chair as a representative of the board of the S. A. F. to act in conjunction with the local committee on convention garden at San Francisco. On motion of Mr. Wirth it was voted to organize a permanent committee on convention garden similar in number and tenure to the national show committee. On motion of Secretary Young it was ordered that the awards to be given for the exhibits in the convention garden be in the form of medals or certificates, and that no cash prizes be awarded.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, offered a suggestion as to the possibility of having an exhibition where new plants could be exhibited and judged once every month, which he thought would be a great benefit, not only to the grower but also to purchasers of new plants. Mr. Peterson stated that he personally knew of plants sent out under three or four different names when they were all practically the same plant. This suggestion was quite generally discussed by the board, and a special committee, consisting of Messrs. Wirth, Kasting and Roland, was appointed to take this matter under consideration.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations

United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver ordered 5000 Dirt Bands in December, 40,000 in January, and 20,000 in March last year, and 70,000 this year.

Mr. Peterson also brought up a matter regarding which he has had considerable correspondence with various members of the S. A. F., as to the provisions in the classifications of the express companies regarding growing plants not in pots or tubs, placed in boxes, the sides and ends of which are as high as or higher than the plant, and slats nailed on the top completely protecting the plant, which are rated as second-class by the express companies, while growing plants in pots or tubs, plants in receptacles crated, are rated first-class. He believed that plants in pots carefully packed should be carried as second-class matter, giving reasons for same. After considerable discussion this matter was referred to the tariff and legislative committee.

Wm. F. Gude reported correspondence on the above matter with the Interstate Commerce Commission, advising that they had it under investigation. Wm. F. Kasting thought it might be a good idea to appoint a committee to take measures to obtain a new rating from the insurance companies on greenhouses of modern construction. It was the consensus of opinion that the former rates were now too high, the same having been established at a time when greenhouses were a much more hazardous risk than under the present improved construction. No action was taken,

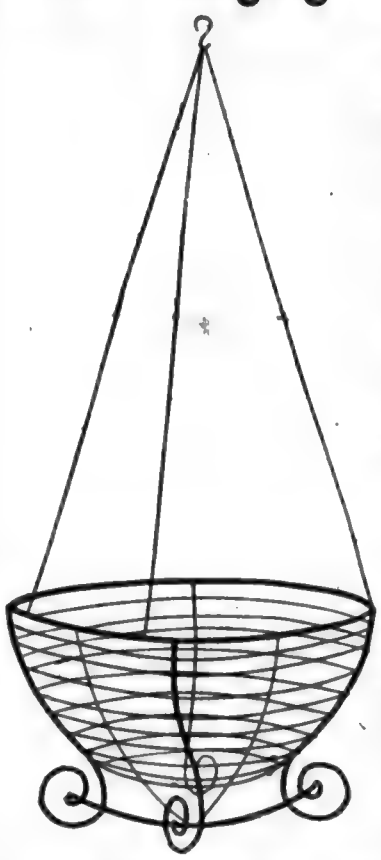
Ex-President Wirth brought up a subject dear to his heart, by asking for an expression of opinion from those present in regard to the suggestion that Mr. Wirth made in his President's Address at Boston, namely, his belief that the name of the S. A. F. & O. H. should be changed so as to refer to horticulture only. Great deference was paid to Mr. Wirth's feeling in this matter, but the result of an extended discussion was confirmation of the fact that the majority's sentiment was strongly opposed to any change of name, Mr. Gude bringing out forcibly that such a change would not only be repugnant to the traditions of the society and the sentiment of the membership at large, but would require the taking out of a new charter, which might even endanger the national character of the charter. Mr. Wirth, although fondly cherishing his desire for stronger reference in the society's name to horticulture pure and simple, stated that he would bow to the will of the majority in the matter until he could present stronger arguments for a change.



On motion of Secretary Young an adjourned meeting of the board was authorized to be held at the time of the flower show in New York.

National Flower Show Committee.

In addition to the matter of a possible change of hall for the Philadelphia show, as reported in The Review last week, a matter of special importance that was considered was the rate for space at the trade exhibition to be held in connection with the national flower show. After a full discussion it was determined that inasmuch as the exhibition will be held on one floor, a uniform price of $1 per square foot should be charged, first come first served. It is believed that this price will be satisfactory to all concerned, and Mr. Young reports that he has received a gratifying number of applications for space, with every prospect of plenty more coming, and as no favors will be shown, it is up to exhibitors to get their applications in early.

The question of admission of artificial flowers, etc., on equal terms with natural flowers was debated and it was the consensus of opinion that while no discrimination should be made and artificial flowers should be admitted on equal terms, a better display would be promoted by segregating the artificial flowers from the natural flowers in a special department of their own.

On motion of Mr. Kasting, the chairman and secretary were authorized and instructed to raise a guarantee fund of $10,000 and that in the call to be sent out the purposes for which the guarantee fund is to be raised shall be fully specified, and that all florists throughout the country be invited to participate in subscriptions to this guarantee fund.

It was also agreed that all funds in connection with the national flower show shall be turned over to and handled by the treasurer of the S. A. F.

Announcement was made by the American Carnation Society that it will bring its jubilee meeting to Philadelphia, in consideration of which, on motion of W. P. The Market.

The local wholesale market last week was in splendid condition so far as supply was concerned. Anything in season was on sale at any of the five markets. A few days of bad weather, with snow and rain, cut off a great deal of the retailers' trade. Previous to this, the retailers reported a splendid transient business. Prices had a downward tendency the last of the week. Carnations have been plentiful, with a poor demand. These were extra good. Violets suffered greatly and fine stock is quoted as low as $2 per thousand, with extra fancy at 50 cents per hundred. Roses are better than for some time, but the demand is only for the best grade. Killarneys continue to be the bulk of the rose supply. A great many sweet peas are coming in daily. These have a surprisingly good demand. The supply of bulbous stock is heavy and now that southern shipments are coming in, a glut is looked for. Greenhouse daffodils will suffer from this competition. Lilies, tulips, Dutch hyacinths, Romans and Paper Whites are slow in demand, as also are valley and snapdragons, asparagus and common and fancy ferns.

Various Notes.

Thomas Petersen and Charles Roper are now in the employ of Werner Bros., at Clayton, Mo. Both men are well known in the trade, as twenty years ago they were members of the old Florists' Bowling Club and we spent many pleasant Monday evenings together.

The County Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting March 3. The meeting was well attended, and some interesting discussions took place. It was decided to join the St. Louis Florists' Club in entertaining the American Carnation Society when it meets here in January, 1916.

J. F. Ammann, Edwin Denker, W. J. Pilcher, John Steidle and Charles Johann were the members of the St. Louis Florists' Club who attended the Illinois State Florists' Association's meeting last week. They report a splendid meeting and a good time.

George Angermueller had quite a run of shipping trade last week. Green fluid for carnations and wire hanging baskets had a good call. Cut flower consignments were large.

The Sanders Nurseries will have a fine lot of Easter lilies this year. They contemplate building a large rose house this summer at their Henley road plant. The nursery and retail departments, on Clara avenue, report some busy days.

Retail trade this year is not suffering from the lull that usually comes with Lent. Instead, it is slowly increasing. There is a good market for roses, carnations, sweet peas, tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. Potted plants are in the usual demand. shows the Worcester County Horticultural Society has given. The feature of the show was a Dutch garden managed by A. H. Lange, E. W. Breed and Mr. Van Luen. The garden was divided by two walks leading to a summer house and between the walks was a bed of tulips, hyacinths, narcissi and rhododendrons. At one side of the walks was a bed of narcissi and at the other a bed of tulips and hyacinths. There were two smaller beds on each side of the summer house, one composed of Darwin tulips, of which Pride of Haarlem drew special attention. Inside the summer house a little boy and girl, dressed as Dutch children, were playing. A Dutch scene, with the windmill and dike, was placed at the back of the entire garden and, with its brick walls and Dutch flowers, it looked much like the gardens of Holland. The Cadman orchestra furnished music both days.

Miss Lucy Coulson had a special display of jasmines that were exceptionally good. The carnations exhibited by the Sunnyside Nursery were fine and those shown by W. E. Estabrook could not be passed without praise.

The awards were:

Miss Lucy Coulson received a special prize for jasmines, and Charles Porter for Cineraria stellata.

Various Notes.

H. F. A. Lange reports business still increasing and spring flowers in demand. He made a specialty of sweet peas last week. His window of enormous pussy willows, cinerarias, cyclamens and primulas was beautiful. Mr. Lange has some of his prize tulips on exhibition at the Bancroft hotel. He has a contract to furnish this hotel with flowers.

Harry Randall reports a good business. His transient trade is good. He had a nice window display of various kinds of tango bowls. He says his new Ford delivery car aids him greatly with his deliveries.

F. B. Madaus has some fine calla lilies. Last week he made a specialty of sweet peas and violets. He says trade is good and that he looks forward to a large Easter business.

H. F. Littlefield had a sale on violets, narcissi and ferns, selling them at a popular price. H. L.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

The above was taken from the following report in the Market Growers' Journal, January 1, 1914, page 6.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., 135,000 2-inch dirt bands.

393% MORE EARLY FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7⅝ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

"I had some of your paper pots last year. I want more this year."—W. R. Wissinger, Homer City, Pa.

"We used 10,000 of your paper Dirt Bands last Spring and we like them. They are just the thing. Please give us prices on 40,000 or 50,000."—S. K. Green Co., Paris, Ill.

"Ten thousand paper pots came duly to hand. We are enclosing check for 15,000 more. Kindly rush them out as before."—L. A. Budlong Company (700-acre gardens), Chicago, Ill.

(The L. A. Budlong Company are using 50,000 Paper Pots this year.)

"Please ship immediately 150,000 2-in. Dirt Bands and 20,000 3-in. dirt bands."—B. B. Dilks, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The THOROUGHLY DEPENDABLE QUALITY of the material in your Paper Pots commends them to users everywhere. Tomato plants which without your Pots sell here at $1.00 per 100, raised in your Pots sell at $4.00 per 100."—The Dalles Floral Company, The Dalles, Ore.

"From about 2700 Tomato plants I picked 1140 MARKETABLE CRATES of Tomatoes, which brought me $600."—D. B. Moses, Purchase, N. Y.

"Tomato plants raised in the 4-inch size sell readily at FIVE CENTS EACH."—W. J. Symonds & Son, Decorah, Ia.

"We have used some of your Paper Pots for young roses, which are doing fine."—Casa de Flores Greenhouses, Corpus Christi, Tex.

"BANDS WILL GIVE BETTER PLANTS THAN POTS." (Clay Pots.)—F. B. Murdock & Co., Kingston, Pa.

"We got BETTER PLANTS, BIGGER PLANTS AND PLANTS WHICH WERE HEALTHIER AND MORE VIGOROUS THAN IN CLAY POTS."—Wm. Schruers, Gardener, Oil City, Pa.

"We find that WATERING ALONE SAVES TIME ENOUGH TO PAY OVER CLAY POTS, and with proper handling there is NO QUESTION BUT A BETTER PLANT CAN BE GROWN."—H. Russell & Son, Market Gardeners, Boonville, New York.

"I find them SUPERIOR TO EARTHEN POTS IN EVERY CASE, requiring about half the water—at least that is the case after the sun gets well back and very drying."—W. L. Leeka, Fairmount, Ill.

"We grew Tomato plants and Chrysanthemum plants in your Dirt Bands last year and they proved VERY SATISFACTORY AND CHEAP, A GREAT SAVING OVER CLAY POTS."—L. M. Smith & Co., Laurel Greenhouses, Laurel, Del.

"They do not dry out as fast as clay pots and MAKE BETTER PLANTS in the same length of time. They hold the plants longer in fine condition without getting yellow than clay pots. They are also better for shipping plants, as they are light and pack better than clay pots."—Evan R. Miller, Florist, Bridgeton, N. J.

"All worked very satisfactorily and they DO NOT REQUIRE THE ATTENTION THAT SMALL POTS DO. We certainly like Dirt Bands."—Reimers Bros., Rapid City, S. D.

"We are MUCH IMPRESSED WITH THE FACT that Paper Pots give so much more root space than other pots."—Gallup Bros., Ashtabula, Ohio.

"The crop from the plants grown in your dirt bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."—J. M. Gage, Market Gardener, Willimantic, Conn.

"I used the Rochelle dirt bands with VERY GREAT SUCCESS. I had an IMMENSE CROP of both tomatoes and cucumbers and both started picking fully 15 DAYS BEFORE THE USUAL TIME in this section."—Chas. H. Weaver (Choice Fruit and Vegetables), Dunnville, Ont., Can.

"I used your Dirt Bands for tomatoes, peppers and eggplants—also for mignonette, heliotrope and helichrysum. I AND MY TRADE WERE PLEASED WITH THEM. I shall use more the coming season."—Chas. C. Roberts, Lansdowne, Pa.

"We highly recommend your Dirt Bands. We had tomatoes the FIRST OF JUNE, and the only tomatoes in Kay Co., Okla., this year, DUE ENTIRELY to using your Dirt Bands and getting them out early."—Nichols & Son, Market Gardeners, Blackwell, Okla.

"We raised vegetable plants and asters in your Paper Pots. They accomplished their purpose. They gave BETTER PLANTS THAN THOSE IN CLAY POTS AND SOLD AT DOUBLE PRICE."—Mt. Gilead Floral Co., Mt. Gilead, O.

"There is abundance and famine, prosperity and adversity. What the first mentioned is to the latter so are Square Paper Pots to the clay variety. The better results obtainable and the ADVANTAGES OVER THE CLAY POTS are due to the fact of their shape allowing the roots to spear out, instead of becoming cramped. They are a good thing for the grower."—George F. Braybon, Kent, O.

"We used about 3000 of your Dirt Bands last year. We think they are great. Plants grew fine in them."—West View Greenhouses, Knightstown, Ind.

"I think I never had anything that is so good as your paper pots. I cannot say too much for them."—Mrs. James Weber, East Liverpool, O.

"A visiting florist recommended your Dirt Bands. Please ship by freight the following (55,000)."—A. A. Lohman, Hastings, Neb.

"Please send us 10,000 4-in. Paper Pots. We liked them last year very much."—Stiles Gardens, Inc., Stiles, Wis.

"I planted tomato seeds in the pots and had tomatoes a month earlier. I would not do without them."—Maurice Tressler, Columbus, O.

"I raised tomatoes and cucumber plants in your Dirt Bands, and found them to raise BETTER AND EARLIER PLANTS than any other method."—B. von Bavel, Castle Hayne, N. C.

(Mr. von Bavel used 20,000 4-inch Dirt Bands in 1913 and 20,000 in 1914.)

"Inclosed find P. O. money order for 7000 3-inch Paper Pots. Please ship by freight to Norwich, Conn."—Avery Bros., Norwich Town, Conn.

(Avery Bros. got 5000 3-in. pots in 1913, 5000 in 1914 and 7000 this year.)

"Inclosed find check for 10,000 2-in. Dirt Bands, 10,000 4-in. Dirt Bands, 5000 2½ paper pots, 1000 4-in. paper pots."—G. H. Arnold & Sons, Braintree, Mass.

(Messrs. G. H. Arnold & Sons used 10,000 4-in. Dirt Bands last year.)

"I AM THANKFUL THAT THEY HAVE COME ON THE MARKET."—M. P. Scott, Castle Grove, Pa.

true of roses and carnations. Bulbous stock in this vicinity is not as much grown as in former years, as the general opinion of florists is that such stock involves heavy expense and little profit.

Reorganization of Club.

On Wednesday evening, March 3, the florists and gardeners met at the Exhibition hall to formulate plans for the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, sixty being present. Twenty-three names were enrolled and a committee composed of J. W. Rodgers, Horace Frank, George W. Bartholomew, E. E. Schafer, M. L. Vogel, Elmer Brame, L. D. Polk and Mrs. L. D. Johnson was appointed to draft new by-laws. This committee will meet March 10.

For thirty days an initiation fee of $1 will be charged for membership. An effort will be made to enlist the support of seed and implement dealers and others interested in gardening.

Wilmette, Ill.—Pyfer & Olsem issue mileage coupons, giving "a mile in travel for a dollar in trade," at their retail store in the Village theater building.

Flushing, N. Y.—August Millang, who has conducted the store at 1 Jamaica avenue for the last two years, has sold the business to S. Frick, of Brooklyn, who has heretofore been in Mr. Millang's employ. Mr. Frick will take over the business this month. Mr. Millang said he felt constrained to relinquish the local store because of his Brooklyn business and the fact that he intends opening a branch store in Jamaica this week.

FOR SALE—In fine village in central New York, on good trolley line, well established florist's business; 5 houses, 9500 feet of glass, completely stocked for spring trade; 7-room house, good barn, 1 3/10 acres of land, with complete equipment; everything in fine order; for particulars address L. J. White, 226 Emma St., Syracuse, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Florist's business in southern California city of 19,000; only florist in city; $2000.00 will handle if taken at once; also will lease 19,000 ft. of greenhouses and 9 acres of land; just the place to work in connection with above store; $3000.00 cash will handle both propositions; full particulars to those who mean business. Address No. 358, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

FOR SALE—Modern and up-to-date greenhouse plant of about 35,000 ft. of glass, with four acres of land, adjoining city limits, with first-class flower store in city of 20,000 in Illinois, 100 miles from Chicago; all houses are well stocked; good growing trade; everything practically new; terms reasonable; reasons for selling, to settle estate. Address No. 164, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

FOR SALE—4 greenhouses, about 25,000 ft. of glass, 5¼ acres of good, fertile land, near a good village, few feet from R. R. siding, about 30 miles from New York city; boiler house, 35x50, concrete blocks; cellar under all; 100 H. P. return tubular boiler, brick set; first-class water system; all built 1914; plenty of young stock; $6000.00 cash, balance on easy terms. Kramer Bros., Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y.

FOR SALE—Property consisting of 120 acres of fine land all under irrigation, a fine garden tract, three greenhouses, two of them 23x100 and one 29x110, steam heated, two boilers, steam pump, good steam engine; a dwelling house of seven large rooms; large hay barn and a packing house for vegetables; am willing to sell for $6,000 for the whole thing with greenhouses full of lettuce (2,000 dozen which we sell at 50 cents per dozen), but no stock or tools at that price; at this price anyone can make the place pay for itself in two or three years; we are marketing between 6,000 and 8,000 dozen lettuce besides 20,000 pansies and daisies from the glass, aside from the outside garden truck; only place here in business; have no competition; all sold at wholesale; will take $2,000 down and as long time as desired for the balance; greatest place in the world for anyone with weak lungs. For further particulars address W. J. Paddock, Box 328, Leadville, Colo.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,

The Market.

With the exception of March 6, when there was a fairly good clean-up, business was quiet last week and prices ruled quite low. The present week will see more social activity and it has opened somewhat more auspiciously than its predecessor, but there is no real snap to business. Roses have been cleaned out with greater difficulty and only at a sacrifice in values. Plenty of short-stemmed flowers are procurable at $10 per thousand. The principal call continues to be for the newer varieties, such as Ophelia, Russell, Hadley, Sunburst and Prince d'Arenberg. Both Killarney and White Killarney are in oversupply. A good number of the pretty little Mlle. Cecile Brunner come in and this proves quite popular.

Carnations have not shown so much decline as roses, but clean up with difficulty. The general range is $1.50 to $3 per hundred; a few reach $4. Violets have been almost unsalable and have been disposed of at ruinous prices; many have sold at $1.50 to $2 per thousand. There is now an immense crop of singles, too many for the market's needs. Bulbous flowers have held up remarkably and growers of these have had as good a season as usual so far. Spencer sweet peas move well, white being the poorest seller. Grandifloras can scarcely be sold at any price. There is an abundant supply of callas, lilies, snapdragons and valley. Much of the last named is of poor quality.

Cattleyas have shortened up, but there is no great demand for them, nor is there much call for gardenias. Asparagus is moving a little better.

There is now a fine assortment of flowering plants, including ericas, azaleas, acacias, camellias, genistas, rambler roses, bulbous flowers, cinerarias, cyclamens, lilacs, cherries, rhododendrons and bougainvilleas. Business in this line is not yet active, however.

Various Notes.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which will be held March 10 at the New American House, is an assured success, with nearly all tickets disposed of. The principal speakers will be J. K. M. L. Farquhar, in behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and Patrick Welch, in behalf of the S. A. F. The decorations will, as usual, leave nothing to be desired.

The Halifax Garden Co., Halifax, Mass., is doing extremely well with roses this season. Particularly good now are Sunburst, Richmond, Taft, Mrs. Ward, Killarney and White Killarney. The best carnation is Mrs. C. W. Ward. Others which show up well are Pink Delight, Matchless and Benora.

The annual spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens March 18, will be the finest seen in Boston for some years. The addition of the American Rose Society's classes will lend increased interest to it. The New York show seems likely to draw fewer visitors and exhibitors from this section than usual, although quite a few will make a short trip to see the Grand Central Palace show.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, who are large bulb specialists, say that bulbs so far have cleaned up remarkably well. They find Flamingo a fine seller among tulips. Thomas Moore they have dropped. Murillo remains a favorite, with La Reine. Golden Spur, Victoria and Von Sion are their three leaders in narcissi.

Henry Penn and Mrs. Penn have returned from a trip to New York, Philadelphia and Washington. While away, Mr. Penn visited a number of growers of Easter plants and some of the leading retailers. Business at the Bromfield street store continues good, pot plant trade being especially active.

The lecture March 6 at Horticultural hall by Dr. H. T. Fernald on "The Insect Outlook for New England" was much the best delivered this season, according to those who have heard all the lectures. A lengthy and valuable discussion followed the reading of the paper. Dr. Fernald was a little pessimistic on the outlook for 1915 and looks for no diminution in the hordes of gypsy moths, brown tail moths, and other pests of which Massachusetts has so ample a portion.

The force at the store of Wax Bros. is kept busy all the time. Their windows are rearranged daily and afford a charming suggestion of spring. J. B. McDonald, of the staff, will lecture before the Lynn Art Club March 12 on "The Construction and Planning of Old-fashioned Gardens."

William Sim says the present winter has been a disastrous one for violet specialists, of whom he is the largest in New England, if not in America. For the last two years, owing to peculiar weather conditions, single violets have bloomed sparsely through the winter and have thrown an enormous crop in early spring, which the market cannot consume. Spencer sweet peas are fine with him, colored varieties selling far better than white.

Galvin's finds business good at the new store on Park street. The more roomy quarters are found to be a great boon.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club March 16. It will be rose night and several specialists will speak on various phases of rose culture. Exhibits, no matter how small in number, are solicited, especially of novelties. A large display is not looked for, as the spring flower show opens only two days later.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, is showing a fine lot of clivias, amaryllises, crinums and Spanish irises. Something out of the common is always to be found here.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, have a heavy daily cut of the little polyantha rose, Mlle. Cecile Brunner. Other roses doing specially well with them are Taft, Prince d'Arenberg, Sunburst, Ward and White Killarney. They have a fine house of Easter lilies.

Now that flowers are abundant and cheap in the wholesale markets, a veritable flood of new flower stores has opened up with such titles as Growers' Surplus Store, Florists' Supply Co., etc., and they are certainly selling flowers at low rates.

The seed stores on South Market and North Market streets all report business as active. Staffs are working nights and the volume of business for January and February is far ahead of 1914. This is due to people buying earlier, owing to the fear of being unable to secure seeds, as well as to the comparatively open winter.

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, has the finest White Enchantress I have seen this season, fully equal to the best Matchless I have seen. His Beacon, Benora, Pink Delight and White Wonder are all splendid.

Welch Bros. Co. reports business quite good and is optimistic as to the future. Patrick Welch thoroughly enjoyed his trip to Chicago and is full of enthusiasm for the San Francisco convention.

The Market.

Business last week was slightly better than it has been. Dinner decorations and funeral work were heavier. There has been a noticeable drop in the price of all flowers, and while the glut of the early part of the week was stopped by the stormy weather of the last three days, there are more roses, carnations, sweet peas, violets and bulbous stock than the market can absorb. Easter lilies are overplentiful, but are moving fairly well. The first cut made by those growers who produce these flowers for the Easter period only are making their way into the market and are added to an unusual supply produced by those who furnish the market the whole year. The movement of rubrum lilies is slow. Sweet peas are so plentiful that the wholesalers are glad to get 50 and 75 cents per hundred, and sales in large quantities are reported at as low as $3 per thousand. Violets are also in oversupply. There is a shortage of locally grown orchids. The supply of daffodils and narcissi is shortening considerably. Rambler roses made their appearance during the week, and southern palm for Palm Sunday is now being shown in the stores.

Various Notes.

David J. Grillbortzer, of Alexandria, Va., is shipping in some exceptionally fine gardenias. This is his first year in growing these flowers.

H. L. Lauscher, formerly with Z. D. Blackistone, but now manager of the store of the Idle Hour Nurseries, at Macon, Ga., was a visitor here during the week. C. F. Bahret, who is a large grower of double violets at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., also was in the city. Among other visitors were Mrs. Anna G. Griffiths, of the West Side Floral Shop, Scranton, Pa.; S. S. Skidelsky, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Jemima Roderick, Scranton, Pa., and Charles H. Fox, Robert Shoch, with the M. Rice Co., Joseph J. Goudy, representing H. A. Dreer, Inc., and I. Rosnosky, with the H. F. Michell Co., all of Philadelphia.

A complaint has been placed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by a large number of Washington merchants, including several florists, in which it is declared that the railroads here have failed to publish and put into effect just and reasonable specific commodity rates applicable to this city, upon all articles to and from all points of origin in the tariffs of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroad companies. As a result of this, it is claimed, the petitioners have suffered financial loss and injury in violation of the act to regulate commerce, and the Interstate Commerce Commission is asked to prescribe such rates as in its opinion will be just and reasonable and to order reparation for the unlawful charges made during the period of two years previous to the date of the petition.

W. W. Kimmel, of 1131 Fourteenth street, northwest, is being congratulated by his friends not only upon his escape from injury but also upon his bravery. Were it not for his efforts, Dr. Alice Boyd would have been asphyxiated Saturday evening, March 6, when her home, which adjoins the store, was filled with smoke and fumes from an automobile supply shop. Mr. Kimmel, noticing smoke coming into his store, started to investigate and found a good-sized fire in progress. He notified the occupants of the house and led them to safety, but the doctor went back into the building for some valuables. She became confused, and Mr. Kimmel fought his way through the blinding smoke and rescued her just as she was about to faint. About a half-hour later, when the firemen had the flames under control, he again made the trip to rescue a canary bird, over the possible fate of which the doctor was much worried.

As a result of the continued appearance of the streetmen offering flowers at prices below those which the storemen are called upon to pay at wholesale, the latter gathered together March 8 for the purpose of organizing against this and other trade evils. A previous effort along this line failed, but better progress is expected at this time.

Club Meeting.

At the annual election of the Florists' Club of Washington, March 2, at 1214 F street, northwest, George H. Cooke was reëlected president; R. L. Jenkins, vice-president, and William F. Gude, treasurer. C. L. Linz was chosen secretary.

The meeting was unusually well attended, the motion picture exhibitions given by Sidney B. Lust, of the United Film Service Co., and Herbert M. Osborn, of the Pathe Co., proving great attractions. At this meeting, the growth of sweet peas from the time of planting the seed until blooming was shown, and this, with the Pathe Weekly, giving the florists a glimpse of recent happenings in Europe, was well received. Music was furnished by Charles Houser, with E. F. Droop & Co., with a Victrola.

Application for membership in the club was presented by William F. Sharper, who recently left the employ of the Gude Bros. Co. to engage in business with his brother at Oxon Hill, Md. The application was referred to a committee composed of Adolph Gude, R. L. Jenkins and David Bisset.

A discussion was held as to the advisability of holding a banquet this year, and the committee composed of Adolph Gude, chairman, Fred H. Kramer, R. L. Jenkins, Otto Bauer, Harry Lewis and William A. Marche reporting in favor of such an event, it was authorized to proceed with the necessary arrangements. The date of the banquet will be announced at the next meeting. C. L. L.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The first few days of March were bright and sunny, but the latter part of the week was stormy and snow fell. Trade is fair for Lent and there are a few quiet social functions. There is an abundance of all kinds of cut flowers, and bulbous stock is pouring in daily. Sales of violets, tulips, daffodils, etc., are taking place daily, in order to push the accumulated stock. Victoria daffodils, Narcissus poeticus, freesias and yellow marguerites are some of the choicer spring flowers shown now. Cut camellias, forget-me-nots, orchid sweet peas and single violets are available, but the demand is light. There are few pansies. Rhododendrons, azaleas, primroses and potted bulbous stock are plentiful and move easily.

Bowling Match at Rochester.

A good number of the Buffalo Florists' Club went to Rochester March 5 for the annual bowling contest. They were met at the station by the Rochester boys in autos and were taken on a tour of inspection, first to the various greenhouses and later to the stores. In the evening a splendid dinner was served and afterward the bowling match took place at the Central alleys, where the Buffalo boys were held up with a tie score by the excellent bowling of the Rochester florists, who still hold the Lord & Burnham trophy. A final match is to take place about April 15, in Batavia, halfway between Buffalo and Rochester, to prove who will finally get possession of the trophy.

Various Notes.

Thomas Tobin, formerly with W. J. Palmer & Son, is now with J. Benson Stafford, on Chippewa street.

Harold Taylor was here for a visit with his parents and friends after having severed his connection with Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C., March 1. A few days later he left for Detroit, Mich., where he entered the employ of Philip Breitmeyer.

Wm. R. MacKearnin has accepted a position with Smith & Pritchard, Niagara Falls, N. Y. He was formerly with Ed. Stroh, in this city.

The smoker and entertainment in connection with a brief business meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was a howling success. A German and a Yiddish comedian got off some clever stunts and the dancing of the cabaret girls was fascinating. There were several good vocal solos and the "German band" furnished fine music. The new initiation ceremony was exceedingly funny and unique. It had its gruesome side as well and made a great hit with the boys. About 100 men were present.

J. M. McClellen has gone to Boston, Mass., where he will be associated with Sidney Hoffman.

Some excellent Yellowstone carnations were shown at the Palmer branch store last week.

Pink snapdragons of extra fine quality, fancy pink stocks, blue marguerites, giant mignonette and Victoria daffodils are the latest arrivals at Stroh's Quality Shop, where novelties are always found. Excellent ericas in large and small sizes are finding ready sale.

At the Anderson greenhouses Easter stock is in fine condition. The Easter lilies will be just about the right height. The ramblers are in fine condition. Both the American and the French hydrangeas are good, clean stock and full of buds. Azaleas are coming in and there will be an abundance of others for Easter week. Joseph Streit certainly knows how to time his stock to bloom when wanted.

Something new in the shape of a "4 o'clock" box of cut flowers is taking well at S. A. Anderson's. It gets its name from the fact that at 4 o'clock every afternoon the window is cleared and fresh boxes of cut flowers are made up and sold for 50 cents from 4 to 6 p. m. The boxes contain a generous number of tulips, daffodils, carnations or any other small flowers of which there is an oversupply, and many people going home in the evening take 4 o'clock boxes with them, since these boxes are not delivered. It certainly gets business when other methods fail and the 4 o'clock box sign attracts buyers. E. C. A.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

VISITED CHICAGO: E. T. Robinson, of the Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb.

MAIL orders have been affected by the bad weather in the middle west last week. It takes bright sun to load the mailbags.

IF peas can not be sold they can be planted and it looks as though the acreage will be at least as great as the situation justifies. It is just the other way with beans.

WAX beans are at a premium, as there are practically none on the market. The only hope lies in the small growers. In fact, anything in the shape of a bean brings from $6 to $8 per bushel.

S. F. LEONARD, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who has been confined to his home in Oak Park with the grip for three weeks, is rapidly improving and expects to go south for a two weeks' rest.

CASS LANNING, who started in the seed business at Nowata, Okla., twelve years ago with a capital of $500, is now in his new $6,000 building. He has added garden tools, poultry supplies and spray pumps to his lines of stock.

THE unexpected has happened: tuberose bulbs and the largest sizes of caladiums have turned scarce. It is said some of the tuberose growers had so little confidence in the future they did not harvest all their crops last autumn.

"WE are shipping large quantities of all kinds of field seeds into the cotton country, which is tangible evidence that the cotton acreage will be greatly reduced this year," says H. J. Rankin, of McKay, Reece & Co., of Nashville, Tenn.

A TRAIN of ten carloads of onion sets pulled out of the freight yards of the Northwestern railroad at Chicago, March 6, for Brandon, Manitoba. The sets belonged to A. E. McKenzie, who purchased them from the Leonard Seed Co. Mr. McKenzie accompanied the train to insure proper care of the shipment.

THERE are said still to be large quantities of valley pips in storage at Hamburg, but only small quantities are arriving in America, since the market here is thought to be already loaded. Last week's arrivals were limited to one lot via Christiansand, twenty-four cases consigned to Charles Schwake & Co., but it brought the season's imports via New is a man who is practically wise. His knowledge is convertible into dividends. He has experience plus common sense, and is always willing to learn. Some florists, in visiting about, see a good crop of lilies, note the general conditions, and expect to accomplish the same results at home. But visiting various greenhouses won't make you a good lily grower any more than visiting garages will make you a chauffeur. It takes experience—practical wisdom. In the first place, florists often neglect the very cause of success. That is in getting the right kind of bulbs. Good bulbs are the foundation for all good crops. And in this respect Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, being the best lily bulbs produced, are responsible for more of the good crops than any other brand. Don't fail to get this brand—prudent growers all buy it.

Not how cheap but how good.

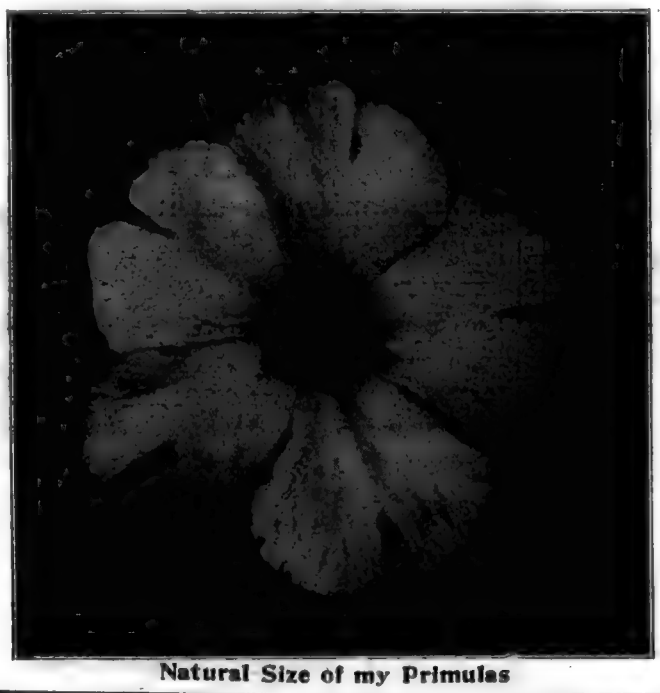
York up to 9,452 cases, against 8,786 cases last year.

In spite of the embargo, German seeds still arrive by practically every boat from Rotterdam.

California growers take a much more roseate view of life than in recent seasons. Selling has been and still is fairly easy and there have been good rains.



Most of the large seed houses are working nights and Sundays getting out orders. On account of the warm weather, seeds booked for middle March and April delivery have been hastened by wires calling for immediate delivery.

The H. F. Michell Co., with the idea of boosting the bulb sales and at the same time interesting a large number of private gardeners in the National Flower Show to be held in Philadelphia next spring, has offered a splendid array of special prizes, including four gold medals, twenty-one silver medals, seven bronze medals and fourteen silver cups.

THE ASSOCIATION'S POLICY.

The policy of the American Seed Trade Association with regard to membership has been brought out by a suggestion coming from the Pacific northwest that there is need for an organization of seed growers separate and distinct from those whose interests are sufficiently represented in the American Seed Trade Association. It appears that certain seed growers in the vicinity of Portland, Ore., are considering the advisability of asking the seed growers of the United States to meet at San Francisco sometime during the exposition for the purpose of perfecting a national organization. The Review questioned the need for any such step, when the information was brought to it, suggesting that the American Seed Trade Association, to which many of the leading seed growing houses already belong, is in a position to serve all the interests of the seed industry. The result was that one of the Portland seed growers sought an expression of opinion from one of the men in position to speak for the American Seed Trade Association. The letter, dated January 21, 1915, perhaps was not written for publication, and for that reason the writer's name is not used, but when a copy of it was sent to The Review it readily was recognized that it came from a man in position to speak with authority and to influence the character of membership, and hence the activities of the association. Two paragraphs which encourage the growers to push ahead with their idea of a separate organization are:

"In the first place, the American Seed Trade Association originally was started by the dealers, but there is quite a membership today of the large growers who also, in connection with their growing, have seed establishments, but it has not been the policy of the organization for several years to

Asparagus Lutzi

This new Asparagus Fern has many qualities which render it superior to the old Asparagus Plumosus. It does not wind; it flowers profusely and seeds freely; its cultivation is very simple, and it only requires a cold house; it has no thorns. Even without water it will keep fresh for weeks when cut. A full description will be sent on application.

take in exclusive growers. In fact, the interests of the dealers are such that, while they may not be directly against the interests of the growers, yet are along different channels, and consequently there has been very little benefit to be derived from the organization by the exclusive growers, other than social connections, which are altogether to be considered only as minor quantities.

"This is the construction that has been put on the constitution and by-laws of the organization for some time. Personally, I would advise the growers, if they felt need of an association at all, to have one of their own, and then there would be no possible conflicting movements or elements to be considered, and then it would be entirely possible for the two organizations to work together and assist each other along legislative lines whenever occasion required it, and this, taking the way our legislators have been acting for the past three or four years in practically all the states, is liable to come at almost any time."

QUARANTINE SEED POTATOES.

A quarantine against seed potatoes from certain infected areas in Maine and New York has been declared by the Department of Agriculture. The quarantine, the department announced, took effect from March 3. It was stated that the powdery scab had been discovered in the potatoes grown in Aroostook county, Maine, and that to date there is no practical system of inspection which will detect the presence of the disease on the field. On this account the department has been compelled to refuse hereafter to certify seed potatoes from the known areas of infection in Maine and New York. The department will hereafter certify for shipment only table stock potatoes from these districts.

WAR AND FRENCH SEED TRADE.

J. Hasslach, well known in America as possibly the leading seed grower or exporter in the south of France, sends the following from St. Remy de Provence:

"Although our seed growing center has been directly affected by the war, having been spared from burning down of our farms, devastation of our fields and trampling down by troops, our growers nevertheless have met with great difficulties in saving and bringing in all the produce of their crops. Every able-bodied man is away fighting for his country, leaving behind an old father, or his wife and children, or any old relation, and it is difficult for such people to master all the particular work of harvesting and preparing flower and garden seeds; otherwise crops of flower seeds, such as aster, balsam, carnation, pansy, phlox, sweet peas, prove to be well ripened, heavy seed, although reduced in quantity. Carrots and endive, onions, too, show a great shortage.

"Further, the trade has been cut to the quick by the refusal of the Bank of France to discount any bills or paper; the immediate effect was the closing of the door of all French discount banks against the tradespeople, the consequence being that, during the war, every item must be paid for with ready money. No credit is granted. Growers

SWAS TEEKA BRAND CANNAS

ARE SHIPPED FROM SOLID CLUMP DIVISIONS

Orders Boxed Only as Shipped

ALL our Cannas are brought from the field and placed in the storage house tiers, ready to be boxed as ordered. When your order comes, the clumps are carefully divided, and each division is inspected. If solid and perfect in every way, it is trimmed up neatly and packed for shipment.

All of which means that every Swas-Teeka Canna root you buy of us is in the finest condition when shipped.

No shriveled-up, "prune-faced" ones.

We have 107 varieties for your selection; 87 of them are Wintzer's own production. By way of suggestion, here is a 200-lot assortment, which is particularly good.

JOHN BAER

Originator of the world famous tomato "John Baer."

JOHN BAER—HIMSELF

GIVES A FRIENDLY BUT EARNEST NOTICE TO HIS FRIENDS AND FELLOW MARKET GARDENERS.

Baltimore County, Maryland, March 2nd, 1915.

I hearby inform my many friends, the market gardeners, canners and the public in general, I have placed my entire supply of "John Baer" tomato seed which I personally grew and selected with J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, Maryland. Any seed offered by any other source is not my production and I cannot feel morally responsible for the results it may produce.

I have given this tomato my greatest care and attention for many years and take pride in seeing that my fellow market gardeners are getting only seed that truly represents the results of my life work.

MARCH!

A much used word at present, sometimes meaning victory and as often meaning defeat. We would apply it to profit and "hit up" a continuous march throughout the whole of the old, blowy month now with us. Decide upon making some extra money this spring and summer on snapdragon and begin sowing seed at once. Our Silver Pink will come first, and if you want the other colors we have them. But Silver Pink is the one for show and profit. It is not a mite dwarf and every one of the dozens of flower spikes produced will be of salable length. Messrs. Jagger & Halsey, of Westhampton, N. Y., say that it is the heaviest producer of cut flowers out of doors, and the best seller they have seen. This is the story of all who have tried it. Get ready for a winning march.

Price of seed of my original Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00.

We still have at sacrifice prices a few good plants that will crop for Memorial. Silver Pink seedlings, $3.00 per 100; 200 for $5.00; $25.00 per 1,000. Yellow, Garnet, and Nelrose, $4.00 per 100; 300 for $10.00.

All orders cash. Free directions. Make up your order, remembering that we grow snapdragons, not only in March, but every other month of the year.

exact cash payment for their seeds when delivering them; manure, materials, produce, drugs, provisions, etc., are to be had only against ready money.

"It is to be wished that our friends and allies may take a sympathetic view of the French seed growers' difficulties and may help and enable them to fulfill their contracts and to execute seed orders by prepayment, viz., by sending money when ordering seed or by postoffice money order on receipt of the goods."

CLOVER SEED AS MONEY CROP.

The high price of hay throughout the crimson-clover section, combined with the somewhat unsatisfactory yields of commercial seed which have been secured lately, has resulted in a material reduction of the quantity of crimson clover left for seed in Delaware and Maryland, where most of the commercial seed grown in this country is produced. In former years, when seven, eight or even ten bushels were not uncommon yields, the raising of the seed was decidedly profitable, especially when hay was selling for only $10 to $15 a ton. During recent years, however, with the hay at $20 to $25 a ton and seed yields ranging from three to five bushels per acre, it has been considered more profitable to raise the crop for hay than to let the stand remain for seed. With one and one-half and two tons of good hay as a practical certainty, it requires a yield of five to six bushels of seed per acre to represent an equal money value, according to J. M. Westgate, agronomist in the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

to the offers of Berberis Thunbergii and Viburnum plicatum.

Hammerschmidt & Clark, Medina, O.—"Sure-to-Grow Seeds," an illustrated catalogue of seeds, bedding plants and vegetable plants. About twenty of the entire thirty-two pages are devoted to vegetable seeds. Contains tables showing the quantity of seeds or plants per acre, the weight per bushel of grains and other articles in Ohio, etc.

V. Lemoine & Son, Nancy, France.—A 30-page list of specialties in greenhouse plants, new and rare hardy shrubs, hardy perennials, bulbs and roots, with brief, clear descriptions and with pictures of a few of the more recent introductions; printed in English, with prices in English currency.

Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.—Fifth edition of "Farr's Hardy Plants." This 96-page book is one of the best products of the McFarland press and would be hard to surpass for tastefulness and persuasiveness; it makes a strong appeal by means of both its beauty and its accuracy. Among the illustrations are a dozen full-page colored plates, showing irises, peonies, delphiniums, oriental poppies, columbines and hybrid lilacs. Mr. Farr indicates his favor for the iris by placing it at the beginning of the book, but the peony, though second in order, takes the lead in the number of pages occupied. Then follow phloxes, asters and other hardy plants; also roses and specialties in shrubs.

Charles D. Ball, Philadelphia, Pa.—Wholesale list of palms and decorative plants. The two kentias, Belmoreana and Forsteriana, are offered in a wide range of sizes; the other stock listed includes arecas, cocos, phœnix, pandanus, dracænas and ferns.

Kurt Engelhardt, Dresden, Germany.—Illustrated catalogue of dahlias and other stock, such as gladioli, cannas, begonias, montbretias, gloxinias, etc.; dahlias are a specialty. The catalogue received is the issue for 1914, with a supplement containing the revised prices for 1915; printed in German.

McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—A large, illustrated folder, containing special Easter offers of baskets, flower boxes, vases, ribbons, prepared branches, ruscus, cycas, paper pots, stakes, sprayers and other seasonable supplies.

Wyomanock Nurseries, Lebanon Springs, N. Y.—A 12-page trade list of deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs, vines, climbers, ferns, herbaceous perennials and plants for the old-fashioned garden.

Walter H. Harrison, Lebanon Springs, N. Y.—Special discount offer of rhododendrons, azaleas, vincas, kalmias, andromedas, hardy ferns and other stock.

George Arends, Ronsdorf, Germany.—A 108-page plant catalogue, well printed in the German language; freely and handsomely illustrated. It offers an extensive variety of both greenhouse and outdoor plants, including rock plants and aquatics; a few choice shrubs also are listed. The book starts with eighteen pages of new and rare plants; some specialties in primulas and saxifragas are shown in two full-page colored plates. Enclosed with the plant catalogue is a wholesale seed list, in the form of a large, closely printed folder.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Michell's Bulletin for Florists," listing seasonable supplies, bulbs, roots, perennials, and seeds of asters, stocks, salvias and petunias.

D. Hill Nursery Co., Inc., Dundee, Ill.—"Hill's Evergreen Book," a 50-page catalogue, fully illustrated. The first and largest part of the book contains the general list of evergreens; then follows a list of exceptionally well grown trees, or specimens; at the end are the seedling evergreens, with an assortment of deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, peonies and roses. Accompanying the catalogue is a folder entitled "Hill's Fifty Great Bargains for 1915."

Joe Coleman, Lexington, O.—"The Gladiolus Beautiful and Other Summer-flowering Bulbs," a neat 8-page catalogue of gladioli, dahlias, etc. Among the gladioli are several of the more recent Kunderdi sorts.

Searl & Sons, Sydney, Australia.—"List of Choicest Flowering Bulbs," an illustrated catalogue, consisting of eight pages and cover. At the end are some special collections of bulbs and some "new seeds for the new season." Jadoo fiber, to be mixed with the soil used for the growing of bulbs, is also offered.

W. C. Kennedy, St. Joseph, Mo.—Seeds, plants, bulbs; shrubs, fruit trees and other nursery stock, implements and sundries, including birds and goldfish; forty-eight pages, illustrated. At the beginning are some seed tables, stating the quantities needed per acre or per row.

Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—An 8-page, illustrated folder containing special offers of Easter blooming and decorative plants; also rooted cuttings and potted stock of chrysanthemums, roses, cyclamens and poinsettias, and a general list of spring plants.

...THE... Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

OAKLAND, CAL.

The Market.

Since the beginning of Lent, conditions have been somewhat quiet. There is little in the social calendar to cause a stir and the mild weather is bringing in the outside flowers in profusion, to the detriment of the retail business. Carnations are almost in oversupply, but the shipping trade is a salvation for the surplus stock. Roses are improving with the increase of sunshine, Killarney especially showing a better color. Violets are plentiful and of good quality. Green goods are scarce, especially asparagus. Lilies, freesias and daffodils are abundant.

Various Notes.

J. S. Joseph, of San Leandro, is sending in a fine lot of narcissi and daffodils. He has about eleven acres planted with a variety of bulbs.

Clarke Bros. are showing a fine lot of tulips in various colors.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. is cutting a nice crop of iris, for which there is a constant demand.

S. Gerard Smith, representing P. L. Carbone, Boston, called on the trade last week with a line of baskets and art goods.

Lee's Floral Shop is the latest venture in the trade. It is located at 486 Twelfth street.

Martin Reukauf called on the trade last week. Frank McCabe, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was also a week-end caller. The announcement in The Review was his first news of the recent fire of the Randall Co.

E. James has a fine lot of rambler roses in bloom and also a nice batch coming along for the Easter trade.

E. R. C.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The Market.

The crowds attending the fair help out business here and retailers report good sales at profitable prices. The supply of stock, locally grown, is constantly increasing and the effect is noted in the improved display made in the windows and stores. Plants, as well as cut flowers, appear to be in good demand.

Various Notes.

The grounds around the buildings at the exposition are truly beautiful now, after the heavy rains, and seldom have such a magnificent planting and setting for any show been seen. John Morley now has complete charge of the exposition grounds, as well as the parks, and has his hands pretty full. The plantings he has made during the last few years in the parks are maturing now and are splendid in effect. A long walk of Acacia Baileyana in full flower, with daffodils planted below, is a golden sea of blossoms, worth going miles to see, while all through the miles of walks and roads similar surprises await one. Mr. Morley is the right man in the right place and his great charge seems to sit lightly upon him, while the encomiums called forth from prominent citizens by the splendid results achieved under so many and great difficulties are frequent and flattering.

Boyle & Darnaud report excellent business, especially in good funeral work. The store is filled with choice cut flowers and plant stock, grown at their greenhouses, and everything is finely arranged. In plants, azaleas and rhododendrons are particularly good, while on a recent day over 200 cattleyas were cut and disposed of.

George Otto is well established now in the store formerly occupied by Lanier's, and finds the additional room a great convenience. He is kept busy all the time between the store and the nursery and reports business good all along the line.

T. W. Chisholm, of the Braslan Seed Co., and Mrs. Chisholm paid a flying visit to the fair February 28.

Among the fine stock so well displayed by Miss Rainford at her store on Fourth street are some elegant snowdrops, which are so fresh and pretty that one wonders they are not more grown. Miss Rainford reports good business.

H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is little change in the situation this week. There is still a shortage in outdoor stock, but indoor roses and carnations are improving daily with the increasing light. Among the less important items, the common marigold is making an excellent show in the windows and street stands. Other spring flowers are making their appearance, and by the time these notes appear the bulk of the bulbous stock will be in and the annual glut will probaby be on. Violets continue good and plentiful. Orchids are scarce and the cut-price merchants are busy with valley. As yet there are not enough sweet peas on the market to amount to anything and baby roses are still short of the demand. In plants, azaleas are again well to the fore; so, also, are forced lilacs and rhododendrons and the demand has been good for the smaller sizes. Boston and Whitmani ferns are still the most popular of the nephrolepis types, with Piersoni as rather a poor third. The demand for small pteris, adiantum and other ferns is above the supply of good material. All classes of greens are selling well, but there is no shortage.

Various Notes.

T. W. Chisholm, of the Braslan Seed Growers Co., San Jose, has been a visitor this week, having just returned from an eastern trip. He reports an excellent trip, from a business point of view.

The unusual spectacle of a hail storm occurred at Montebello, March 1, and although no particular damage was done, greenhouse men in the vicinity began to be alarmed. The hailstones were about as large as marbles and lay on the ground long enough for the boys to pelt a man driving a motor truck load of oranges, while he retaliated with the golden fruit. The nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. is only a mile from Montebello and here not a hailstone fell.

H. W. Turner, of Montebello, has purchased the El Reah greenhouses at Hollywood and will wreck them at once, probably using some of the glass and piping in the new houses to be built this year. It is something of a coincidence that Mr. Turner built these houses some years ago for the late William Haerle. Observant readers will note that the name El Reah, Spanish sounding as befits southern California, is simply the name Haerle spelled backward.

R. Overstreet, of the staff at Darling's Flower Shop, is the proud father of a baby girl who arrived February 26.

Mrs. Ridley, of the Harbor Floral Co., San Pedro, has been in the city making purchases for the rapidly increasing business there. This young couple look like making a great success out of their business, for both are workers and Mrs. Ridley, who runs the store end, is a lady of pleasant personality and manner, which always count for a great deal in a retail business.

At the monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, held March 2 at Kruckeberg's hall, the

SUPERIOR-GROWN ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

September Morn Our sensational light pink rose. Throws extra strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet, producing high-grade stock without pinching. Wonderful keeper, full, double, with petals of grand substance waved on edges, giving it a most distinct appearance. Light shade of flesh-pink on outside, shading to pure rose-pink in center. We planted 10,000 of it for cutting and have had more repeat orders on it than on any other rose and at better prices. Flowers every day in the year and never soft in the hottest weather. Strong stems, no mildew or spot. (See our full-page ads in issues of January 21 and 28.)

Own root plants only, from 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000, 5000 for $1000.00.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. F. F. Thompson The beautiful shell-pink sport of the well known Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. It combines all the fine qualities of its parent, and this surely is recommendation enough when added to its magnificent coloring. Always in bloom and already proved a money-maker.

$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000

Hadley Brilliant, deep, velvety crimson, a color which it retains all the year round. Flowers borne on stiff, upright stems, and a first-class variety in every particular.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys—an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color; is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season. We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

speaker of the evening was W. W. Felgate, who descanted on the culture of the fine vegetables he grows so well. There was a large and appreciative audience and Mr. Felgate gave a most interesting and instructive lecture, not dealing in generalities, but getting down to "brass tacks" on certain of the most important vegetable crops and giving a resume of their culture. There is never a dull minute when "Billy" is speaking and he drives home his points hard. Well executed cuts of vegetables were used and Mr. Felgate also exhibited some fine specimens of his skill. A rising vote of thanks was given at the conclusion and there was an animated discussion. Secretary Hal Kruckeberg had run off some fine announcements of the meeting, which were well displayed in the principal seed stores.

At Wolters' Flower Shop, on Hill street, the windows are always attractive and they are especially so this week, with a nice display of flowering peaches, quinces and other shrubs.

Smith & Dieterich have been showing a splendid line of Japanese azaleas, which make an effective display. The plants carried over at the Montebello nursery are particularly good.

Polder & Groen report an excellent demand for the new Philadelphia carnation. K. Groen is suffering from a rather bad case of blood poisoning in his hand and arm, the result of piercing his hand with a rusty nail.

The main sowing of the new sweet peas at the trial grounds of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. has been delayed by rain and many have had to be sown in pots and transplanted. A grand new variety of white stocks of the dwarf Brompton type is extra fine here, owing to its dwarf habit, freedom of flowering and large percentage of double flowers. H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business continues satisfactory to the florists. With the arrival of spring, the nurserymen and seedsmen are occupied by a rush which exceeds their expectations.

The supply of cut flowers has increased and now balances the demand. Home-grown roses and violets are coming in more freely. California violets are depreciating in quality rapidly, and will be off the market before long. The cooler grown freesias and tulips are now shown, and their quality appears better than that of the earlier, harder forced stock. Cinerarias are prime and many good displays of them may be seen.

Various Notes.

The Portland Floral Society will hold its next meeting Tuesday, March 16, at Masonic Temple. The board of trustees will meet at 7:15.

The Tonseth Floral Co. is showing some good cinerarias and Murillo tulips grown at their range.

Rahn & Herbert Co. is cutting the first Silver Pink snapdragons.

Mrs. S. A. Albright, of the Niklas & Son store, is visiting the Panama-Pacific fair.

Jos. Koida is bringing in some good violets from his range near Milwaukie. Starting five years ago with fifteen plants which he selected from a lot shipped from the east, he has developed

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE Utah Nursery Co. has taken out incorporation papers at Los Angeles, Cal. The incorporators are A. J., B. C. and K. G. Vorse. The capital stock is fixed at $5,000, of which $30 has been subscribed.

THE alien employees of two of the largest nurseries at Monroe, Mich., according to a Detroit daily, have walked out and demand a 50-cent daily increase before returning to work. It is said that strikers used clubs and other weapons to prevent others from resuming work at the old rate of wages.

THE EFFECT OF THE WAR.

In the discussion at the Ohio Nurserymen's Association meeting following the paper of T. J. Dinsmore, of Troy, on "The Effect of the War on Nursery Stock Importations," the fact was brought out that although the United States may be used as a dumping ground for more or less stock from Holland and other fruit tree growing countries, because they cannot sell the stock to England and Germany, the extent of this will not be so large as might be supposed, owing to the fact that United States nurserymen have no call for any great amount of stock of the kinds that these countries use. Standard roses are cited as an illustration; these are used in Germany quite extensively and successfully, while they are not so successful in this country. As a result, therefore, standard roses are offered at one-third the price asked before the war. Hardy hybrid roses and a few similar lines are being priced lower in each list that is coming out now.

Trouble is looked for next season, for the reason pointed out on this page January 21. Stock is likely to be scarce in some lines because it will not be planted by nurserymen abroad. Of course, this does not apply to Holland.

CONNECTICUT ASSOCIATION.

Ninth Annual Convention.

The Connecticut Nurserymen's Association held its ninth annual meeting at the Hotel Garde, Hartford, February 25. Secretary F. L. Thomas, of Manchester, called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock and read a letter from President T. E. Burroughs, of Deep River, who was detained by illness. W. W. Hunt, of Hartford, was chosen temporary president.

W. W. Hunt presented his report as treasurer. The balance a year ago was $39.79. The receipts were $54; total, $93.79. The expenditures were $50.05, leaving a balance of $43.74.

E. F. Coe, of New Haven, chairman of the legislative committee, reported for the committee. He said the present state laws relative to nurserymen were satisfactory, and the committee did not suggest any change.

W. W. Hunt, chairman of the entertainment committee, gave an account of the field day last summer, when the association visited the Adams nurseries at Westfield, Mass., and later had dinner at Mt. Tom.

H. W. Gottschalk, of Manchester, was elected a member.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.- Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected by acclamation:

President—W. E. Campbell, New Haven.

Vice-President—C. H. Sierman, Hartford.

Secretary—F. L. Thomas, Manchester.

Treasurer—W. W. Hunt, Hartford.

President Campbell appointed the following committees:

Legislative—E. F. Coe, New Haven; Stephen Hoyt, New Canaan; J. R. Barnes, Yalesville.

Executive—C. H. Sierman, Hartford; W. W. McCarthy, New Haven; Gustave Minge, Hartford.

Entertainment—C. R. Burr, Manchester; Charles Turner, Hartford; Edward A. Brassill, Hartford.

Numerous Speakers.

The afternoon session was occupied with addresses and papers. Dr. William E. Britton, of New Haven, state entomologist, spoke on the inspection of nursery stock and of remedies for the extermination of insect pests. There had been a falling off in the importation of nursery stock since the first of January, he said. In the three preceding months the importations were larger than for any similar period of the year. Dr. Britton said the effect of the war would be to make Connecti-

E. F. Coe, of New Haven, spoke on "Effects of the European War on the Nursery Business." He said there had been a lessening of importations, and with the new restriction on commerce it was not likely that much stock would get here. There was considerable in Holland, France and Germany, and its owners were anxious to sell it to America, if possible.

Other speakers were J. H. Hale, of Glastonbury; G. H. Hollister, superintendent of Keney park, Hartford; Dr. D. M. Rogers, of Boston, assistant in charge of gypsy moth quarantine and inspection; Alexander Cumming, Jr., of Cromwell; John R. Barnes, of Yalesville; Dr. George P. Clinton, of New Haven, state botanist, and George Dowd, of Madison. Papers by T.

OPHELIA A New Rose of True Worth

We have grown this magnificent rose the past season with most gratifying results. As a free and vigorous grower and great producer it has no equal. It sets bud freely in the short days of winter, and is now coming in with a heavy crop, doing equally well on grafts or own roots.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER is at present more favorably thought of than ever, and we intend to again plant it heavily this season. As a money getter, our experience has proven its superiority over all sorts, and having grown extensively on own roots and grafts, we have no hesitancy in stating that, like Sunburst, it does better on own roots.

We will have a splendid lot of both varieties (grafts and own roots), ready for shipment about the middle of March, together with a choice lot of Sunburst, Ward, Prince d'Arenberg, White and Pink Killarney, cuttings taken from sand the latter part of December. The Market.

Business seems to be slightly better than for some time. Lent has had no bad effect so far, and as Easter approaches the chances for improvement are better. Spring business has already begun and prospects are brighter generally.

Roses are becoming more plentiful, the color has improved, and, taken altogether, the cut is in excellent condition. The demand for long, fancy stock is somewhat light, but the shorter grades are moving well. The prices might show some increase and still not equal the quality of the stock. Carnations are in fine shape, but the cut is lighter than it should be. The growers seem to be off crop, with no immediate prospects of improvement. The demand is heavy and, in consequence, the prices are fairly good. From present indications, there will probably be a shortage of white carnations for the St. Patrick's day trade.

Sweet peas are plentiful and the recent dark weather is the only thing that has prevented an oversupply. Long stems are the usual thing and some run as long as fifteen inches. Wisconsin grown violets are good. Some excellent single violets are in the market and are finding a ready sale. Spring flowers are still plentiful and good, but the demand is not strong. Valley has improved and the quantity is more than sufficient to meet demands. Lilies are not plentiful and are cleaning up well. H. J. S.

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

The Market.

The supply has increased until it is now at a point where the market is easy and the offerings are able to take care of all immediate demands. The call for stock has kept up steadily and is helped greatly by the call for flowers for spring openings. Shipping business is good. Prices are fair.

Rose offerings are now apparently up to requirements and include some fancy offerings. Carnations, too, are again up to a point where the supply is taking care of immediate calls. The average quality is better than a fortnight ago. Bulbous stock and lilies, including Easter lilies, callas and rubrums, are plentiful. Sweet peas are abundant. The best find a ready sale. Other offerings include violets, valley, orchids, wallflowers, primroses, forget-me-nots, mignonette and snapdragon. The first of the outdoor daffodils made their appearance last week.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports an enjoyable trip to Chicago.

Local florists regret to hear of the death of S. A. Swan, of Lone Mountain, Tenn., who furnished a considerable part of the leucothoe used in this city.

The Market.

The Lenten season does not seem to have much effect on business, as the call for flowers is good for all occasions, especially for funerals. Flowers and plants of all kinds are in good supply. From present indications, the spring trade will be as good as ever, or better.

Various Notes.

The city is building two small greenhouses in Garvin's park, in which to grow the plants for planting its parks. C. E. Gysemans, chief park gardener, will have charge of the greenhouses. Mr. Gysemans was formerly gardener for the Standard Chemical Co., Pittsburgh.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are having a fine run of business. They had over fifty orders recently for one out-of-town funeral. Carnations are in good supply, but roses are a little off crop.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports a good trade, both shipping and local. The cut of roses and carnations is heavy and it seems none goes to waste. The company has a new Overland for delivery, which will soon be put into service.

Royston & Fenton are cutting nice long-stemmed Ivory, for which the demand is good.

Miss Nellie Goodge is having a big run of funeral work. Her snapdragons are coming into bloom in fine shape.

Mrs. M. L. Doerr has again taken charge of the store of which W. D. Marer was in charge recently.

E. L. F.

Bethlehem, Pa.—George Charman is planning to open a retail store at 46 South Main street in a few days.

Duluth, Minn.—In the Louis Visias establishment, of which W. W. Seekins is manager, the stock recently was doing poorly, but the discovery of a leak in a gas pipe under the houses explained the trouble. All the stock showed prompt recuperation as soon as the leak was repaired and the houses fully ventilated.

I name them "Challenge" because I challenge any buyer to find better lilies; in height, bloom and foliage, they excel any I have ever seen. Come and see if they are not the best you ever saw.

GROWERS OF PLANTS FOR THE TRADE

Buy for Quality

A recent visitor remarked while passing along our propagating bed filled with carnation cuttings, "Why, you don't seem to lose any cuttings at all!" You see, it's this way:—we select our cuttings to a uniform size. That gets them all in about the same stage of growth, hence they root evenly and very few of them are lost. They are bound to be vigorous under those conditions, don't you think? We have in sand now, most of them ready for immediate shipment:

TOMATOES (Bonny Best) TOMATOES

Most prolific for forcing or outside crop. Size and color are right. Will produce double the fruit of any other tomato in existence. No trick in growing tomatoes; just plant them, tie and run them to single or two stems; keep side shoots out; no hand fertilizing needed. That isn't all—try this in your carnation benches. They will make you money. No higher temperature needed.

Large transplanted plants, $1.75 100, $15.00 1000, cash; to clean up. 250 at 1000 rate. B. B. POHLMANN, Rockford, Ill.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The Market.

Several factors combine to indicate that the present summer will be one of the most active experienced here in several years, from a social as well as a commercial point of view. The European war has interrupted all travel abroad, while the several flower shows that are to be staged here during the next few months are certain to attract unusually large numbers of visitors. It is understood that the number of New York florists who will maintain branch stores at Newport this summer will be the largest ever known.

Various Notes.

William B. Scott, of W. B. Scott & Co., has purchased a fine residence on Gibbs avenue, to which he will soon remove.

John B. Sullivan, gardener for Charles F. Hoffman, Armsea Hall, who was confirmed as postmaster of Newport last week by Congress, is arranging to assume his duties.

The Newport Horticultural Society has arranged another series of lectures, to be given during the coming months. The first was given last week by Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa. His subject was "Among the Roses at Home and Abroad."

The midwinter flower show for house-grown plants and blooms was held March 9 and 10, at the Civic League House, under the auspices of the Newport Garden Association.

Samuel Matson has accepted a position as head gardener for Mrs. Alexander S. Clark, on Harrison avenue. He was formerly with Oscar Schultz.

Two of the old greenhouses in the range of Stewart Ritchie, at Middletown, have been torn down and are being replaced by modern buildings. The construction work and fitting up are being done by Mr. Ritchie's sons.

Rev. Roderick Terry, D. D., president of the Newport Garden Association, is having a small range of greenhouses, 20x73, built on his estate, Linden Gate.

EASTER

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER

United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver ordered 5000 Dirt Bands in December, 40,000 in January, and 20,000 in March last year, and 70,000 this year.

See our 4-column advertisement, pages 52 and 53.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A decided decrease in social activities has been noted since Lent began. Palms are standing idle, except for those that go out for decorations for spring openings at the department stores. Funeral work, however, is unusually heavy. Roses are scarce, but bulbous stock is taking their place. Tulips and jonquils are much in demand, the latter more so than in any previous year. Lilies are more plentiful; so, also, are carnations. On account of the recent dark weather, the carnations have weak stems. Sweet peas are not much called for.

Various Notes.

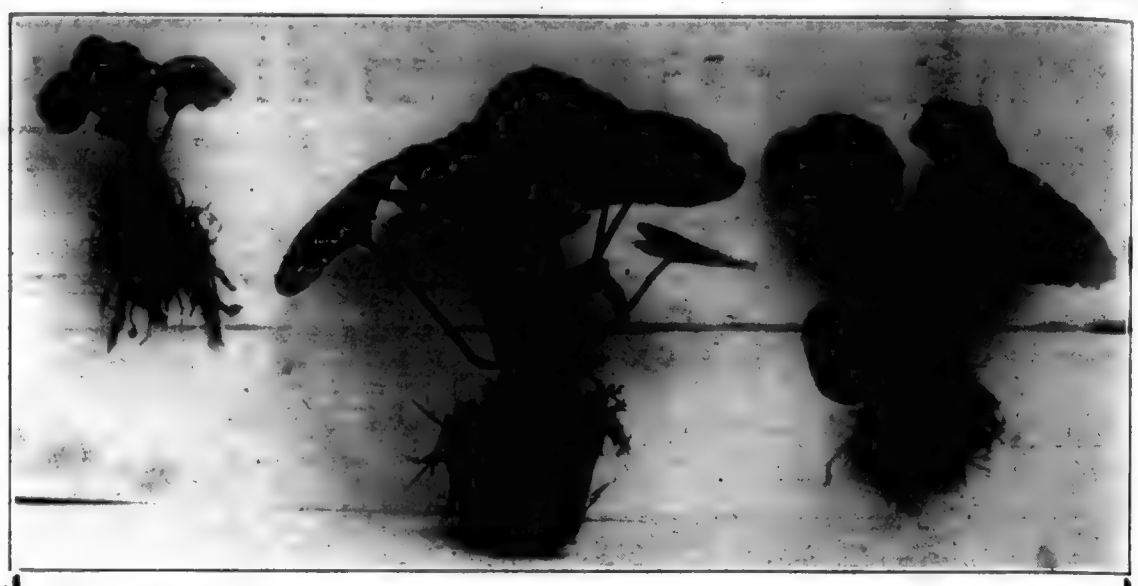
The Florists' Club held its meeting March 1, at the store of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. The attendance was large and many important questions were discussed. The club is becoming stronger and undoubtedly is here to stay.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports business especially good for the Lenten season, with plenty of work all the time.

A. F. Barbe has his greenhouses in fine shape and will have plenty of lilies and blooming plants for Easter. His cut flowers will also be in good crop about the right time.

W. J. Barnes had the decorations for the spring opening of the Emery-Bird-Thayer Dry Goods Co. He used rhododendrons, azaleas, begonias, lilies, bulbous stock, palms and ferns—over 500 plants in all.

R. S. Brown & Son report business good except in spring bedding stock, which is held back on account of the snow and dark weather. They have received a number of inquiries in regard to stock, which will make a rushing time for them when the season opens.



The Costello Moore Floral Co. had a good run on funeral work last week, turning out some large designs. One of the pieces was a broken column, six feet high, of carnations.

E. D. Ellsworth has his greenhouses at the rear of the store in fine shape. They are filled with bulbous stock and plants for Easter. His lilies are extra good.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that good, medium-sized stock is hard to get and orders are not filled as they should be. Orders from out of town are heavy and keep them well cleaned up.

Christ & Moore report business fair. They are well satisfied with their location. W. J. B.

Phoenix, Ariz.—E. M. Tyler, of 1110 East Polk street, is no longer in business.

EASTER PLANTS

Now is the time to order your Easter plants. Don't put it off until the last minute. Look over our list carefully and make up your order at once. We can ship the stock just the way you want it, right away or later—but get your order in early. This will be our banner year in growing and shipping Easter plants, and we have thousands of satisfied customers all over the country who can back up what we say about our stock that we have shipped them other years—so why not send us your order this year?

AZALEAS. We are, as usual, very strong on azaleas; 3 houses of them, in 4 of the leading commercial varieties. Mme. Vander Cruyssen, pink (exceptionally strong on this popular variety), 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, variegated, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. Mme. De Schryveriana, double variegated, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Niobe, the best double white, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 each.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM, exceptionally fine this year, 7,000 plants in 5½-in. pots, 10c per bud; less than 4 buds to a plant, 12c per bud.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS, Bouquet Rose, Radiant, Mme. E. Mouillere and Mme. E. Chautard, in 6 and 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 and $1.25 each. We have 2,500 hydrangeas in all.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA, one of our specialties, in 6 and 7-in. pots, 3 to 8 blooms per plant, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE. We have one house devoted to this popular Easter plant, 1,500 of them in 6 and 7-in. pots, at $5.00, $6.00 and $9.00 per doz.

ROSES. American Beauty and Richmond, in 6-in. pots, at 50c and 75c each.

Greenhouse Heating.

SEVERAL DEFECTS IN PIPING.

Will you please give me some advice about the heating of my two greenhouses? I am heating them with steam from a sectional boiler which is rated for about 2,000 feet of 1-inch pipe. The houses are each 12x140 and six feet high from the ground to the gutter, with no partition between them. They run east and west and the boiler house is at the southwest corner. A 2-inch main, reduced from a 4-inch header at the boiler, runs along the west end and is there connected with three flows of 1-inch pipe and one return of 1-inch pipe back to the west end, where it runs into a 2-inch return to the boiler. Unfortunately, I cannot sink the boiler low enough, owing to water, so the return is practically at the water level of the boiler. The whole system is extremely slow in circulation.

Will you kindly give me an idea as to how to rearrange the pipes to the best advantage? I have been told that the better way would be to run the main to the far end and get the heat from the returns. Do you think that would be satisfactory? I am growing lettuce, etc., on the ground, and general spring stock. Have I enough piping to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees in this part of Ontario, where the outside temperature is sometimes away below zero? Last winter the mercury dropped to 23 degrees below [illegible]. The houses are in a sheltered position, except at the south. On the north side there are other greenhouses.

A. W. G.

In this heating system there are several defects, or rather deficiencies, any one of which would lead to unsatisfactory results. As I understand it, an attempt is being made to heat two greenhouses, each 12x140, to 55 degrees, in a climate where the temperature sometimes goes to 23 degrees below zero, with a steam boiler rated at less than 700 square feet of radiation, and using a 2-inch main for the two houses, with three 1-inch flows and one 1-inch return in each house.

There is a deficiency of thirty per cent in the boiler, and the capacity of the main and the amount of radiation should be increased 100 per cent. To say nothing of the radiation afforded by the mains, each house should have about 350 square feet of radiation. As a good margin in the capacity of the boiler should be provided, 1,000 square feet would be none too large. While a 2-inch main would answer for each of the houses, to heat both of them nothing less than a 2½-inch main should be used. To supply 350 square feet of radiation in each of the houses, there should be seven 1-inch flows and one 1-inch return in each house.

If I were to specify what I would consider the best manner of piping the house, I would suggest running a 2½-inch main along the west end of the houses and taking off a 2-inch main for each house. Run these through the houses to the east end and there connect them with four 1¼-inch returns in each house. If the water is to be returned to the boiler by gravity, place one return on each plate and the others on the legs of the benches, so that they will be at least three feet and preferably four feet above the water level in the boiler. Another way would be to put in a steam trap and tank.

PUT THE FLOWS AT THE EAVES.

We are building a greenhouse 10x50 feet, and eight and one-half feet high from ground to ridge. The side walls will be four and one-half feet high; the lower three feet will be wood, and the remaining eighteen inches will be glass. There will be two benches, each four feet wide, leaving room for a 2-foot walk in the middle. We have bought a Hummer sectional boiler, with capacity to heat 1,275 square feet of glass. Will it be necessary to place the boiler in a pit? If so, how deep must the pit be? The house will be used for the growing and propagating of bedding plants and we wish to be able to keep a temperature of 65 degrees in zero weather. We have been planning to run a flow and three returns under each bench. Would it be better to place the flows at the eaves and put four returns under each bench? What size of pipes would you advise us to use, and how many lineal feet? We should prefer to have some bottom heat under the bench that is to be used as the cutting bench. C. E. G.—Ind.

If the house is well built and only has about an average exposure to the cold winds, I would put in a 2½-inch flow pipe on each of the side plates and connect each of these flows at the farther end of the house with three 2-inch returns, to be placed under the side benches, carrying them as high as possible. With this amount of piping it will be an easy matter to keep up a temperature of 65 degrees, in anything except the coldest weather, and during the few days when the mercury is likely to drop below zero a little extra attention to the firing will make it possible to maintain the temperature mentioned, if necessary.

Hot water systems are generally most satisfactory when the top of the boiler is below the level of the returns, but the use of a pit also has its disadvantages, and fairly good results can be secured when the return ports of the boiler are slightly below the level of the returns, especially if the flow pipes are carried overhead or on the wall plates, as is suggested above. It would also be helpful if a mercury generator were attached to the system, or if some other method of placing the water under pressure were used. I would run the flow pipes downhill and, if possible, would raise the expansion tank several feet above the point where it is attached to the flow pipes.

The use of a generator would make it quite unnecessary to put in more pipe, but if the house is to be kept at 65 degrees in the coldest weather without a generator, it would be found more economical, both in firing and fuel, to put in one or two additional 2-inch returns.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

February business turned out far better than January, and the outlook seems to be slightly more encouraging generally. Prices, of course, are on a different level from former years, and it is doubtful whether bulbous stock has ever been handled throughout the Dominion at such low rates as at present obtain.

R. Jennings is cutting some fine Northport carnations, a variety he seems to be able to grow to perfection. The demand for carnations seems to be considerably in excess of that for roses at the present time.

Part of one of the sections of the Dale Estate's American Beauty house which was repaired after falling in a little while ago has been devoted to lettuce and radish, since it cannot be used conveniently for any other purpose at the present time. H. G. Mullis, head shipper of the Dale Estate, was elected as a member of the town council last week. John Wellburn, an engineer on the premises, sustained serious injuries through falling from the top of one of the boilers March 1.

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty. [Signed] T. J. OPPERMAN, Florist.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

With the beginning of March, trade in general has picked up. Cut flowers and potted plants of all kinds sell well. There seems to be an ever-increasing demand for flowering plants that will sell for from 35 cents to $1 or $1.50.

Carnations are plentiful and reasonable in price. Roses are not so high as they have been for the last few weeks. There is plenty of bulbous stock of all kinds.

Various Notes.

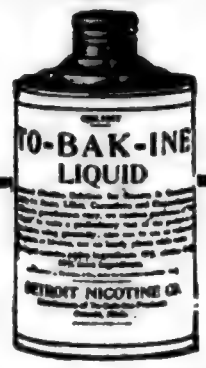
James Garthley, of Fairhaven, reports an excellent crop of violets. He seems to think that, having such a large crop now, he will not have a good crop for Easter.

William Keith, gardener for T. M. Stetson, has a white azalea in full bloom that measures five feet in diameter.

Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held in the Public Library building Monday, March 1, President Roy presiding.

H. V. Sowle, a well known florist of the north end, was elected to membership. The membership is now about 200. The matter of holding peony and rose shows was discussed. President Roy offered a cup to the exhibitor taking the greatest number of first prizes during the coming season. A committee consisting of F. C. Barrows, James McVickar and William M. Post was appointed to arrange for a banquet to be held soon after Easter.



Charles W. Young gave a short talk. He suggested a number of ways for interesting the amateur exhibitors in the coming shows, which were approved of by President Roy. W. M. P.

Paint Without Oil

Remarkable Discovery That Cuts Down the Cost of Paint Seventy-Five Per Cent.

A Free Trial Package is Mailed to Everyone Who Writes.

A. L. Rice, a prominent manufacturer of Adams, N. Y., has discovered a process of making a new kind of paint without the use of oil. He calls it Powdrpaint. It comes in the form of a dry powder and all that is required is cold water to make a paint weather proof, fire proof, and as durable as oil paint. It adheres to any surface, wood, stone or brick, spreads and looks like oil paint, and costs about one-fourth as much.

Write to Mr. A. L. Rice, Manuf'r, 274 North St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a free trial package, also color card and full information showing you how you can save a good many dollars. Write today.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a great variety of weather, with cold, rain and snow, and the result has been a decrease in the supply of cut flowers, as well as in the demand. There does not seem to be the glut of flowers which usually happens during the Lenten season. This undoubtedly accounts for the fact that prices have been holding up well on both roses and carnations. Bulbous stock, however, has suffered. There has been a shortage of lilies for several weeks. Sweet peas are at their best, but do not bring good prices. Beauties have to fight to receive any attention. Retailers report that February until Ash Wednesday was the best month of the winter and that trade since then has held up as well as could be expected, Lent and weather conditions considered.

The Market.

An oversupply of bulbous stock and violets made last week a week of bargains in spring flowers. Greenhouse men were forced to dispose of large quantities to prevent spoiling. The supply of carnations is equal to the demand. The first cut of a new crop of roses is fine, although somewhat light. All growers are busy transplanting or propagating spring stock. Outdoor tea roses are being shifted. The crop of Easter lilies is coming along satisfactorily.

Club Meeting.

The florists spoke satisfactorily of the results of the St. Valentine's day advertisement. An amendment to the by-laws of the club was made requiring that an applicant for membership must pay six months' dues. Members not paying dues are to be notified and, if they do not respond, are to be dropped from the list.

Three committees were appointed, as follows: Entertainment, advertisement and good of the club. The flower show committee reported that the style show will be held too early for a flower show to be held in conjunction and that the armory would be too large for a flower show alone. The armory is not centrally located and the majority were in favor of a smaller show held in a more centrally located building.

A checkbook system was installed to make the paying of the club's bills less complicated.

The club as a whole was appointed a committee to get new members.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

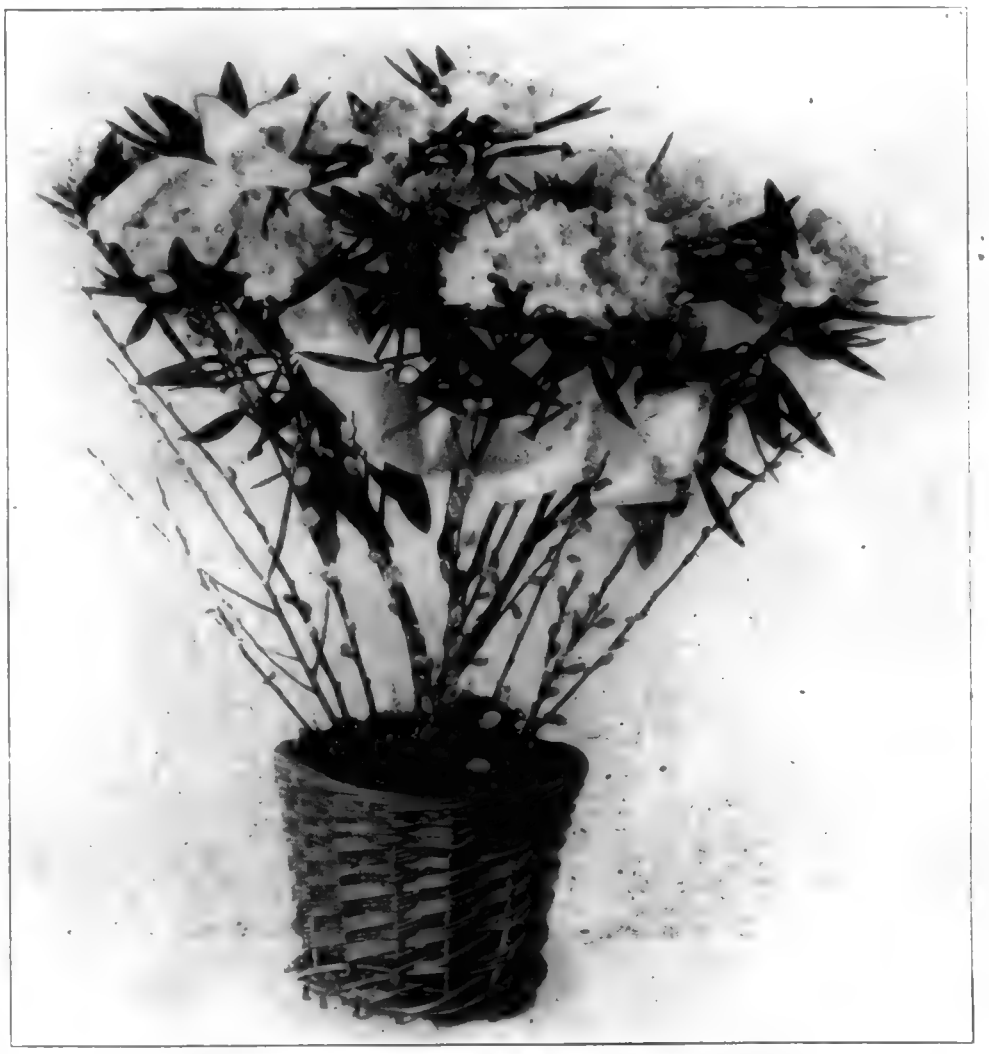
TOGGING OUT THE EASTER PLANTS

An overdressed plant is like an overdressed woman, all right to catch the eye, but not the kind one would want in one's home. But, on the other hand, a dowdy dresser never gets a second glance—not when all the Easter parade is togged out for inspection.

WHAT was it the Bard of Avon said? Oh, yes: "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy; rich, not gaudy: for the apparel oft bespeaks the man." The apparel oft bespeaks a lot of other things besides the man. Suppose the irreverent do call him Little Willie Shake-his-spear and pooh-pooh his philosophy, just the same the quotation is pat—it describes exactly the togging up of the Easter plants.

Of course the skillful plantsman wants the stock sold au naturel—as nearly as possible the way nature made it—because he knows it takes a better plant to sell that way. He seeks to limit competition. But every retailer knows the Easter stock would make a sorry display if it were not for the trimmings. No matter how fine the plant, it needs the trained hand of the decorator to make it look its best. Ask any flower show manager.

We Must Trim.



No one but a department store, selling lilies for advertising purposes, would think of offering plants without a pot cover, at Easter or any other time—a piece of crepe paper or a penny pot cover at the least. But the tendency in some first-class flower stores is rather to overdressing. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say the tendency has been toward overdressing, for at present there is, happily, a more rational trend — the furbelows are no longer permitted to conceal and extinguish the natural beauties of a well-grown and well-flowered plant. Time was that an Easter azalea was so swathed in crepe paper, Porto Rican mats and ribbon that about the only glimpse of the plant itself was to be had directly from above.

The overdecorating waned as the vogue of the basket waxed. You cannot so readily overdress a plant with a basket as you can with mats.

The Present Vogue.

In this issue there are a number of illustrations showing the most modern method of presenting the Easter plants to a discriminating public. These are worth study, especially for the reason that they represent conservatism. The store in which the plants were photographed has been, first, last and all the time, a flower store, never a mere merchandise market. In that store the basket is selected as an embellishment for the plant, not the plant as an embellishment for the basket. The accessories are chosen with the idea of bringing out the merits of the plant, except in the case of concealing and correcting the defect of an occasional ill-shaped specimen. The decorating is on a par with the art of the modiste whose costumes set off the charms of the wearer rather than cause the wearer to be merely a figure for the display of the habit. "Rich, not gaudy." Absolutely every plant that goes out is trimmed, and the accessories are of the best quality.

A man need not be old in the business to look back to the day when pot plants were sold exactly as they came from the greenhouse benches. Some of the better stores scrubbed the pots, but that was all. Then crepe paper came into use, and it still covers more pots than all other materials combined, as it is so inexpensive that the cost doesn't count, even with the cheapest plants. For a while Porto Rican and then chiffon mats had a big run, and some of the stores seeking novelty made a large use of earthenware for a year or two, but the way the basket has swept into favor is one of the remarkable developments of recent years. Hundreds of thousands of baskets now find their way annually, "dust to dust," through the channel of the flower trade. Indeed, the demand has become so large that it seems likely to establish a new industry on American soil, that of commercial basket weaving.

Rhododendron Mme. Wagner in Easter Attire.

Baskets and Ribbons.

Most of the baskets used by florists have been the low-priced and none too perfect product of the fireside industries of Europe. The war has rendered imports uncertain. A direct result seems to be the establishing of a basket-making industry in America. As a matter of fact, several of the large supply houses already are nearly independent of foreign supply. It is impossible to compete in price with the German hearthstone workers, but a decided advantage is obtained in the quick development of novelties — with the basket workers under his own roof the supplyman can pick up an idea, work it up into a sample the same day, and have it on the market in less time than it would take to send a letter to Europe.

Ribbons are not so largely used at Easter as at Christmas, probably for the reason that there is no readily recognizable color that compares with the Yuletide red. But all the larger plants and combinations must wear ribbon in the Easter parade, else there will be an unfinished effect in the display. For two seasons now ribbon has been out of vogue in millinery circles, but in flower stores it is more generally used than ever. Time was when only the so-called high-class florists used ribbon, but nowadays one would almost as soon think of doing business without The Review as without a well-stocked ribbon case in the store—one must use ribbon for tying the pot covers if for no other purpose.

A foliage green ribbon is about as handy an article as one can have in the store, but for use on the Easter plants pale blue, almost white, is the proper thing—it is the Easter color. One will, of course, use yellow with the genista, and pink where pot cover and flowers both are pink.

A Variety and on Time.

The wise retailer has learned that it is better to show a variety of arrangements than to run on one style. A striking window can be made of one kind of basket filled in a variety of ways, but in the store it will be found that the greater the assortment on display the more easily sales will be made. If one does not mix a little of the well-known gray matter with the other materials used in making up the Easter display, the arrangements are likely to be all more or less alike, but if thought is given it will be found quite easy to lend that variety which is found to be the spice of life.

And be ready in time. There is nothing in this whole wide world, not even carelessness, that makes so much trouble as that most prevalent of human traits, procrastination. "Never do today what can be put off till tomorrow" seems to be the motto of half the world. It certainly is the rule of the shoppers, but at that we all have seen the army of holiday flower buyers, descending at the last moment, still find the florist not ready—with little or nothing dressed for display. To make selling easy have your sample plants, if not your entire Easter stock, togged up in time.

PAPWORTH WINS APPEAL.

Orleans-Kenner interurban trains are not yet to go through the property of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., at New Orleans, so the Louisiana Supreme court decided March 8 in granting a writ of mandamus against Judge Edrington of the Jefferson parish court.

Judge Edrington had granted the Orleans-Kenner Electric Railway Co. the power to expropriate the property necessary for the tracks, and refused to grant a suspensive appeal against his ruling.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., however, applied to the Supreme court for a writ of mandamus to compel the judge to grant the appeal requested, which was done.

WILL BUY AT HOME.

One by one the growers are awakening to an appreciation of the fact that the price of a plant in Europe is no measure of its cost in the greenhouse. The result is buyers are turning back to home dealers or are making the foreign sellers deliver the goods—selling f. o. b. the European nursery is by no means so easy as it was.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers has taken a stand on the matter, as indicated by the following announcement, dated March 8, by Secretary W. H. Siebrecht, Jr.:

"At the last meeting of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers the matter of the importation of Belgian and Holland stock was brought up and it was pointed out that, owing to the roundabout manner in which the shipments were forwarded and the length of time during which they were in transit, the importers realized little, if any, profit out of their purchases.

"It was also pointed out that the exporters are in closer touch with the shipping facilities from their respective countries and had charge of the routing of the shipments and the packing thereof, and that it would be no injustice to require them to share some part of the risk connected therewith.

"It was, therefore, resolved that the members of this association shall hereafter purchase Belgian and Holland shipments f. o. b. New York and refuse to place orders upon any other basis."

PROPAGATION OF CANNAS.

Please tell me how I can grow cannas from seeds. Should they be scalded or cut? C. H. B.—Pa.

Yes, canna seeds are so hard that it is advisable to prepare them as suggested in the query; that is, by soaking them in hot water and by cutting off a small portion of the hard covering. A good way to proceed is to soak the seeds in a bag suspended in the water. If the water, as it cools, is replaced with hot water, this treatment alone may suffice, but usually it is well, also, to cut or clip the seeds. They may be sown in pans, in three inches of soil, and covered to a depth of half an inch or more, or they may be sown in drills in a progagation bench that has a good bottom heat. The pans may be placed over hot water pipes, so as to hurry the germination. The seeds will sprout irregularly, some much later than others, but the seedlings may be potted as fast as they attain a height of about three inches and the others may be left in the pan or bed, where the stragglers may continue to appear for months. The potted seedlings should be placed in a warm, light house. Canna seeds should be sown soon after being gathered, as they lose their vitality quickly.

It is now too late, however, to grow this season's plants from seeds, as the seeds must be sown not later than February in order to have good plants in 4-inch pots ready for planting by June 1. Besides, though some of the older, more common varieties may come largely true from seeds, the easier and more certain method of propagation is by division of the roots and this is the process invariably used with the finer sorts of cannas. The old stools, which have been stored during the winter, may be divided about the middle or end of March and placed in flats, in three or four inches of sand and old hotbed manure, and the flats may be placed over pipes where the heat is not too violent. Some of the larger growers spread the divided clumps on a vacant bench in a warm house, with about two inches of sphagnum moss or cocoanut fiber under the roots and a sprinkling of the same material over them. If a division or piece of root is three or four inches long, with one good bud or eye, it is large enough to make a good plant.

MUST MARK PLANT PACKAGES.

As noted in the February 25 issue of The Review, in the passage of the agricultural appropriation bill the Senate added a provision for the further enforcement of the plant quarantine act. This provision takes effect immediately.

The intricacies of legislative language have proved too much for some readers who have tried to get the gist of this provision, and a word of explanation in regard to it will not be amiss. To be on the safe side, the easiest course for the sender of plants is to plainly mark each package on the outside, so that the contents may be ascertained at a glance by the postmaster. The fine referred to in the provision is only for not marking packages addressed to places in states that maintain plant inspection. To avoid any mistake, however, it is best to mark all packages sent by mail, indicating whether the contents are strawberry plants, rosebushes, or some other plants.

Though the sender of plants has done his duty when he has marked the packages, he may want to know what is to happen to them. The law provides that the officials of a state maintaining plant inspection shall submit to the Secretary of Agriculture a list of plants and plant products which these officials believe should be inspected in order to prevent the introduction of injurious pests, together with a list of the pests likely to be transmitted by such plants. The Postmaster General is to be notified of the plants on the list which are approved by the Secretary of Agriculture. Thereafter, if the officials of Illinois, for instance, and the Secretary of Agriculture believe that strawberry plants sent by mail should be inspected, all the postmasters of Illinois will, when they receive packages of strawberry plants from other postoffices, send them to the nearest inspection station. If the plants are found to be clean, or, if infected, can be and are disinfected by the inspector, they are to be returned to the postmaster for delivery. If the plants are not capable of satisfactory disinfection, the sender is notified, and the plants are returned to him at his expense or destroyed at the station.

Upon one point the law is vague. It states that the package of plants shall be sent by the postmaster to the inspection station and returned to him "upon payment of postage therefor," but fails to state whether the sender, the consignee, the inspection station, the Department of Agriculture, or some one else is to pay the postage. Probably this point will be cleared up by the "needful rules and regulations" which the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to make to carry out the purposes of the law.

Those who send plants, however, need only to mark the packages with the contents on the outside, to comply fully with the requirements of the law. Those desirous of reading the exact words of the provision will find it on page 86 of the February 25 issue of The Review.

Express Rates on Plants

TARIFF MEN WILL LISTEN.

Will Consider Shippers' Ideas.

Representing the trade interests as chairman of the S. A. F. committee, William F. Gude has been sounding the express company tariff officials and the Interstate Commerce Commission with regard to the express rates on plants. There is a belief in the trade that plants shipped in pots, if so crated that they can be stowed with other freight, should be entitled to the classification given the same stock knocked out of pots, which takes twenty-five per cent less than first-class rates. The express companies' tariff officials are willing to listen.

George S. Lee, traffic manager of the Wells-Fargo, says the second-class express rates on growing plants were intended for application only on cheap nursery stock, such as strawberry, cabbage and tomato plants, and not on flowering plants, ornamental plants or plants in receptacles, which are by their nature packed in such a manner as to require additional care in handling. He states that the entire question of classification of growing plants was carefully considered by the committee on classification in connection with the investigation recently made by the Interstate Commerce Commission and that it is believed that the present classification is entirely reasonable. He compares the existing express rates with freight rates, calling attention that the former appear to be more liberal than the latter.

Invitation to Conference.

Similar contentions were advanced by the assistant general traffic manager of the American, who also states that the purpose of classifying growing plants not in pots or tubs, placed in boxes, the sides and ends of which are as high or higher than the plants and slats nailed over the top, completely protecting the plants, at second class, was to legalize the classification that had been applied by many agents and was claimed by many shippers as the proper one for such shipments. To this there might have been added that there was a certain amount of soil around the roots and that the roots were or were not wrapped in paper. He stated that it was the general understanding that it was the custom of florists to remove the pot and substitute paper in many instances therefor, otherwise placing the soil and the roots in the box without pot protection. Their observation has been that when the pot or tub is shipped with the growing plants, the same is crated only and that it is not possible to load, transport and handle these except with considerable care and that it is impossible to pile such shipments with other freight. "We feel that in giving to these shipments of growing plants, not in pots or tubs, the second-class classification, we have greatly favored the florists and growers," he stated. "We are disposed, however, to hear anything that the trade may have to offer on the subject, and our suggestion would be that if the trade thinks it of sufficient importance, a committee be appointed and arrangements made for a conference between such committee and the traffic officials representing the various express companies, to be held in New York city at a time that the question can be thoroughly discussed."

Mr. Gude Wants Facts.

With respect to this invitation for a conference, Mr. Gude stated to The Review correspondent that he is willing to do all in his power toward bringing about any desired change in the classification, but declares that he must have absolute facts from people interested in the matter, so that he may be absolutely sure of having a good case before going before the committee or the express companies. It is his suggestion that interested parties write to him, advancing such ideas and information as they may be able.

The Adams states that it will be pleased to have a representative present at the conference. A representative of the Southern declares that a long experience has demonstrated that it is almost impossible to transport plants in pots without breakage, and even though, as florists contend, no one should make complaint to the express companies for a few broken pots, which is sometimes inevitable, this would not serve to protect the companies against these claims.

MONTBRETIA CROCOSMÆFLORA.

Please advise me as to the growing of Montbretia crocosmæflora. Should the bulbs be started in a greenhouse and taken up in the fall like gladioli? This is my first year at growing these plants and I shall appreciate a little information about them.

J. P.—N. Y.

These can be taken up with gladioli and planted out again in April or May with them. Or, they can be divided and planted much more thinly in rows at the end of October. If the land is well drained, they will winter to perfection if pulled to pieces and later given a liberal mulch of dry leaves to exclude frost.

PERTINENT POINTERS ON EASTER PLANTS

Careful calculation and preliminary planning will enable the grower to market his plants in the best condition and so realize top prices

EASTER comes this year at a moderately early date. This will necessitate considerable forcing and frequent moving of plants in order to time them to a nicety. Any disadvantages of an early Easter, however, are more than compensated for by the clearance of houses of pot plants, which will allow us a much longer season for Memorial day crops. It will be quite otherwise in 1916, when the date of Easter is April 23, within two days of the latest possible date on which it can occur.

March so far has been true to its characteristics. An occasional day is suggestive of the tropics, but the majority are cold and piercing, with far less precipitation than usual, and unusually clear skies. It is a great advantage to the retailer when we get clear and balmy climatic conditions for the great floral festival, but we cannot depend upon it. Even April Easters are sometimes bitterly cold, with snowstorms thrown in for good measure. Therefore, we must be prepared to wrap plants securely, especially if they have to go to any distance in care of the slow moving express companies.

All plants which are ordered some days in advance should be retarded in a cool shed or greenhouse. If in the latter, see that the glass is well shaded and air freely admitted. There is a great advantage in having a roomy shed or storage house for Easter, and it is usually possible to arrange the plants so that they can be readily selected from by visiting customers. Do not rush the plants too suddenly, however, from strong heat to a low temperature. Some plants will not mind it, but others will soon present a woeful, wilted appearance. Keep a dry atmosphere where these plants are, and, if we get unusually cold weather, a little fire heat may be necessary, especially for shrubs which have been hard forced and are not established in their pots. Always wash the pots of all plants in the storage shed or house. In fact, as pot washing is a job of considerable magnitude where thousands of plants are grown, it should be pushed now and completed before the real Easter rush starts.

Easter Lilies.

Easter lilies are, by long odds, the most important of Easter pot plants. As the plants get one or two open flowers move them into a cool house. Be sure not to make the blunder of taking them from a temperature of 70 degrees to one 25 degrees lower before the flowers are opening, or the great change will blast practically all the buds. Once several blooms are open, however, it is safe to move the plants. See to it that the pollen masses are removed daily to insure clean flowers. It is a pity to remove the pollen, but it is really a necessary mutilation of the flowers. The pollen masses on Lilium candidum give an added charm to the flowers, but it is not possible to pack or ship any lilies without removing the pollen and, at the same time, have clean flowers. If plants are to be made up, the soil can be washed away to allow a number to be accommodated in large pans. While L. longiflorum giganteum makes the best pot plants, it is a little too dwarf, and it will be found an advantage to shade the house well where the plants are growing in order to draw the stems up. The Formosa lily is the lily par excellence for cutting, and is wonderfully clean. As a pot plant, it exceeds all others for use in churches, where a little added height of stem is a great advantage.

If the lilies are late, give them 70 to 75 degrees at night. Spray frequently, using warm water, and close the ventilators tightly early in the afternoon. This sweating will cause some bursting of flowers, but it is the only way to get backward plants ahead. Water freely and give a weak dose of nitrate of soda once a week until the first flowers open.

Rambler Roses.

It does not pay to force rambler roses hard near Easter. It may mean a few open flowers, but the color will be poor. Such plants fall a natural prey to mildew, and no plants thus affected will be easy to sell. Try to open the flowers moderately cool and a little shaded. This will prevent the bleaching out of the pink varieties. The baby ramblers are going to be more in favor than ever, and there seems to be a return of the hybrid perpetuals to favor, Frau Karl Druschki and Ulrich Brunner being more grown than I have seen them for several years. Do not get the hybrid perpetuals too much open; one or two buds just showing color nicely is better than having full-blown flowers. It will require some nice calculating and moving of the plants to have them just right.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

Dutch bulbous plants are important for the grower or retailer who has many customers of moderate means. Hyacinths, tulips and narcissi come along quickly if we get sunny weather, and they should, if possible, be opened in a cool house and never subjected to any real forcing. Keep the plants near the glass, air freely, water abundantly, and, if you are growing the right varieties, few will need any supports. Murillo tulips are always favorites. Of the single sorts, Flamingo, Pink Beauty and the old Cottage Maid sell well. Whites and scarlets are not good sellers. Golden Spur sells better than any other narcissus; it stands up much better than the Double Von Sion, with its heavier and coarser flowers. Pink and white hyacinths are good sellers; blues and reds only moderately so. Be sure to keep the tulips out of the sun as they expand. Laying sheets of paper over the pans will prevent them from blowing wide open. If you are growing bulbs in flats, try the plan of making up some mixed pans containing tulips, hyacinths and daffodils, and, if you chance to have them, add a few crocuses or scillas. Cover the surface with sheet moss after watering well. You will find these mixed pans will appeal to many, as they are so suggestive of spring.

Hard-Wooded Plants.

All the hard-wooded plants, such as ericas, acacias, camellias, azaleas, boronias, etc., will stand cool treatment and may be placed where an occasional draft will strike them. They cannot be sold at anything like low prices, unless it may be the small azaleas, and, for that reason, many will pass them by. Be particular to tell all who are buying these plants, especially azaleas, ericas and acacias, that they have fine, hair-like roots, and that one thorough drying out will practically ruin them. It is difficult to explain to customers how to water plants. Usually one soaking a day suffices for the average house plant, but marguerites, spiræas, etc., should have two waterings, as they are thirsty subjects.

Forced Deciduous Shrubs.

Included in the class of forced deciduous shrubs are forsythias, magnolias and wistarias, which are climbers but considerably grown as Easter pot plants; prunus, lilacs, malus, deutzias, viburnums, etc. For store trade these are better if they have only a few blooms open. They expand quickly in a store, and customers prefer them and get more benefit from them if they can get them before they have many flowers opened. Single plants elevated here and there in the store, in order to show their true individuality, will produce a pleasing effect. Of course, the mass effect is more generally seen, but many of the best retailers have comparatively few plants in their windows and stores, but have a large reserve supply within easy access. Keep all these deciduous shrubs well watered; even then they may wilt if they have had hard forcing.

Marguerites, Spiræas and Genistas.

Marguerites, spiræas and genistas can all be profitably sold at comparatively low prices. The old Paris daisy still makes the best pot plant among marguerites; the newer Mrs. Sander never grows so shapely. Of the spiræas, or astilbes, Gladstone has practically usurped the field of the good old Japonica, while Queen Alexandra, Pink Pearl and the new Arendsi hybrids, in shades of pink and lavender chiefly, make beautiful pot plants and are going to be among our finest Easter plants in a few years. Genistas are fine sellers. They are not good house plants and are usually worthless within a week, but their rich golden flowers make them sell. Genistas, in common with spiræas and marguerites, must have copious supplies of water.

French Hydrangeas.

The old H. Otaksa always proved a good Memorial day seller, but never caught on for Easter. It is otherwise with the new French hydrangeas. They can be flowered easily for even an early Easter. They come in a considerable variety of colors and are going to cut an important figure this year. No one can go far wrong in having a good stock of these on hand. They are less tough than H. Otaksa, but are also less coarse.

Miscellaneous Easter Plants.

Each of the following has been noted with growers of Easter plants this season and all are good: Mignonette, schizanthus, cinerarias, cyclamens, Primula malacoides and obconica, Pelargonium Easter Greeting, zonale pelargoniums, English primroses, wallflowers, forget-me-nots, petunias, antirrhinums, amaryllis, imantophyllums and metrosideros, so that there is ample variety for anyone, and we have not mentioned bougainvilleas, orchids and many fine foliaged plants and ferns at all.

The Crimson Rambler Still has Its Friends.

BULBOUS FLOWERS FOR EASTER.

I put my tulips in flats November 8, in a temperature of 40 degrees, where they remained until January 15. They then were frozen up in a temperature of 26 degrees until February 22, when they were put in a cellar at 60 degrees of even heat, with dim light. I put a few flats in the furnace room in a temperature of 66 to 68 degrees. This seemed to bring the plants along too fast, so I put them in a room with the temperature at 60 degrees. Will this bring the flowers for Easter? I have tried Dutch hyacinths in both places and it looks as if 66 degrees would be required to bring them along. Do you think that is necessary? I should like to have all of them bloom from March 26 to 29.

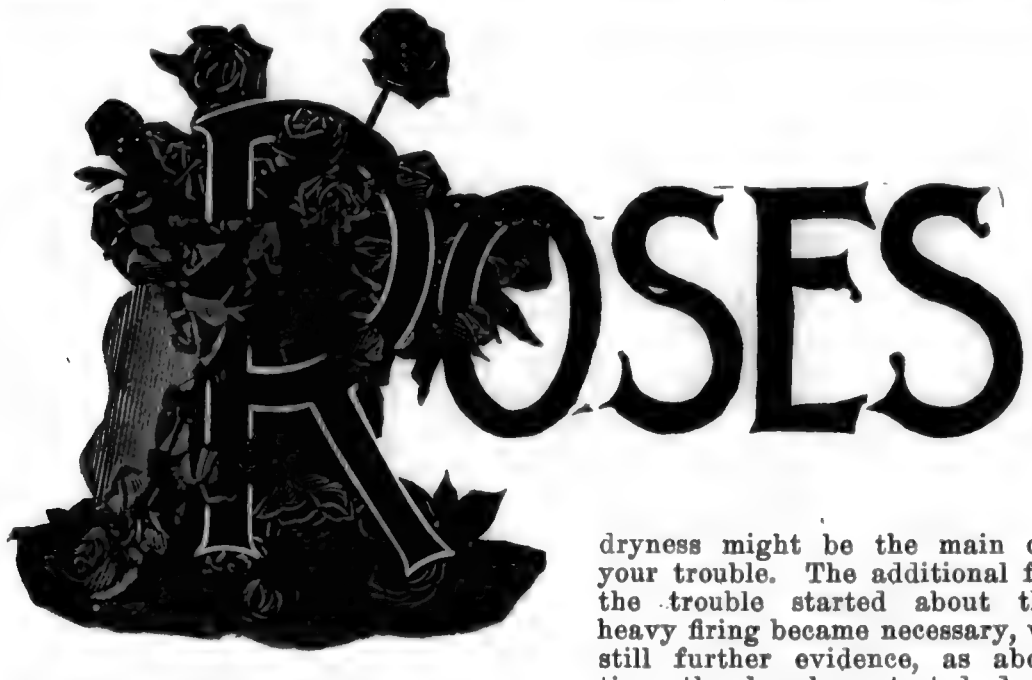
Can I take potted lilies out of the greenhouse and place them in a dimly lighted cellar that has furnace heat, with an unvarying temperature of 60 degrees and little ventilation, and have the plants in bloom for the Easter trade? Should tulips and hyacinths be given frequent and heavy waterings, and should the lilies I have described be liberally watered after moving them from the greenhouse? Does the foliage need syringing often? Will it harm the plants to bring them from the dim light directly to the strong light, or should I change them gradually?

W. B.—Ia.



Tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, if they have growths two to three inches long, will flower in three weeks in a greenhouse with a temperature of 60 degrees at night. In fact, under ordinary March weather conditions, even less time is necessary, but they can easily be retarded in a cold cellar. I would not keep the bulbs any longer in the cellar if they are in pans, or they will be too drawn and leggy. Flats to be used for cutting only can be left in a little later. These bulbs want a moist heat; a drying heat will not suit them at all. All need a good water supply, but nothing like saturation. Be careful when watering the hyacinths not to pour water over the growths, or you will probably start rot among the buds.

Easter lilies could probably be brought along in a warm, light cellar, if given frequent sprayings. If, however, you have a greenhouse with a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night, it would be vastly better for them. They would get the sun and you could give them all needed moisture; also, by closing up the house fairly early in the afternoon, you could get far more growth than in any steam-heated cellar. You should syringe five or six times a day in a cellar, and the same under glass. Use moderately warm water always. You can cover your flats for a day or two with newspapers after bringing them in from the cellar to strong light. C. W.

Evanston, Wyo.—Louis B. Westholder expects to make a large addition to his glass area this spring.

Meadville, Pa.—This town celebrated Mothers' day February 25, and so strong was the demand for white carnations that all the local florists were soon cleaned out. G. W. Haas & Son supplied 1,000 blooms for distribution by a committee.

Duluth, Minn.—Fire completely destroyed the building at Superior street and Third avenue, east, in which was the store of Louis Visias, of which W. W. Seekins is manager. Mr. Seekins estimates his loss at from $8,000 to $10,000, with $3,600 insurance. The ruined stock included 3,600 Easter lilies. The greenhouse at the rear was totally destroyed.

FOLIAGE TURNING BLACK.

I am sending, under separate cover, a few leaves of White Killarney and Hadley roses which started to turn black about four months ago; since then the discoloration has been increasing every day on the young foliage. The roses were planted in July, in good sod soil and cow manure. We keep them in a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees at night and 64 to 66 degrees in the daytime. There are three lines of 2-inch pipe under each bench. In the north end of the house is a conduit containing the main steam pipe, which is also covered with asbestos. In the south end is the return pipe, which lies on top of the ground. It seems that the plants in the north end are affected more with the black foliage than those in the south end. We also have a house of Sunburst and Ward, which are suffering in just the same way and are heated by the same arrangement of piping. We have not done much fumigating or spraying in the houses. Please give me some information about the blackening of the foliage.

I am also sending a few leaves of Killarney Brilliant. Will you tell me what is the matter with them and what to do for them? We keep them in a temperature of 56 to 58 degrees at night and 64 degrees in the daytime. The house of Killarney Brilliant is separate from the other houses and has a different heating system. O. B.—Mo.

When the leaves arrived they were pretty well dried up, so that it was a hard matter to decide what was the cause of their turning black. There are several conditions which might cause the foliage of a rose to be so discolored. Alkali in the water is one possible cause; too great a quantity of sulphur fumes when the houses are closed is another, but in either case the leaves usually start to turn brown at the edges, and not, as yours did, to turn black in spots all over the surface. Usually such a blackening is caused either by dryness at the root or by an overdose of ammonia. The ammonia might be produced either by using too fresh manure in mulching or by applying too strong a dose of fertilizer containing a large percentage of nitrogen. In either case a good, heavy watering and plenty of ventilation should help to overcome the trouble.

The fact that the north end of the house, near the main steam pipe, is mostly affected, seems to indicate that dryness might be the main cause of your trouble. The additional fact that the trouble started about the time heavy firing became necessary, would be still further evidence, as about that time the benches started drying out from the bottom, on account of the heat beneath them. Killarney Brilliant, to do best, should have a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, 64 degrees on cloudy days and 70 to 74 degrees on clear days. W. J. K.

OTHER CROPS WITH ROSES.

Being able to plant only four benches of our rose house, we should like to know what can be grown to advantage in the fifth bench, without hurrying the roses. The bench is on the north side of the house. Would smilax or ferns do well? We intend to use one end of the house for growing carnations and chrysanthemums, but it does not get the sunlight until noon. What would you suggest to plant there?

W. B.—Iowa.

Smilax grows to a considerable height and, while it could be grown with roses, the shadow cast would be decidedly objectionable. Such ferns as nephrolepis would do well on the north bench. Of these the old Boston still remains the most popular. The end where you propose to grow carnations and chrysanthemums would suit smilax much better. Carnations and chrysanthemums need all possible sunlight. A rose house temperature would answer fairly well for some carnations, but would be too warm for chrysanthemums, which must have a low night temperature. I think Asparagus Sprengeri, which would find the conditions congenial, would pay you better than either of the two flower crops named.

DIVIDING DAHLIA ROOTS.

I bought some Delice dahlias last year and they were beautiful. What is the best way to propagate them? If I divide the roots, must I have a piece of the stem on each tuber?

M. W. P. B.—Ala.

Leave the division until a little later in the spring; then divide the clumps in halves, using a strong, sharp knife. Cut through the center of the stalk. Then divide to single tubers, but be sure to leave a portion of the stem on each tuber; without it there will be no eye or growth. You can also start your tubers now and propagate by soft-wood cuttings in addition to root division, but probably a division of the tubers would give you as many plants as you want.

TULIP IS THOMAS MOORE.

Under separate cover I am sending you some tulip blooms. I should like you to tell me what variety these are. I bought the bulbs for Purple Crown, but the color does not strike me as being purple. I never bought Purple Crown before and am not familiar with it.

This variety I am sending is an especially good forcer and a fine keeper, and I wish to force it again next year. I wish, therefore, to make sure of the variety. C. G. N.—N. Y.

The blooms came well packed, but were pretty well dried up on their arrival. As near as I could make out the variety sent, it is not Purple Crown, but Thomas Moore. C. W.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

WHEN HAIL IS LEADEN.

Belgian Growers on Battle Line.

The town of Ypres is one of the most important in western Belgium; it has four railroad lines and the allies defend it stubbornly, while the Germans assault continuously with determination. Probably it is true that there has been more fighting around Ypres than in any other area of equal size. Because of its railroad facilities, Ypres is an important horticultural center in times of peace. There are many growers in its environs, the largest being the concern of which V. Bouckenooghe is managing director. Mr. Bouckenooghe now is a refugee in England, whence comes his story in part as follows:

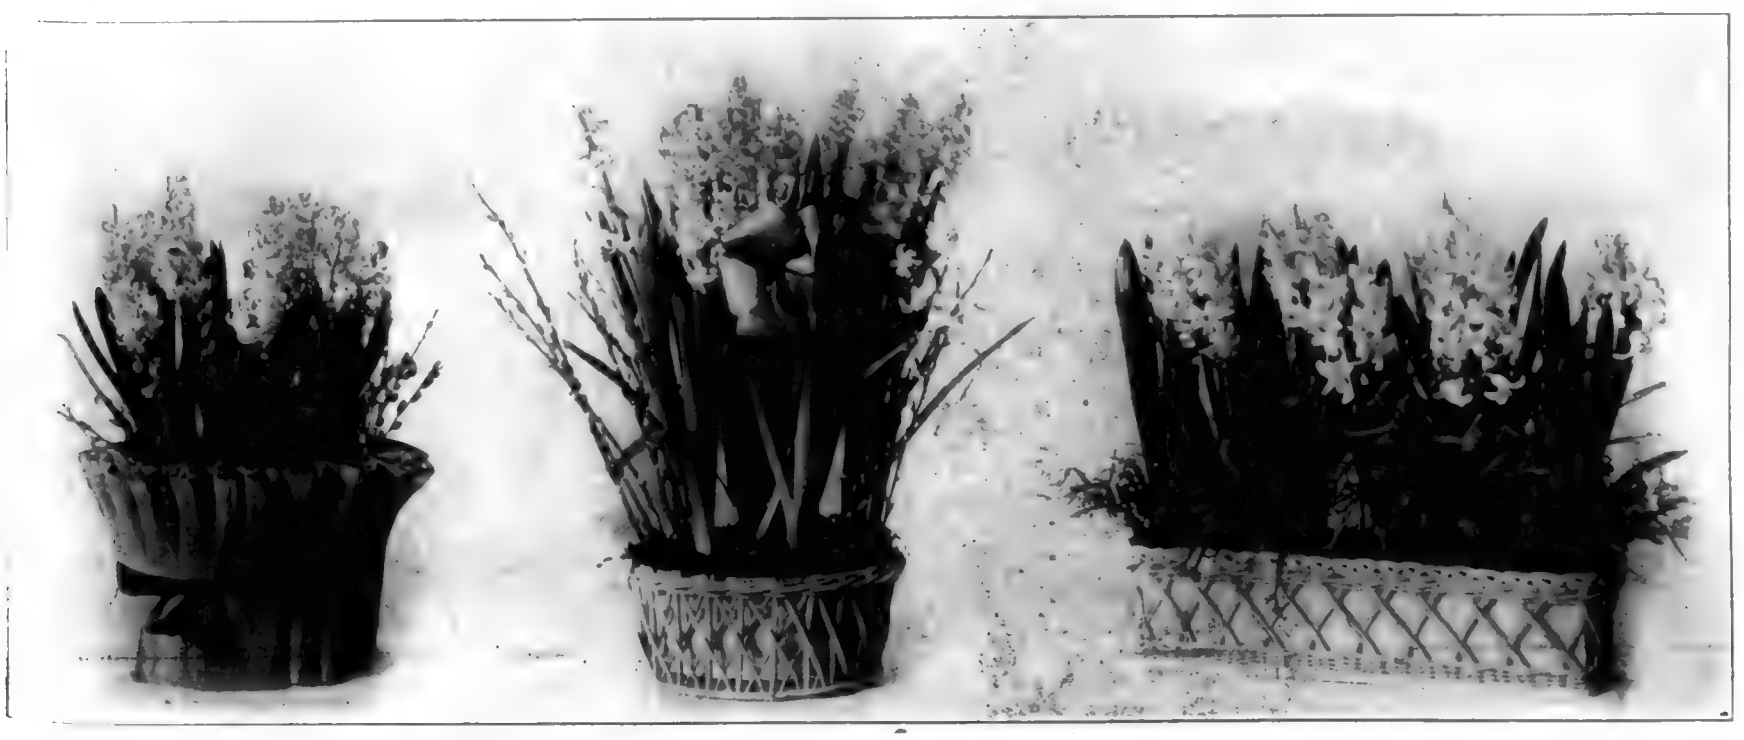
"We never shall forget the date at which Ypres should be taken by order given by the Kaiser! This was, of course, a terrible day for all of us. Thousands and thousands of shells, shrapnel and bombs were fired from every direction. I thought it my duty to stay as long as I could, being the responsible man of a big nursery. I stayed at home till November 29, having heard for eight weeks, day after day, night after night, the guns booming, and living all that time mostly in my cellars. I think I shall never get rid of that shrieking noise of a coming shell, always followed by a terrible explosion.

Couleur Cardinal. Rose Luisante. Murillo.

You Can Meet Your Customers' Ideas on Color and Price by Using Tulips to Fill Easter Baskets.

"Our nursery has suffered severely for the following reason: In the middle of the glasshouses stands our water tower, surmounted by a big white water tank at a height of nearly 100 feet, and this gives the German gunners a splendid mark, so that shells and shrapnel drop all around. Our big square vinery, a three-roofed house of 45,000 square feet, exactly an acre in extent, which has billeted a whole regiment of soldiers and is the nearest house to the water tower, has been badly damaged. At my departure for England, I counted eleven shells in that one glasshouse. Another vinery, a two-roofed one 48x360 feet, received eight shells. Our big carnation house, 42x360 feet, containing nearly 40,000 plants, has been wrecked. A three-roofed carnation house, 30x240 feet, has collapsed. Out of six new traveling houses for forcing lilac and roses and chrysanthemums, four have been blown to splinters. Two big boilers and one chimney have been blown up. Heating pipes, water tanks, iron and wooden supports, all are pulverized. A ten-roofed aspidistra house is the least injured of the lot, as only one roof has been blown down. With two of our working men, I tried to save the stock, about 250,000 leaves. I had no fuel, no wood (requisitioned by the military), and I fear the stock has been frozen. In all I counted thirty-seven shells inside the houses and twenty over the grounds, but since there have been some more disasters. The water tower still stands upright, and challenges the German artillery. The still-standing glasshouses have thousands and thousands of their panes cracked or holed by rifle bullets. The thousands and thousands of bullets fired from the allies' anti-aircraft guns had to drop somewhere, so that a great many came down upon our glasshouses, and, together with those fired by the machine guns from the airmen, all these bullets were making a deafening noise upon our greenhouses. Again, when a shell dropped in a big glasshouse, the whole town of Ypres and the surrounding suburbs could tell that one more glasshouse was gone!"

LILY BUDS BURSTING.



My Easter lilies, which are Formosas, are bursting their buds quite badly. Will you tell me why this is and whether there is a remedy for it? They are in pots on a bench in a house running east and west. I have grown them in this place before and have had no trouble with them. I am watering them as I usually have, and have not fed them heavily. If you can advise me I shall appreciate it.

S. M.—Kan.

While the bursting may be due in some measure to incorrect treatment, it is more likely to be caused by disease in the bulbs, or by the bulbs being shipped in an immature condition. Plants which develop this bursting tendency usually show signs of disease long before the buds show. The leaves may be green, but they will curl more or less and will lack the vigor of healthy stock. I do not know of any plan which will have a tendency to stop the bursting. Give the plants a temperature of 60 degrees at night, if possible. Spray freely and water abundantly. In spraying use warm water.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

Carnations—North and South.

There is an ever-present danger that in these notes, under the head of "Seasonable Suggestions for Southern Floists," the distinctions between northern and southern methods may not be made sufficiently clear, though one of my chief objects is to draw attention to these distinctions. For instance, in my remarks on carnation propagation in the issue of February 25, page 20, it is quite possible that I did not place enough emphasis on the necessity of early propagation, planting-out and housing here, in the south, though I did refer to that necessity and to other points of difference between northern and southern methods.

The difference is more in degree and in time than in actual method. The reason early propagation ought to be practiced in the south is, that unless you start planting early in the field with a strong plant that has already been topped and has made strong breaks, you will not have a plant worth housing. There are so few rains, especially in what is known as the Piedmont section, that a small plant set out in the spring is still a small plant at housing time. Then there is a section, farther south, where the rainy season starts in July and all plants must be lifted and housed before then.

Also there is a dead line below which the plants cannot be grown either profitably or otherwise. We can lift a plant here in June with about six or seven good breaks, plant it in the house and have a big plant ready for blooming in October. We lift these plants during the driest spells, when growth is practically at a standstill, and plant them in the houses without any shade, giving them all the water the ground will absorb and the sun evaporate, and they do not even wilt. The top and side ventilators are left wide open, likewise the doors, day and night, and the plants are sprayed a few times each day for a week.

Moisture and Temperature.

The beds need watering here every day, and forceful syringing also, until the short days arrive. We could not begin to measure out the water, one-half pint to each plant, as is recommended by some authorities for northern growers.

The night temperature varies also; the farther south, the warmer the houses should be run at night. When you get well down in Alabama and Mississippi, a night temperature of 56 degrees is much better than 52 degrees. You get more flowers this way. The season is much shorter there, and, when the warm weather starts in March or April, plants grown in a night temperature of 52 degrees last no longer than those grown at 56 degrees and have not produced as many flowers.

These are some of the reasons, I say, why propagation, planting-out and housing must be done early in the south. I do not believe you could find a Wisconsin grower who would be likely to set out his plants in the field in the middle of March. These small differences are all vital, and constitute the difference between success and failure, between profit and loss. I have known some good northern growers who came down south with a big hurrah and went north again in less than a year's time, sadder but wiser men. They simply failed to read the signs aright.

In the growing of chrysanthemums, also, many successful northern growers meet with disaster here in the south, simply because the wrong bud is taken or insufficient precautions are used against thrips and red spider. In rose growing, too, there are differences, small but just as vital. A northern cyclamen grower came down to a florist's place not over 100 miles from here a year or two ago. He had about 10,000 seedlings and out of all these he did not have even one plant that was good enough to grace the dump pile, when they should have been ready for market. I saw them myself and they were a sight to make angels weep. L.

TRAINING LANDSCAPERS.

[An address on "Landscape Gardening" delivered before the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Champaign, March 2, 1915, by Frederick N. Evans, instructor in landscape design, University of Illinois.]

The twofold ability to tell a group of florists just what they want to know concerning landscape gardening and to put it before them in the right way, is an accomplishment I fear I may not possess. I shall try, however, to do two things quite simply: To tell you, in the first place, what the landscape gardening department is aiming to do at the university, and in that way define what landscape gardening is; and, in the second place, to mention, if I can, a few points at which the landscape architect and the florist touch shoulders.

We are endeavoring at the university to fit young men and young women for work in a profession in which it has been found that a young man or a young woman cannot accomplish the best things, or, at least, is not apt to produce the best results without special, diligent and pretty strenuous training. Now, it does not matter whether this training is obtained inside or outside of academic walls, but it does matter how long it takes to get such training. There should be no difference between what is called theoretical and practical training. Theoretical training is merely a boiling down of other men's experience into an allopathic dose. It should be distinguished from practical training only in its aim to be a short cut through the field of experience.

Mme. A. Riverain, blue — Avalanche, white.

The French Hydrangeas are Splendid Easter Plants and will have Years of Popularity.

What Is Landscape Gardening?

The lay mind finds it hard sometimes to understand just what is implied by the term "landscape gardening." No doubt the florist's mind is clearer on the subject, since the two professions are somewhat related. But, even so, a word of explanation may well be given in endeavoring to tell you what the landscape gardening department is doing for the aspirants at the threshold of the muse.

We hear various terms applied to the workers in landscape gardening. That the work as a profession is new, is in part accountable for the variety; that it has various distinct branches within itself, is another reason. For instance, we hear of landscape gardener, landscape architect, landscape engineer, garden architect, and so forth. These terms today are for general purposes synonymous, though they vary occasionally in their specific application. I shall use the term "landscape gardener" as covering them all.

Landscape gardening has often been defined as the art of arranging a part of the earth's surface to fit the needs of beauty and convenience. In this art, the principle of convenience, or use, is to be considered even prior to that of beauty, but both go hand in hand. The landscape gardener works mainly with three elements, (1) with ground forms, that is, with hill, plain or valley; (2) with artificial or architectural forms, such as buildings, steps, bridges, and so forth, and (3) with vegetation in all its varied forms of tree, shrub and flower. In planning what disposition shall be made of ground forms in any problem in hand, the landscape gardener has need for some knowledge of engineering principles. In planning the shape and placing of those features which are to be constructed of various building materials, it will be seen that a knowledge of architectural principles is equally essential; and, further, in considering the choice and arrangement of the many forms of vegetation which go to make up the completed landscape picture, the landscape gardener must be drilled along lines of horticulture. Thus the landscape gardener is a connecting link, uniting parts of three sciences.

The students in the department at the University of Illinois have enough to do, as will be seen. They are, as a body, much in earnest. It is interesting to note that the department of landscape gardening at the University of Illinois is the largest in the country, numbering at present sixty-two students, gathered from as far east as Massachusetts and as far west as California.

Interrelation of Professions.

A comparison of our professions, floriculture and landscape gardening, would show, as far as numbers are concerned, I am sure, a large balance in favor of the florists. In this country we are both rather young professions. It is true that men have gardened since the time of Adam, but it is only since about 1825 that there has been a popular demand in this country for the products of our arts, resulting in a class of men trained to meet this demand. Both professions have grown in prestige in the last few decades.

The interrelation of the two professions is vast, and the chances for cooperation between us are not to be overlooked. This is an age when, to make the most of his trade, each man had best attend to his own business. He must be more or less of a specialist. He cannot afford to be a quack. Each profession must occasionally borrow the brains of another. Now and again it will be extremely profitable for us both to do so. There are times when the florist should find it necessary to call on the landscape gardener for advice in design, and there are times when the landscape gardener's productions are almost entirely dependent on the art of the florist to set them off. Let me state a specific instance illustrating each of these points, and I shall close.

An annual florists' exhibition has been given in Rochester, N. Y., in the Auditorium. Because of lack of cooperation among the exhibitors in arranging their displays, the exhibition seemed to be losing in popularity year by year. Something had to be done. A scheme was necessary to pull the thing together. This was the solution. A landscape gardener was put in charge of the arrangement of the whole exhibition. Thanks to the clever designers in his office, a scheme was devised which united both beauty and common sense in display. Attractive garden features were introduced, hedges of arborvitæ, a pool in which the beauty of the exhibits was mirrored. It was something original. It was beautiful beyond custom. The whole city flocked to the flower show, and continues to do so now, year after year. There is the double gain, in advertising and in gate receipts. Here the landscape gardener was able to aid the florist.

At the Seattle Exposition.

An instance illustrating but one of the many ways in which the florist's aid may be called in to help the landscape gardener is to be seen at San Francisco during the present exposition. There flowers are an extremely important feature. At the Seattle exposition, several years ago, was an excellent illustration of the value of the floral decoration as an asset of landscape gardening. There, in the central parterre below the central fountain, were decorative beds of brilliant flowers, as much a part of the general design as any architectural features surrounding them. In the center lay a bed of mesembrianthemum, the midday flower; its wonderful color was, as it seemed, the cynosure of all eyes. Thousands like myself remember, no doubt, the beauty of that bed long after the beauty of the rest of the design has faded.

And so, in the city itself, by flower boxes, by gardens, and by floral decorations also, much more may be done to help conditions on every hand. There is, indeed, a large field of coöperation between the art of the grower of flowers and that of the planner of a part of the earth's surface, a chance which we will all do well to keep in mind, as it offers opportunities for profit to both of our professions, materially and ideally.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleyas.

The really busy season for orchid specialists is now here. Those who have taken time by the forelock and done all possible repotting, rebasketing and top-dressing are to be commended, for, from this time on, with the increasing power of the sun, growth will be much more rapid, more watering will be necessary and many other details will need attention. If overhauling is left until so late in the season, there is great danger of its being done either in a slipshod manner or not at all.

Plants of Cattleya Trianæ, which now are mostly through flowering, should be repotted when the roots and bulbs are hanging over the sides of the pots, for such bulbs will never produce good flowers. Keep the roots in the pots for the best results. Be sure to firm all plants thoroughly when repotting. This cannot be done with the fingers; a pointed stick of hard wood must be used. After potting, clip over the ends hanging out from the fern fiber, to give the surface a neat appearance. Keep all newly potted cattleyas on the dry side until root growth becomes active. They also appreciate the warm end of the house for a time.

C. Schrœderæ is now blooming freely. It is not a popular florists' cattleya, as it lacks the rich coloring of Trianæ. It is a free bloomer, however, and fills in the season when cattleyas are somewhat scarce. C. Mossiæ will soon have some flowers open, as buds are already well up in the sheaths; so are those on C. speciosissima. These are splendid spring and early summer cattleyas of easy culture. C. Mendelii, which follows C. Mossiæ, is now imported only in limited numbers, and the plants do not arrive in good condition. This is a beautiful cattleya and it is a pity that it is not more abundant.

Do not be in too big a hurry to rush shading over the cattleyas. A light covering is all that is needed yet. You can get dark-colored bulbs and foliage by using heavy shade, but such plants will flower disappointingly. Some of the finest cattleyas I ever saw were grown suspended near the ridge of an old carnation house, where no summer shade was given at all. Where movable lath shadings can be afforded, they give the finest possible shade for orchids. They cost money, however, and commercial growers cannot afford the time to do more than syringe or brush some shading on the glass.

Continue to air freely. Remember that cattleyas cannot tolerate coddling. Never mind if on a severe night the minimum temperature may drop to 50 degrees. That is far better for them than 60 degrees with a dry, stuffy heat. On warm days spray the plants over in the morning, but be sure they are dry before nightfall.

There are wide differences of opinion regarding the feeding of cattleyas. I have seen splendid plants which the growers said were never fed; others equally fine were systematically fed. These orchids in their native habitat are seen in the best condition where the roots can feed on decaying vegetation, insects and birds, and it seems reasonable that under artificial conditions they would appreciate a little feeding. The Cookson formula, Bon Arbor, cow manure, sheep manure and even nightsoil have been tried with a greater or less degree of success. Only established plants should be fed and not any which were recently potted. For baskets, the best plan is to dip them in a barrel, while pots and pans can be watered through a Kinney pump, the water being in a barrel or barrels, or in a tank if the house contains one. A change of food seems desirable and feeding once in ten days is sufficient. With the Cookson formula some growers apply these salts in weak form all the time and find that the plants appreciate them. For those planning to feed in a small way I would suggest trying five pounds of Bon Arbor in fifty gallons of water. Stir thoroughly and allow it to stand a few days before using.

Dendrobiums.

The various forms of Dendrobium nobile now make a glorious show. This old orchid is still hard to beat. It is a good grower and a profuse bloomer, lasting several weeks in bloom. While the plants are in flower, keep them fairly dry and in a dry house. To increase D. nobile, cut off any of the small matured bulbs, with roots intact, which have been produced from nodes on the mature pseudo-bulbs. Put these in small pots or pans in a mixture of sphagnum and fern fiber and grow them in a warm, moist house. In two or three years they will make fine plants.

D. Wardianum, which will soon pass out of flower, will be making plenty of new growths. Place the plants after flowering in a warm, moist house to make up their growths; the same holds true of D. nobile and its many forms and hybrids. D. thyrsiflorum and D. densiflorum are now showing their racemes. These are beautiful and graceful dendrobes, but the flowers do not possess great lasting properties. They succeed well when hung up close to the glass without any shade through the winter. A temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night and comparative dryness at the root will tend toward floriferousness.

Cypripedium Insigne.

The flowers of that good old standby, Cypripedium insigne, are now all cut and plants which bloomed sparsely, due to an overcrowding of growths, should be pulled apart and repotted. Good fibrous loam is better for this cypripedium than fern fiber; add a little old, dry cow manure and lumpy charcoal. Divided plants will bloom less freely for one season, but will give a grand crop the second season. Plants which may not need repotting can be given a little top-dressing. This, with some judicious feeding, will carry them through all right.

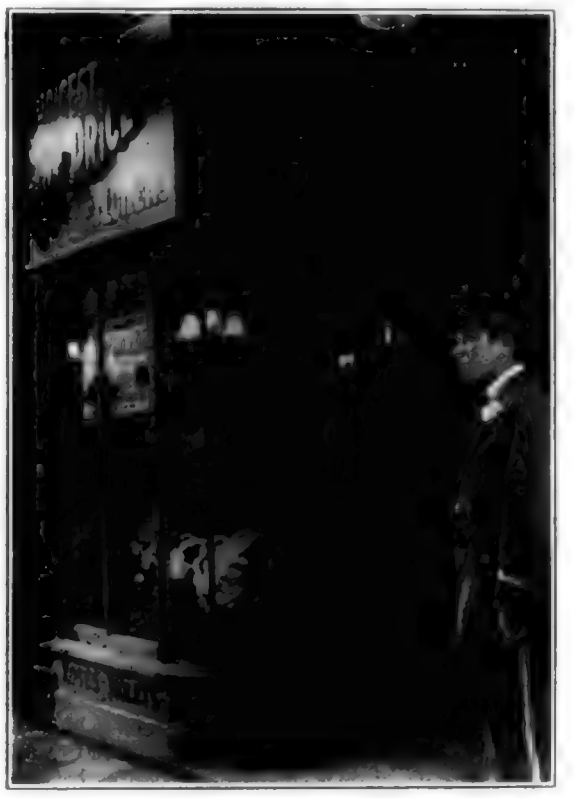
C. Leeanum is still in flower. It also should be treated in the same way as C. insigne after flowering. This is a valuable florists' cypripedium, worthy of increased attention. The old C. villosum is now coming in season. Here is another good commercial sort; still another is C. Sallieri aureum.

The cypripediums require somewhat more shade than cattleyas, or there will be danger of the foliage scorching. They appreciate sprayings overhead and enjoy a more stuffy atmosphere than cattleyas and lælias.



MEXICAN TUBEROSES.

Can you tell me whether the Mexican everblooming tuberose will do well in Indiana? Explain the nature of its flowers, etc. C. Y.—Ind.

I presume you refer to the common Mexican tuberose, or polianthes. I have never met with any possessing everblooming qualities, though they may be so described in some catalogues. Tuberoses can be grown under glass, in pots, boxes or benches. A brisk heat suits them best. Bulbs can be planted outdoors in your latitude about May 1. Cover the bulbs to a depth of two inches. Give them an open and sunny spot. The soil can be light, but moderately rich; it should be free from fresh manure. You should get a good crop of spikes before freezing weather. The spikes will not come all together, by any means, and this fact has probably caused someone to dub them everbloomers. C. W.

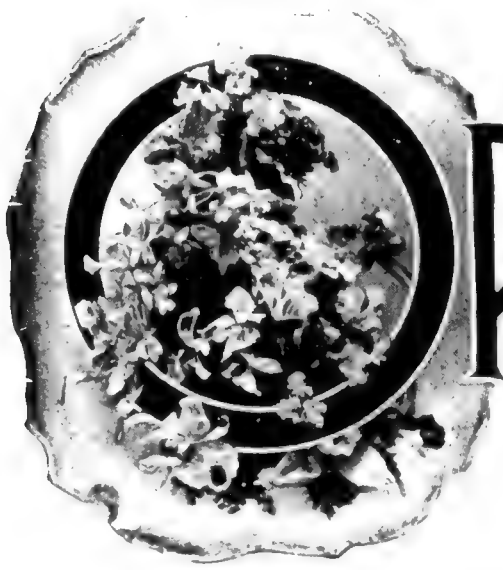
CASH AND CUT FLOWERS.

The Flower Growers' Depot, Ed. Littman, district manager, Abraham Littman, president and treasurer, was established October 31, 1914, at 317 Westminster street, Providence, R. I., with aims different from most retail stores. One was to pay cash for all stock shipped to the store by the growers, immediately upon receipt of the flowers. Another was to distribute large quantities of flowers at low cash prices, with the object of offsetting the small margin of profit by the large volume of business. The head of the concern reports that the plan is a success. The growers are glad to receive the prompt payment of cash in return for their stock. That the public takes kindly to the idea is shown by the fact that 15,000 carnations were sold during the first week of February, in addition to large quantities of other flowers.

Outside the Flower Growers' Depot.

TABLE CENTERPIECES.

The Easter table will call for a centerpiece of spring flowers. It should be something low, so as not to obscure the view. Frequently the florist will be called upon to fill some receptacle owned by the customer, but in other instances he can sell the receptacle with the flowers. In such cases a low, round or oval basket is to be recommended, equipped with a tin liner that is water-tight. With such a receptacle, provision is necessary to make the flowers stay in place. One florist takes care of this in the autumn by procuring and storing a large quantity of dried grapevine twigs, but dried wild smilax, from which the leaves have been stripped, is just as good. The liner can be stuffed with these twigs before it is filled with water. Inserting the stems between the twigs will enable the florist to place the flowers just where he wants them.



In the accompanying illustration the centerpiece was in a receptacle nearly two feet in diameter, for a large table. It was made up of a great variety of the popular spring flowers, all in light colors, and did not stand as high as the diameter of the pan.

continues to do so now, year after year. There is the double gain, in advertising and in gate receipts. Here the landscape gardener was able to aid the florist.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Spring Spraying.

Winter may not have entirely passed, although spring, according to the calendar, arrives March 21, but the worst has passed. The ground is already nearly free from frost, and, although we may still look for some sharp frosts and perhaps considerable falls of snow in some regions, the season is now so far advanced that such spells of winter cannot stay long with us. This is the commencement of the busy season outdoors and for some weeks now we shall have more work than we can properly cope with.

Since the coming of the San Jose scale, this pest has done an immense amount of damage to fruit trees and shrubbery. When we remember that this pest multiplies with such astonishing rapidity that the offspring of a single scale in one year, if allowed to increase unchecked, would be over 3,000,000,000, we can form some idea of the necessity for taking energetic measures to keep it in subjection.

All fruit trees and all shrubs should be sprayed in the fall or spring; if at both seasons, so much the better. Some shrubs are not attacked, as those belonging to the rosaceæ family are usually the scale's favorites, but it will do no harm to spray them all either with lime-sulphur or one of the soluble oils, such as Scaline or Scalecide. These latter are the best for the use of the small country florist. They mix readily in water, and if the bark is all damped by the use of a fine, misty spray nozzle, we can be sure that at least nine-tenths will be killed. Do not forget to spray hardy roses; nearly all are liable to be infested with scale, while willows, poplars and chestnuts are likewise often attacked. Do this spraying, however, before the buds begin to expand. This spray will not only kill the scale, but will also help to destroy the eggs of the destructive aphides.

Pruning Hardy Roses.

Do not be in too big a hurry to prune the hardy roses. March may be a balmy month, but April is then all the more likely to show her teeth, and early-pruned roses, which have made little growths during a warm March, are likely to get a severe setback in April. During the average spring, April 1 is not too late to prune roses in Philadelphia; the work may be deferred until a week later in New York and southern Connecticut, while Boston can safely wait until the middle of April. Do not be in a hurry to pull away all the winter covering from roses. They may look fresh and green when uncovered, but a few nights of sharp frost, with cutting winds and bright sun, will soon discolor them.

Cut back such hybrid perpetuals as Frau Karl Druschki, John Hopper, Paul Neyron, Ulrich Brunner, Baron de Bonstetten, S. Reynolds Hole, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Mrs. John Laing, etc., quite hard. Remove all dead and weak wood. Leave not over three eyes on the last season's growth on strong shoots and one or two where the growth has been more moderate. Hard pruning means that the plants will break strongly and give much finer flowers than where lighter cutting back is practiced.

The hybrid teas, such as Killarney, Testout, Gruss an Teplitz, Mme. Ravary, Mrs. Ward, Viscountess Folkestone, Lyon, Richmond, etc., need light pruning. Merely remove dead and weak wood and cut back the ends of the strong shoots a little. Where these hybrid perpetuals are not hardy and they are stored in frames and pits or buried in the ground over winter, they should be taken out and carefully planted as soon as possible after frost has gone and the ground becomes workable.

The rambler roses should merely have their dead wood and extremely weak wood removed. Rosa rugosa must be pruned but little; the same holds true of Harrison's Yellow and Austrian Yellow. The so-called baby ramblers need moderate pruning.

April is a good month for the planting of hardy roses. An earlier date is, of course, necessary in the south. Grafted stock costs more than own-root plants, but is far hardier and more vigorous and possesses greater longevity. Own-root roses do well in some sections, but on the eastern seaboard they are of little value, although many, owing to their cheapness, are planted each year.

Dutch Bulb Beds and Borders.

If the ground was hard frozen before the beds of tulips and hyacinths were mulched, and the winter has been fairly steady, they should not have made much growth yet. Whether they have or not, it is not safe with the arrival of one or two warm days to remove all the covering. Take this away gradually; we shall still have some cold nights and a mulch will be a great protection to the somewhat tender sprouts. Use the hands and not rakes when removing this covering. A careless man will soon do a lot of harm with a rake. A careful man can use his hands so that few bulbs are broken.

GERANIUM FOLIAGE DISEASED.

Enclosed you will find some geranium leaves which are diseased. Is this the disease on which I have seen articles in The Review? It shows on 1,000 S. A. Nutt and on some Doyle. It seems to have spread from the Nutt to the Doyle. I have used Aphine once and Nico-fume paper four times since February 4. I have used sixty sheets of the paper in a house 25x60 feet. I cannot find any thrips, red spider or aphis on the plants. If there is any remedy, I should like to know of it at once. W. E. J.—N. Y.

The foliage showed no signs whatever of any insect attacks, but is diseased. Fumigation is of no avail against leaf affections, and Aphine, while excellent as a remedy against aphis and other insect pests, is useless against leaf diseases. You certainly gave the house a terribly heavy fumigation if you used sixty sheets of Nico-fume in a house 25x60. Such a dose would be more likely to aggravate than to alleviate the trouble.

Pick off all the worst affected leaves. If the plants are crowded, space them apart a little. Do not hose overhead at all. Let the plants dry out well between waterings. Avoid feeding with liquid manure, as this promotes a soft growth which easily falls a prey to blight. Keep the atmosphere of your house dry, let the plants have lots of sun and ventilate freely. A close, stuffy house will cause the trouble to spread. Spray with either Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. Each of these is an excellent remedy for fungoid affections. If you will follow out these directions I think your trouble will gradually disappear. C. W.

DISEASED FOLIAGE.

I am enclosing some geranium leaves I think are diseased. I am picking the diseased leaves off every day, but it does no good, some of the plants having lost all their foliage. Please tell me what I can do for them.

J. W. N.—Pa.

The leaves received were quite badly diseased. Picking off the affected leaves is a good plan. Better throw away the worst attacked plants. Give your stock one or two sprayings of some good fungicide, such as Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. Maintain a dry atmosphere. Do not allow the plants to be crowded. Space them out occasionally, picking off all dead or decaying leaves when doing so. Let the temperature run about 50 degrees at night. Ventilate freely. Give full sun and let the plants dry out well between waterings. Do not throw bad leaves or other rubbish below the benches. Remember that cleanliness is next to godliness. These fungoid diseases frequently have their inception in the cutting bench. Plants left there too long before being potted are liable to be attacked. C. W.

WILL the carnation come back? What a question! No, the carnation will not come back. It is here. The only question is how much abuse it will be able to withstand and still hold its popularity with the people. Edmund A. Harvey's paper, printed in The Review for March 11, suggests a few observations that, I think, have a direct bearing on the subject.

Mr. Harvey suggests that the hybridizers pay more attention to fragrance. That fragrance has been one of the potent factors in making the carnation popular with the public, no one can deny, and the grower and hybridizer is just as much aware of the fact as anyone. But has the grower ever received any encouragement from the retailer, or the public either, to work for fragrance in his blooms? True, occasionally one hears a comment on the carnations of today not being as fragrant as those in the olden days, etc. That is as far as it goes. Nearly every grower knows that if he offers the storeman two varieties, one a large flower without fragrance, and the other a half-inch smaller and quite fragrant, the smaller bloom will be turned down for the larger one even though the quality in every other respect be exactly equal. I have frequently asserted that just as soon as the retailer and the public are willing to put a market value on fragrance, the hybridizer will produce varieties possessing this most desirable quality.

Size vs. Keeping Quality.

The same is true of keeping quality. I need only cite the career of Pink Delight as an example. From the start, the trade has known that this variety will outkeep Enchantress nearly two to one, and yet, how many growers have displaced Enchantress with Pink Delight? Its only drawback is that it is not quite so large. The color is at least as good; it is quite as free, and it does not split. If the storeman will taboo the varieties that he knows will not keep as well as other varieties in the same color, we will soon have less complaint about the poor keeping of carnation blooms.

That there are varieties in all colors that will keep as well as any of the old sorts no one can deny. Matchless will keep as well as any of them. Pink Delight will do the same. Gloriosa is not far behind, and Rosette is noted for its keeping and shipping qualities. St. Nicholas, in scarlet, and Pocahontas, in crimson, will never give anyone trouble, and Yellow Prince will travel across the continent in good shape. The same may be said of Mrs. C. W. Ward. All these have enough quality to satisfy the most fastidious.

Few storemen keep posted on the varieties of carnations as they should. When they order, it is so many white or so many flesh pink or medium pink, etc. And when they get them, they don't know whether a bunch of red is Beacon or Portia.

The above observations all concern the storeman. Perhaps I should not include them all in one class, because there are some who really do discriminate and try to eliminate the faults enumerated, and from these we hear little complaint. They work in harmony with the growers who supply them, and each helps the other in putting before the public carnations that do give satisfaction. It is the storemen who scorn the name "florist" (they call themselves "merchants") that do the howling. To them a white carnation is a white carnation, a pink one is a pink one, and a deep cerise may even be called red at times. To them there is no beauty in a flower except as it represents so many dollars and cents of profit. We need more retail "florists" and fewer "merchants."

The troubles of the carnation should not all be laid at the door of the storeman, however. He contributes his share, but the grower contributes his share as well. Knowing, as he does, that the retail customer will grab for the large bloom, he feeds his plants beyond reason in order to get size at the expense of substance.

Perhaps his worst offense is in his method of marketing his products. He will work early and late to produce the finest stock he knows how, only to ruin it in getting it to the market. Have we not seen him take a hundred carnation blooms of the finest quality, tied in bunches of twenty-five, and wrap them in paper as though he were wrapping a bundle of dry goods?

When he ships by express, he bunches the blooms, wrapping the stems with twine within a few inches of the blooms, so that the bunch looks more like a head of cabbage than so many individual blooms. When he packs them in the box, he wads them into one solid mass, the bottom bunches bearing the weight of the entire lot. Could any carnation bloom, could a bloom of any flower, be expected to come through such abuse looking anything like it did when it was cut from the plant? I have seen thousands of them, and invariably they look like a rag on the end of a stick. There is no form to the flower, even if it is not bruised beyond using. A few days ago I saw, in a well known wholesale house, a person wrapping 400 carnation blooms in one bundle. What do you think they looked like when unwrapped?

Abused in Handling.

In many of the wholesale houses you will see great mounds of carnation blooms lying on the tables. They are taken from the shipping boxes, where they had been at least over night, and laid out on the tables without having been in water since starting to market. They are left until nearly noon if unsold, which means eighteen hours out of water. Can such blooms be expected to keep satisfactorily?

The whole system for handling carnation blooms is wrong. Any bloom that is supposed to preserve its individuality should be handled individually. When the carnation growers who ship their product return to the method of packing their blooms in layers instead of in bunches, they will realize better returns, and the carnation will continue in popular favor. No flower with the natural beauty of the carnation can go out of public favor, if it is put into the hands of the public in its original beauty.

I can hear some of our wholesale men snort at the idea of going back to the slow and tedious method of handling carnations singly instead of in bunches. To them, speed is everything. The more dollars' worth of blooms each man can handle in a given time, the more efficient they believe themselves to be. We cannot fail to recognize speed as a considerable part of efficiency, but it is not all of it, and unless

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

it is coupled with carefulness, it is more apt to spell deficiency instead. If speed is everything, why not handle your carnations with pitchforks?

Here, again, we must discriminate between the guilty and the innocent. There is a good proportion of growers who have enough gray matter to see the folly of such methods. They grow high-grade stock; then they handle it carefully, and put it into the hands of their customers in good condition. These are the men who are making progress, and they are not complaining. They are the ones who will eventually save the carnation's reputation as the flower for the people. The careless packer will gradually be eliminated, just as the poor, inefficient grower is now being eliminated, and the grower who puts his product into the retailers' hands in the best condition will come into his own. More and more, storemen will see that this is of greater importance than price.

There is no need for any ingenious plan of coöperation, as some seem to think. All that is needed is that each one do what he knows is right and best for his blooms, instead of abusing them to save work.

THRIPS ON ENCHANTRESS.

My Enchantress carnations seem to be infested with thrips. I have tried spraying with nicotine extract, etc., and have also smoked them several times. The spraying does absolutely no good; the smoking shows some results, but after a smoking the pink looks absolutely washed out. As thrips can be gotten out only with repeated smoking, it means that I shall have several cuts spoiled before the thrips can be gotten rid of. Do you know of any other remedy for this pest? If you or any of the readers could help me out, I am sure the information would also be appreciated by other growers who are having the same trouble. G. F. & C.—N. Y.

Smoking with tobacco stems is an obsolete method of destroying greenhouse pests and is far less effective than spraying. If your spraying did not destroy the thrips, there must be something wrong with your formula or your manner of application. We use a 2-inch potful of the forty per cent nicotine to four gallons of water. By using this once each week, we are able to keep our plants clean. If you will use it this way, you should, with two or three applications each week, be able to clean them out in two or three weeks. The sooner you begin, the better results you will have, as it is a hard, uphill fight to get control of thrips after warm weather sets in.

FLYSPECKS NOT A DISEASE!

Please tell me the name and cause of the disease on the carnation leaves which are enclosed. This disease seems to be all over the carnations and also on the woodwork of the benches. The soil in which the plants are growing is on raised benches. It is new soil and has good drainage. Two or three weeks ago I gave these carnations a top-dressing of cow manure. I am now running my carnations on the dry side, but the disease is still holding on. We run our houses at a temperature of 50 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 to 15 degrees in the daytime.

I should also like to know the name and cause of the disease on my cyclamen blooms, some of which are enclosed. R. E. L.

It is not a disease that is causing these tiny specks on your carnation leaves. They are flyspecks. When you put on that mulch a short time ago, you brought in with the manure some eggs, which hatched out after getting into the warm greenhouse temperature. They will gradually disappear.

Your cyclamen are being attacked by what is called the mite. It is a tiny insect which attacks the blooms of this and other plants, producing the effect you see on your plants. Frequent spraying with a solution of nicotine will exterminate them. A. F. J. B.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., is well satisfied with its investment in Rose Ophelia. The returns are ahead of those from any predecessor.

Rolf Zetlitz, Lima, O., intends using his present houses for roses, entirely grafted stock. He has secured another range for carnations.

E. N. Zetlitz, Lima, has opened a stand in a leading department store, not far from his present location, where he handles a lucrative patronage.

Mrs. E. Suder, Toledo, O., may be found as busy as when the writer first met her. She owns up to 72 years. "Reverse the figures," she says, and her remarkable activity backs her up. Her recreation is, first, her German paper, then The Review.

John Boehner, Dayton, expects to rebuild part of his present range at the close of the spring business. The show room has been made most attractive.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., was in the height of shipping. While carnations and chrysanthemums are well represented, the queen of flowers is receiving much attention just now. Hoosier Beauty is behaving well, in appearance and fragrance reminding one of that grand old hybrid perpetual, Xavier Olibo, which Mr. Hill tells me is still a favorite across the pond. A yellow seedling from Mrs. Aaron Ward, said to be an improvement in every respect, looks like the coming leader in this class. Ophelia fairly revels at home, but as nothing but flowering wood is taken for grafts and about 200,000 are in process of finishing off to be shipped, there are few blooms. Lady Alice Stanley, Mrs. Russell and Killarney Brilliant are doing well. A batch of seedlings, all more or less related to Ophelia, will be interesting later. Joe Hill remarked on the strong preference for grafted stock.

John A. Evans, Richmond, said his ventilating machinery would have stood the strain upon it had it been used at Billy Sunday's Tabernacle, when the Philadelphia craftsmen attended there recently.

P. J. Lynch, of Heller Bros. Co., Newcastle, says the catalogues are out, stock was never finer and prospects are promising, so that in all probability the proposed addition to the plant will go up.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., as usual at this time, are shipping rooted cuttings of carnations as fast as the stock is ready. Brother Baur wields the propagating knife like the veteran he is at the job. On noting that he slit some of them, I was told that the fiery scarlets absorbed more water than others—a new one to me. Anyhow, the stock is in the pink of condition. Passing the older varieties, such as Pocahontas, Enchantress Supreme, Matchless and Benora, I observed a lovely salmon seedling, clove-scented; a truly noble flower, numbered 100. Another, on the order of Gorgeous, will be heard of later. By the way, Gorgeous is giving big satisfaction grown as single plants. Pink Delight and Champion are doing well. A bed of pink and yellow antirrhinums promises an enormous crop for Easter. Geraniums are going out by the thousands. A bed of Carnation Pink Delight, carried over the second year, is yielding far heavier cuts than newly planted stock. The main thing is carrying the plants through the summer, but Mr. Baur says it certainly has paid to do it. W. M.

Field of Dahlias Grown for the Milwaukee Cut Flower Market by H. W. Koerner.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

There was considerable improvement in the cut flower market last week. While no fancy prices were realized, there was a little advance. White carnations were in good demand the latter part of the week for St. Patrick's day, and, while nothing unusual, it was a little boost. There is a great deal of bulbous stock coming in, and the prices are an inducement to buy. Sweet peas and short-stemmed roses were much called for.

Various Notes.

William Terry has disposed of his interest in the store at 1137 West Baltimore street to Miss Anna Muth, who managed the store while he was proprietor and also for the former owners, Pierce & Co.

L. H. Klein, of Towson, is cutting some fine orchid-flowering sweet peas.

Southern jonquils have made their appearance on the streets. The local wholesale florists have discontinued handling them, but they have been taken up by wholesale vegetable and produce merchants, who dispose of them to the street venders. W. F. E.

MAINE FLORISTS ORGANIZE.

Officers Elected.

Wednesday, March 10, twenty prominent Maine florists met at the College of Agriculture, at Orono, and formed an organization. After preliminary remarks by A. Lurie, the organization was completed and the following officers were elected:

President—J. H. Stalford, Bar Harbor.

Vice-President—C. S. Strout, Biddeford.

Treasurer—E. Saunders, Lewiston.

Secretary—A. Lurie, Orono.

With the fine address of Professor E. A. White, of Cornell University, on "Educational Problems in Floriculture," the audience was so well pleased that a standing vote of thanks was given. C. S. Strout spoke on "Carnations," a subject which no one, perhaps, could treat in a better way, as Mr. Strout is well known throughout the United States for the excellent quality of his flowers.

After a recess for lunch, J. H. Stalford continued the program with a discussion of "Hothouse Fruits as a Commercial Value." Mr. Stalford has made a distinct success of greenhouse fruit growing and was eminently fitted for his topic. W. T. Burton, of Bar Harbor, spoke on "Private Estate Gardening." F. J. Elder, Boston representative of Lord & Burnham Co., gave an instructive talk on "Greenhouse Heating." The program was wound up with a round table discussion of greenhouse diseases, conducted by Dr. W. J. Morse, plant pathologist of the Maine Experiment Station.

The Exhibits.

The exhibition was of such character as to excite the admiration of all present and was the chief attraction of the day. The exhibits included:

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.: Mrs. George Shawyer rose.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia: Baskets and ribbons.

C. S. Strout, Biddeford: Carnations: Matchless, Melody, Beacon, Winsor, White Winsor, Benora, Pink Delight, Enchantress Supreme, White Wonder, Champion and Mrs. C. W. Ward.

J. W. Minott Co., Portland: Carnations: White Wonder, White Winsor, Pocahontas, Winsor, Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, White Enchantress and Beacon; narcissi: Emperor, Golden Spur, Von Sion, Sir Watkins; Nelrose and snapdragons, Princess of Wales violets.

E. Saunders, Lewiston: A fine exhibit of carnations, roses and bulbous flowers.

Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor: Exhibit of potted plants, spiræas, Easter lilies, narcissi and hyacinths.

W. T. Burton, Bar Harbor: Potted plants, including Easter lilies, mignonette and an excellent giant specimen of cineraria.

A. J. Loder, Bangor: A fine standing wreath.

H. L. Chadwick, Houlton: Antirrhinum Silver Pink.

H. Roak, Auburn: White antirrhinums.

Geo. Glaentzel, Camden: Display of mushrooms.

GULLETTS ADD FIVE HOUSES.

Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill., have just awarded a contract to the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, for the erection of three large greenhouses and two smaller houses at the wholesale plant east of Lincoln, carrying out the plan presented to readers of The Review in the issue of August 27, 1914. The new additions will more than double the present plant.

The three large houses will each be 60x500 feet, and the two smaller ones will each be 26x225 feet. They will be of the new style Moninger construction. The heating plant of the establishment will be materially increased. There are already three of the large houses and one of the small size at the wholesale range.

The first of the large houses is to be finished, according to the contract, by May 15, the next within thirty days, and the other four are to follow as soon as possible. When the five houses are completed the force of employees of Gullett & Sons will be more than doubled. There are at present about twenty men working in the three houses.

An idea of the extent of the work may be obtained when it is stated that the J. C. Moninger Co. has a contract with a local contractor to haul sixty carloads of material to the building site.

Besides the five new houses, Gullett & Sons will build a refrigerating plant.

BOSTON CLUB MEETING.

There was an attendance of 120 March 16 at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting. Three new members were elected. Eber Holmes gave an excellent talk on roses, outdoors and indoors, which was followed by a good discussion The W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, showed some fine French hydrangeas. Charles Cooper received a cultural report of merit for specimen clover, and James Wheeler the same award for a splendid vase of yellow marguerites. President Bartsch spoke on the S. A. F. meeting at Chicago. It was voted to hold the club's picnic in July.

W. N. C.

Woonsocket, S. D.—A. Richardson, who left the office of postmaster March 1, is now devoting his time to his greenhouse business.

Cincinnati, O.—Charles Burtschey, a member of the firm of Burtschey Bros., St. Bernard florists, has private plans for a residence costing about $6,000, to be built at Bertus and Delmar avenues.

Pawnee City, Neb.—J. E. Atkinson, proprietor of the Northedge Nurseries & Greenhouses, has been confined to his bed most of the time during the last year. The establishment has been in the charge of his daughter, Miss Mildred Atkinson.

Libertyville, Ill.—Mrs. E. C. Kohout, wife of Jos. Kohout, underwent a serious operation at her home. The operation was performed by Dr. Blouke from Chicago and Dr. Beebe from Antioch, Ill. From all indications the operation was a successful one.

La Fayette, Ind.—Miss Mary Scott Andress and Mrs. John E. Burke will open a flower shop in the new Hotel Fowler April 20. The shop will be located on the first floor, with entrance on Fourth street. Both ladies have been associated in the music business at the Claypool music store, on Main street.

Augusta, Ga.—Maurice Fuld, of the Knight & Struck Co., New York, lectured here March 12, on "Roses."

Joplin, Mo.—The annual rose show is to be held at the Country Club about June 1. W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, has consented to act as chairman of the judges' committee.

Yonkers, N. Y.—James Macdonald, who has been associated with his brother, William Macdonald, in his shop at 2 Main street, has opened a store at 442 South Broadway. It is known as the Broadway Flower Shop.

Michigan City, Ind.—A. C. Reicher, who has combined a confectioners' and florists' business at his store in the Orpheum block for the last few years, has moved to a new location, at 607 Franklin street. He has sublet his former store to a milliner.

New Albany, Ind.—Fred Bettman and William Hammersmith, the driver of his wagon at the time of its collision with a train of the Pennsylvania Railway Co. January 2, at East Sixteenth and Main streets, have filed suits in the Circuit court against the company. Mr. Bettman sues for $200 for damages to his wagon and Mr. Hammersmith for $3,000 on account of personal injuries. Negligence on the part of the railroad employees is charged.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Although the weather is pleasant, with a great deal of sunshine, the winds are sharp and it is cold and wintry. Business is fairly good. The great percentage of trade, however, is funeral work. The warm sunshine has brought in a large quantity of bulbous stock. Much of it, however, is wasted, as there is little demand for daffodils, narcissi and tulips, and these cannot be used in funeral work as readily as carnations and roses. Sweet peas are extra fine. The orchid varieties bring fancy prices; the common varieties, however, are only fair, and are quite cheap. There is little demand for valley during Lent, although the supply is abundant and the quality good. Orchids are almost forgotten. Freesias are abundant, as is mignonette. Bulbous stock, both cut and in pots, is being pushed in order to reduce the accumulation, and other cut stock receives secondary consideration. Roses are somewhat scarce in the choice varieties, but medium grades are plentiful. Beauties are expensive. The market is flooded with all kinds of plants; cyclamens, primroses, daffodils, tulips, lilac trees, azaleas, cinerarias, hydrangeas, spiræas, rhododendrons, hyacinths, etc. Cut ferns, asparagus, smilax and galax are all plentiful. Violets are showing the effect of spring sunshine, for they are smaller and begin to drop petals.

Various Notes.

S. Crosby has severed his connection with the Lenox Flower Shop and has gone to Cleveland, O.

The branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son is showing some excellent potted valley and fine spiræas and cyclamens.

Felix Albert is suffering with an attack of lumbago, which is painful and keeps him away from business. This is the second attack he has had this winter.

F. J. Baum, of Kingsley street, furnished Boston ferns of extra fine quality for the spring opening of Hens & Kelly.

Edward Slattery spent a few days in New York city recently, doing some Easter buying.

Mrs. Edwin C. Armbrust has gone to Southern Pines, N. C., to spend a few weeks with her mother, who is a semi-invalid.

The opening of the Walkover shoe store called for numerous floral designs, such as floral shoes, done in daffodils and violets and crowned with Ward roses and yellow daisies; floral horseshoes, baskets and fancy lilac and azalea plants.

L. Neubeck has been having some trouble with boils.

S. A. Anderson's Rebstock store has been doing a large amount of funeral work recently.

Because of business depression, the department stores are cutting down expenses in connection with spring opening decorations. Instead of using large quantities of cut flowers and flowering plants, they use southern smilax and palms, and a few Boston ferns. Hens & Kelly used quantities of southern smilax and palms. The Lenox Flower Shop had the decorations at this place.

William Baker has resigned his position with S. A. Anderson and is now with Chas. Sandiford, of Central Park.

David Scott, of Corfu, is shipping some fine carnations, mignonette, snapdragons and myosotis to this market.

James J. Bates, formerly of this city, has advertised his greenhouse and store in Akron for sale.

Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, is growing some good yellow and pink snapdragons. He also has a first-class strain of pansies.

The Delaware park conservatories are attracting large crowds. Primroses, azaleas, cinerarias and bulbous stock are on display. The bedding plants for spring work are in a clean and healthy condition. E. C. A.

LANCASTER, PA.

A Club Jaunt.

The florists residing along the Philadelphia pike were the recipients of a visit from the Lancaster county florists March 13.

The first to be called on was Maurice J. Brinton, at Christiana, where carnations and lilies are specialties. His houses, 40x200 feet, filled with carnations, were excellent. Houses of Mrs. Ward were exceptionally fine. He sends a daily supply of Formosa and giganteum lilies to the Philadelphia market the year around. J. Rutter Hess, at Gap, devotes most of his space to carnations, and flowers of fine quality are sent to the Philadelphia market. Large quantities of vegetables and bedding plants are grown to supply the local market.

Next stopping at J. Ira Ranck's, at Vintage, the standard varieties of carnations were found in good condition. Quality sweet peas are also grown here. At Walter Denlinger's carnations are the specialty and his stock ranks with the best the county produces.

At Paradise, Ira H. Landis' houses were visited. His carnations show evidence of a heavy cut throughout the winter. Enchantress Supreme, White Wonder and Mrs. Ward lead in their respective colors. Benora, Eureka and Yellow Prince are all producing high grade blooms. A wonderful crop of freesias has just been gathered by Mr. Landis, who is one of the largest importers of the bulbs of this fragrant little flower. A house of calendulas, also, were worthy of note.

Stopping next at the place of Charles M. Weaver, we found his sweet pea houses filled with blooms. Mr. Weaver is the most extensive sweet pea grower in the county. His houses of mignonette and calendula are producing blooms of the finest quality. At Elmer J. Weaver's, adjoining the establishment of his brother Charles, are houses of carnations of which none finer have been seen this season in Lancaster county. His new white variety is being watched by all the local florists, for it surely looks like a winner, and we predict for it a great future. Mr. Weaver annually plants acres to asters and is now planting thousands in paper bands.

On the third Thursday of this month the local club will be privileged to listen to an address by Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, a man in the front ranks of the florists' business today. His subject will be "Are You Ready?" Every florist in the county is invited to be present. H. K. R.

Champaign, Ill.—For an all-around good red rose, Gus. Johnson thinks there is nothing better than Richmond.

Peoria, Ill.—Having succeeded to the business of the Rue Floral Co., the name of the corporation has been changed to Siebenthal & Nelson, Inc.

Moline, Ill.—The stock of H. C. Klehm, at Twenty-sixth avenue and Sixteenth street, was sold March 4 at a sheriff's sale to satisfy a note held by the Peoples Bank of Moline. The bank bid in the property for a little less than $500, and it will be sold out by Mr. Klehm under an arrangement with the bank. It is understood there are a number of creditors in addition to the bank. There will be no immediate change in the management of the business. Mr. Klehm's lease runs for two years more.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—At the quarterly meeting of the Oklahoma Florists' Association, at the Lee-Huckins hotel March 1, a committee was appointed to complete plans for the state flower show to be held here in November. The committee will act under the direction of President George Stiles and C. E. Batten. It was at the same meeting decided to protest to the commissioner of public property in this city against the reckless trimming of trees by city employees and property owners, which amounted, it was said, to "tree butchery."

Clinton, Ill.—Business at the new store of Andrew Peterson has been retarded as a result of the fixtures going to Clinton, Ia., by mistake.

Florence, Kan.—J. H. Shaw & Son have planted in lettuce the two houses, each 22x90 feet, which they built last fall. They now have 11,000 square feet of glass.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—The Kemble Floral Co. has remodeled the building at 119 High avenue, east, and added a small greenhouse over the rear part, on a level with the second floor. The company will conduct a store here as a downtown annex to the greenhouse range on C avenue, east.

Champaign, Ill.—Thos. Franks & Son are going to try out Mrs. Charles Russell rose at the large range on the outskirts of town. At the greenhouses at University avenue and Randolph street, two houses will be filled with geraniums in 4-inch pots when the Easter stock is cleared out. Although funeral work has kept all hands on the jump for the last two weeks, collections are vexingly slow. George B. Franks is serving his fourth year in the city council, "for the fun of it," but he turned down the nomination and probable election as mayor this spring. Thomas Franks, now past his seventieth year, has been confined to the house with ill health since last fall, when he spent some time in the hospital.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market during the last week was of a decidedly Lenten character, lacking life, dull at times to stagnation, a harvest season for the large buyers. The usual conditions before Easter prevail, but the prophecy of a good Easter is general.

American Beauties advanced slightly as the week closed, and continue to hold the general rose market on a steady keel. In fact, one of the prophetic pioneers says present prices are even higher than they will be at Easter, because of the increased shipments then, which are inevitable. Hadley grows in popularity. So do Sunburst, Radiance, Russell, Shawyer and the double Killarneys. In fact, the market was never so well filled with roses in variety and nearly all of the novelties have come to stay.

The carnation shipments are increasing rapidly, and prices are indeed reasonable. For the smaller flowers but 75 cents per hundred is asked. Splendid values are obtainable at $1.50, and the novelties seldom rise to above $3 per hundred.

Of bulbous flowers there is a constant oversupply, and anything imperfect cannot be moved at all. This applies especially to freesias, tulips, daffodils and narcissi. The southern stock has not begun to come in large quantities. Some of the double tulips arriving are unexcelled. They should sell at twice quoted values.

No one seems to want wallflowers or snapdragons. Only the Spencer sweet peas are appreciated. Pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, mignonette, all are neglected.

These are harvest days for the street men; valley and violets at every corner. Wholesale quotations for violets are unmentionable. Single violets are in fair demand, and do not reach the street outlet. The aristocratic gardenia, however, has been forced to seek this method of distribution. There is a large amount of inferior stock arriving.

The lilacs are all just marking time until Easter draws near. There is a large supply. Acacia will last until after Easter. No uplift has come yet in orchids. The large flowers are being saved for the holiday call.

Bowling.

The following scores were made on the alleys March 11:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
P. Jacobson	161	173	180
C. W. Scott	176	170	160
H. C. Riedel	174	160	177
A. J. Guttman	187	172	181
W. P. Ford	155	191	177

Various Notes.

George Baldwin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., the orchid specialist, was in the city Saturday, March 13.

Jack Trepel, manager for Joseph Trepel, 1070 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, was married last week to Miss Mae Komicke, of Flatbush.

C. C. Trepel has secured for a term of five years, from May 1, the store at 57 West Twenty-eighth street, the present headquarters of H. E. Froment. Mr. Froment will occupy on that date his large new premises at 148 West Twenty-eighth street, midway between Sixth and Seventh avenues.

P. J. Smith will move May 1 to the big store at 131 West Twenty-eighth street, now occupied by Traendly & Schenck. Traendly & Schenck will probably locate in a large store on Sixth avenue between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets.

J. K. Allen's fine store is all ready for occupancy. It has every modern convenience, and a tree-shaded yard for summer comfort.

Samuel Woodrow has secured several large contracts for landscape work this spring.

M. A. Bowe had many floral designs for the Joseph O'Connell funeral last week.

Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, Inc., had on exhibition March 13 an unnamed crimson seedling carnation of splendid size, calyx and strength of stem, the sale of which they will control.

B. F. Farr, of Wyomissing, Pa., lectured March 11, on "Iris and Peonies," before the Garden City Club, at Garden City, L. I.

With the many floral pieces sent to Tarrytown for the funeral of Mrs. J. D. Rockefeller, Alex McConnell and Siebrecht & Son were especially busy March 13.

Milandre Bros. are making extensive alterations in their store at Broadway and One-hundred-and-third street, placing it in the same grade as their handsome headquarters at Seventy-second street. They have four greenhouses at Woodside stocked with Easter plants. J. Austin Shaw.

Incorporation papers have been issued to Henry Hart, Inc., to do business in realty, flowers and plants, with a capital stock of $15,000. The incorporators are B. N. Cohenno, M. P. Doyle and F. E. Karelsen, Jr.

MALDEN, MASS.

Neil E. Boyle, whose roses have for years had an excellent reputation in the Boston market, had a visitors' day at his greenhouses March 14, when a large number of growers and others identified with the cut flower industry were present. Mr. Boyle grows six houses of roses. One is devoted to Richmond, which he still considers the best red; another to Mrs. Aaron Ward, which comes a little slow in winter, but is a good seller. Sunburst in another house looked first-class and will be more heavily grown another season. Double White Killarney proves slow in winter compared with White Killarney. Killarney Brilliant has done well and, with Double White Killarney, will be grown as summer roses in houses now occupied by Easter lilies. Ophelia will be planted the coming season. No black spot, spider or mildew could be found anywhere and the whole stock was most creditable.

Giganteum lilies to the number of 10,000 in 5½-inch pots were in perfect condition. Many of the buds were just turning white. Plants averaged four to seven buds each. Some Formosa lilies also are grown for cutting. I failed to see any disease among the lilies. W. N. C.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business has been good during the last week. Flowers of all kinds seem to be plentiful. The prices of carnations went up a little in the middle of the week, but have now returned to the old level. The prices of other flowers remain about as usual. Everyone appears to expect a good Easter business.

Various Notes.

H. A. Jahn was found busy as usual when called on. He does a lot of landscape work, but says business in that line has been slow. Some orders for which he bought stock in the fall have been canceled, leaving him with a surplus of materials.

Julius the Florist has been busy all the week. He has had a good number of funeral orders.

A number of the local florists expect to go to New York this week to attend the international flower show, to be held at the Grand Central Palace.

Richard E. Nofftz expected to have to move this spring, but as the owner of the building has changed his reconstruction plans, Mr. Nofftz will remain at the old stand. W. M. P.

Montvale, Mass.—William H. Ward carried part of his carnations over last season and his Beacon and White Enchantress show that it has paid to do so, for it would be hard to find benches of plants carrying such a wealth of long-stemmed flowers.

Wakefield, Mass.—Charles C. Ball, the selectmen and the light board have been holding conferences to settle the question of the amount of the damages to be paid Mr. Ball for the injury done to his greenhouse plants by escaping gas. While the figures have not been made public, it is understood that the damages asked by Mr. Ball and the sum that the selectmen have expressed themselves as willing to pay are far apart, and there is little likelihood of a settlement being reached without litigation.

Thompson, Conn.—O. R. Hermanson, formerly manager of the greenhouses of C. S. Andem, at Putnam, Conn., has gone into business for himself, conducting the Thompson School Greenhouses.

Baldwinsville, Mass.—The Baldwinsville Cucumber Growers' Association has been formed by the greenhouse growers of that vegetable, for the purpose of coöperating in the growing and marketing of their product and of improving the conditions of the industry in the vicinity. The officers are: President, Alanson R. Paine; vice-president, Charles Steward, of Royalston; secretary and treasurer, Dr. Walter F. Robie; executive committee, C. H. Smith, of Athol; W. W. Lord, of Winchendon; Charles Steward, of Royalston; Sumner Morley and John Bass, of Baldwinsville.

OBITUARY

William B. Paterson.

W. B. Paterson, one of the old and widely known southern florists, died suddenly of heart failure at Montgomery, Ala., at 10 a. m., March 16.

William Burns Paterson was born in Tullibody, Clackmannanshire, Scotland, February 9, 1849. As a boy he worked on Lord Abercrombie's estate near his home, emigrating when only 17 years of age. He landed at New York in 1866 with 90 cents as his worldly capital. Not finding employment, he worked along the Erie canal as a driver, reaching Buffalo, from which point he walked to Omaha, Neb. Not finding occupation to his liking, he walked back to Oswego, N. Y., later working his way to Washington, D. C., where he was employed in the navy yard while accumulating capital for another western trip. He finally landed at Greensboro, Ala., where he opened a school for colored people. It was at this time he met Miss Margaret Bingham Flack, of Canton, O., who was sent to Selma, Ala., as a missionary by the Methodist church in its efforts to educate the negro race. They were married in 1879.

In 1887 Mr. Paterson and his family removed to Montgomery, where, in 1894, a florists' business was started. Success followed; the business grew quite rapidly. He educated his sons at Auburn Polytechnic school and, as fast as they completed the course, took them into the business, which now is one of the largest of its kind in the south. Mrs. Paterson died in 1904. Five children survive: W. B. Paterson, Jr., J. P. Paterson, J. H. Paterson, Wallace B. Paterson and Mrs. R. D. Wilson. The business will be continued as an estate under the name of Rosemont Gardens.

Mr. Paterson was a member of the S. A. F., having joined with two of his sons in 1911. Forty years ago he founded the Alabama State Normal School for Colored Children and became its president, a position he held until his death.

Ernst Manthey, Sr.

Ernst Manthey, Sr., one of the oldest florists in the vicinity of Cincinnati, died at St. Bernard March 6, at the age of 77. He was a familiar figure in the old days of the Sixth street flower market. Born in Prussia in 1838, he worked in the Royal Gardens of Sans Souci and served in the Royal Guards of Berlin. He emigrated to this country in 1863, married, and started in the florists' business in St. Bernard in 1866.

Mr. Manthey had ten children, seven of whom, with his widow, survive him: Ernst, Jr., in the florists' business on Beecher avenue, St. Bernard; Charles, the seedsman of Fourth street, Cincinnati; Robert, with the Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati; Albert J., in the coal and feed business in Carthage; Arthur, who will continue his father's business; Clara, the Carthage pike confectioner, and Mrs. Ida Voller, wife of the yardmaster of the Big Four at Sharonville. There are ten grandchildren.

Mr. Manthey served for eleven years in the St. Bernard council, six years on the board of education and six years as water works trustee, and was for the last twenty-five years a director of the St. Bernard Loan & Building Association.

T. Lee Adams.

T. Lee Adams, 66 years old, president of the T. Lee Adams Seed Co., the oldest seed house in Kansas City, Mo., died recently at his home, 14 East Thirty-fifth street, following a two years' illness. A year ago Mr. Adams went to the Pacific coast for his health and this winter to Hot Springs, Ark.

Mr. Adams was born March 25, 1849, in Waynesville, O. He went to Kansas City in 1873 and identified himself with the Turnbull, Reynolds & Allen Seed Co. In 1881 he started in business for himself. Mr. Adams was a member of the Commercial Club, the Knife and Fork Club and the Rotary Club. For twenty-nine years he had been a member of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Adams is survived by his wife and a brother, David S. Adams, of Kansas City. The funeral was held at the First Presbyterian church, Kansas City. Burial was at Waynesville, O.

Edwin T. Denham.

Edwin T. Denham, aged 66 years, an old-time florist of Gloversville, N. Y., died at his home, 16 Third avenue, March 6, as the result of an attack of heart disease.

Mr. Denham was born at Plymouth, England, June 19, 1849. He located at Gloversville in 1869. Mr. Denham was married twice. In December, 1869, he was married to Miss Emma Dodge. January 18, 1876, he was married to Miss Esther Saltsman, who survives him.

Besides his wife, Mr. Denham is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Delbert L. Bradt; one brother, Fred D. Denham, and one nephew, Dr. Harry Denham, all of Gloversville.

When Mr. Denham first came to Gloversville he was a leather worker by trade, but later he engaged in the florists' business. Mr. Denham was a charter member of the Sons of St. George. He was also a member of St. James' Lutheran church. He was a member of the board of health at one time and was elected clerk of the board. In January, 1914, he was appointed assessor, which position he held at the time of his death.

Edward F. Quinn.

The recent death of Edward F. Quinn, of Norwich, N. Y., following operations for appendicitis and consequent complications, came as a severe shock to his friends, who, although realizing his serious condition, had earnestly hoped for his final recovery.

Mr. Quinn was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1859. At the age of 16 he came to America and settled at Skaneateles, N. Y., where he was engaged in the florists' business until he went to Norwich, in 1883, and erected his first greenhouse there as gardener for the late George Rider, on South Broad street. In 1901 he bought the Manning homestead, on East Main street, to which he added adjoining property by purchase. He built six large greenhouses and established a business that developed rapidly.

He was a member of St. Paul's church, and the founder of St. Paul's cemetery. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Paul's church, of Norwich Council, Knights of Columbus, No. 211, and of Division No. 1, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

May 25, 1887, Mr. Quinn married Miss Jennie Sullivan, of Norwich, who, with two daughters, Mrs. George J. Devine and Miss Regina M. Quinn, survives him. He leaves two brothers, James, of Kildare, Ireland, and John, of Skaneateles.

Funeral services were held at the residence and followed by solemn high mass at St. Paul's church. The floral tributes were the most elaborate and beautiful ever seen in Norwich, conspicuous among them being contributions from florist friends of the deceased in Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Rome. The pallbearers were William H. Sullivan, Michael H. Sullivan, Merton M. Holmes, Martin W. Dolan and Michael Finigan, of Norwich; Peter Crowe, Henry Martin and Frank McGowan, of Utica.

Albert Scott.

The body of Albert Scott, proprietor of the Willow Hill Greenhouses, at West Roxbury, Mass., who has been missing since late in November, after writing a letter to a business associate that he intended to commit suicide, was found March 14 in some bushes in the rear of an ice-house on Wendell's road, Quincy, by three boys, who at once notified the police.

Those who were among Mr. Scott's most intimate friends say that he was naturally of a somewhat melancholy temperament, and before his disappearance was dissatisfied at the way his business was going, although he had a good trade. He had been suffering from a nervous breakdown prior to his disappearance. Identification was made by Chester I. Campbell, manager of the Mechanics building, Boston, who is now mayor of Quincy.

Mr. Scott grew marguerites, pompon and single chrysanthemums, peonies and miscellaneous stock, selling considerable at retail and the rest at the Boston Flower Exchange, where he was a stallholder. Before taking over the Willow Hill Greenhouses, he had a retail store on Beacon street, Boston. Mr. Scott is survived by his widow. W. N. C.

Henry Dupke.

Henry Dupke, proprietor of the greenhouses at Thirty-seventh and Chestnut streets, Louisville, Ky., for many years, died at Sts. Mary and Elizabeth hospital Saturday, March 6, following a surgical operation. He was born in Germany seventy-nine years ago and came to America when he was 51 years old. He is survived by a son, Henry Dupke, Jr., and a daughter, Miss Elizabeth Dupke. Funeral services were held March 7.

William Travers.

William Travers, for some years the proprietor of a greenhouse establishment near Calvary cemetery, at Laurel Hill, N. Y., died March 10, at his home, 123 Hobson avenue, Laurel Hill, in his forty-fourth year. He was born and lived all his life in the vicinity of Laurel Hill. He did much of the gardening work at Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Travers married Miss Hanna Newman, of Greenpoint, who survives. Three daughters, Hannah, Lauretta and Agnes, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie Glinnen, also survive him. He was a member of Herbert Council, C. B. L., and St. Raphael's church, Blissville, where requiem mass was celebrated March 13. Interment was in Calvary cemetery.

H. J. Beer.

H. J. Beer, of Marshfield, Wis., died March 11, after a year's illness with tuberculosis. He is survived by a widow, one son and a daughter, Miss Martha Beer, who doubtless will continue the business.

Walter Robinson.

Walter Robinson, known to many in the trade at New York as gardener on the Browkaw estate at Great Neck, L. I., took his own life March 13, by leaping from a third-story window of a sanitarium at 293 Central Park west, New York city.

GREENWICH, CONN.

There was a goodly attendance of members at the monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society March 12. Seven new members were elected and seven names were proposed for membership. Visitors present were Alexander Cummings, Jr., of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., and A. L. Rickards, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York. The entertainment committee made its final report, was discharged by the president and accorded a rising vote of thanks from the members. It was voted to hold the summer exhibition in June, at Greenwich, Conn. The annual fall exhibition will be held in Stamford, Conn., November 2 to 4. An interesting feature of the meeting was a paper read by Alexander Cummings, Jr. "Rose Culture Under Glass and in the Garden" was the subject chosen. A lively discussion was started after the lecture. Cultural hints and the respective merits of the newer roses for outdoor culture were discussed to the advantage of the members. Mr. Cummings was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his interesting paper.

The competition for the prizes offered by James Stuart brought out a wonderful lot of choice flowers and plants. The judges awarded the first prize to A. Wynne for a fine vase of Gerbera Jamesoni, and the second to W. J. Seeley for a fine specimen Lilac Marie Legraye. The judges also made honorable mention of A. Wynne for schizanthus; honorable mention of William Whittin for Formosa lilies; honorable mention of William Graham for display of cyclamen, and vote of thanks for Carnation Princess Dagmar and vase of Mrs. Russell roses; honorable mention of Robert Williamson for a fine specimen plant of Chorizema splendens and vote of thanks for a new cineraria, Sutton's Reading Gem, a type intermediate between hybrida and stellata that should prove a useful pot plant; honorable mention of Robert Allen for specimen plant of Dendrobium Wardianum and specimen plant of Dendrobium nobile from Louis Whittman, also a vote of thanks for specimen plant in bloom of Crimson Rambler; vote of thanks to J. B. McArdle for Hyacinth Gertrude; vote of thanks to P. W. Popp for Keizerskroon tulips.

The next meeting will be held April 9. A. L. Rickards offers a cash prize of $10 for the best exhibit at this meeting. A fine display may be expected. P. W. P.

The Limit.

Could anything be more fascinating than the daily reports of winter baseball?

Answer: Yes; a seed catalogue.

To test the notion, we read a column about the trial of the baseball cause célèbre yesterday.

Then we read two pages of a seed catalogue.

The seed stuff was gripping.

"Yes," said Brown, "I have a wonderful dog. Only this morning, when I came down to breakfast after a sleepless night, and forgot to give him his usual tidbit, he went out into the garden, pulled up a bunch of flowers and laid them at my feet."

"What were they?" inquired his friend.

"Forget-me-nots," answered Brown, as he hurriedly left the room.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was up to all expectations. There was considerable funeral work, which is the leading line during the Lenten season, and good weather helped to make the transient trade good. Stock is not so plentiful, which was indicated by the lack of dry goods store sales. Pot plants and baskets have sold better than usual during this Lenten season. The stores are making good displays of these, which, no doubt, helps their sale.

American Beauties still are scarce and prices are high. The supply of roses has increased a little, especially of Richmond and Killarney. White roses are exceptionally hard to get. Carnations are more plentiful. The white ones were held back for St. Patrick's day, but the other colors have been going down in price. Bulbous stock was not so plentiful last week, but lilies of all kinds are abundant. The sweet pea supply is heavy and the good stock sells readily.

Various Notes.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is receiving a large cut of carnations and roses from its greenhouses at Pleasant Hill. A heavy run of funeral work has been noted during the last two weeks.

Patrick Larkin, of the Larkin Floral Co., has finished installing the new icebox in the window and it is a big improvement to the store.

James B. Masson was busy last week with about as much funeral work as he could handle. He had his greenhouses in good shape and has a general line of pot plants, bedding stock and cut flowers.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business as being better than they had expected, especially in the supply department.

Arthur Newell says the prospect for Easter is such that he looks for a larger business than ever before.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports that the general run of Easter stock will be better than in any previous year. An increased number of pot plants is being finished.

Adolph D. Mohr is pleased with the way his pot plants are selling.

Stevens & Larkin are bringing in a larger quantity of carnations of good quality. Practically their whole place is devoted to this crop.

The Forest Hill cemetery has its new greenhouse completed and is busy filling it with bedding stock.

August Luther, Jr., is devoting his new greenhouse to pot plants and bedding stock. He is surprised at the amount of retail business there is in his new location, especially in the pot plant line.

T. J. Noll & Co. are selling a large number of pots. In two different sales they sold 45,000 pots to the park board, and 38,000 to the R. A. Long Farm Greenhouses. W. J. B.

Durand, Mich.—N. E. Wooton reports that business has been unusually good with the Wooton Floral Co. since the first of the year, and the indications are that Easter trade will be brisk. An addition to the range has just been completed. Mr. Wooton expects to erect another house, 34x100 feet, early in the spring.

The Review brings results.

FLORISTS who send plants through the mails should read the article in this issue entitled "Must Mark Plant Packages."

EXPERIENCE seems to show that freesia should be brought in between Christmas and St. Valentine's day. Later, it scarcely pays.

BUSINESS cannot be bad when such great quantities of stock are being cleared—it surely would be boom times if prices were not low in such heavily loaded markets.

THE flower business is not highly systematized; the team play between producing and selling ends often is poor. Better organization would mean less confusion and more money.

No noteworthy results ever were obtained except at the cost of great and persistent effort. When you see a florist building up a big business on sound lines, you may be sure he has earned his success.

"EVERYBODY is looking for the big buyers these days; if it was not for my prompt paying they wouldn't look at me at all." The speaker was a florist who has discovered one of the sure roads to commercial standing.

THE Office of Information in the U. S. Department of Agriculture has taken up and is carrying on the work inaugurated some years ago by the National Council of Horticulture, now defunct. A series of articles on a wide variety of amateur gardening subjects is being supplied to the secular press.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

Klein, L. H. A., Towson, Md.
Elsner, John J., Indianapolis.
Haasch, E., Milwaukee, Wis.
Wooton Floral Co., Durand, Mich.
Beck, T. R., Sioux City, Ia.
Weaver, Wm., McAlester, Okla.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

THE FUNERAL THAT FAILED.

For months the calamity howlers have been trying hard to hang a "Rest in Peace" wreath on the prosperity of this trade—they have been free with their dismal predictions. "Yes, it's fair now, but just you wait till 'so and so,' the bottom will drop out of business then." But it hasn't dropped. In the autumn it was "after Christmas" that the blow was to fall; then it was "in Lent." But, take it by and large, the flower business has been better since the middle of January than it usually is; better, certainly, than at any previous time since the European war broke out. And now we are rolling up our sleeves, and our trouser-legs, preparatory to tackling the big business of the year, the spring season, the time when every florist finds the rapidly lengthening days too short for his needs.

It simply is a case of a funeral that failed—nothing more.

FAIR RETURNS.

How much return can an advertiser reasonably expect for each dollar spent for space? Remember that for 15 cents a commission man sells only $1—he sends the grower 85 cents.

On the little liner ad, one insertion in The Review, I sold 4000 geraniums, at 3 cents each. I consider this a good record, taking in $120 on an ad that cost 20 cents.—Theo. D. Kuebler, Evansville, Ind., March 8, 1915.

PURELY PERSONAL.

We are seeing the sights around San Francisco and the exposition; a great treat coming to conventionites. Dan MacRorie has an heiress. Were out to see her. Some girl!

Mr. and Mrs. McKellar.

THE LILIES FOR EASTER.

At this date attention always is turned to the prospect for lilies for Easter—not that there has in recent years been any shortage, but because the lily is the big item of the big day.

With Easter two weeks earlier than last season, the growers who must wait until the Christmas plants are gone before they have bench room for lilies of course must use extra heat; if the sun does not provide it, the steam pipes must do so. Reports indicate that a good many lilies will need much heat, but a large part of even the late lots will be sure to get in.

The growers who follow mums with lilies are in a much easier position; they have from one month to two months more time than the man who is short of houseroom until Christmas. These growers are on Easy street.

There does not seem to be any danger of a shortage of lilies this Easter. Those who do not grow them can get all they want, by speaking in time, in almost any wholesale market.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is considerable variation in the reports regarding market conditions in the last week. Apparently some of the houses have had better business than others, and from day to day the business has fluctuated more than was the case before Lent. There has been an abundance of stock. It seems that city trade has been a bit better than it usually is during March, but the country orders have been uncertain, and somewhat less in number than they were the first week in the month. Bulbous stock is abundant everywhere and there are increased supplies of roses, with the result that a good many customers are using home flowers wherever they can and sending to Chicago for less than usual. This condition will change promptly with the passing of the season for bulbous stock.

Roses are more abundant than has been the case at any time since the Christmas crops went off. Beauties are improving in quality and a few growers are cutting fine stock in some quantity. Mrs. Russell is both abundant and good. Shawyer and Killarney Brilliant also are offered in fine form. Sunburst is the best of the season. Some of the Killarney crops show good color, but others still are faded. There are not many Richmond, and Milady is making a little extra money for those who have it.

The increase in the supply of carnations is not so great as the increase in rose crops, but there have been enough. White was short while the growers were accumulating stock for St. Patrick's day, but there proved to be rather more heldover whites than were needed, although strictly fresh white sold well at the opening of this week.

All bulbous stock is overabundant and prices have fallen to the lowest of the season. Really good tulips are the best property of the lot, and Paper Whites about the poorest, although freesia probably has suffered as much as anything; freesias that were readily salable at $5 per hundred before Valentine's day now are difficult to clean up at $10 per thousand. Valley also is a glut, so much so that peddlers are offering it in the growers' original bunches. Lilies of all kinds are abundant, Easter, calla and rubrum, making low prices like the rest of the stock.

The increase in the supply of Spencer sweet peas has given violets a still further setback; it never has been more difficult to return the growers a fair average price for even the best violets. The old grandiflora type of sweet peas no longer is worth growing after the Spencers come in. Orchids may be said to be the only scarce item. There are quite a few good gardenias.

There is nothing new in the green goods situation; enough of everything except asparagus strings, which are not always easily comeatable.

Easter Prospects.

The prospect for Easter is the principal subject for conversation these

CUT FLOWER DEPARTMENT

LILIES

FOR EASTER DELIVERY

We offer the famous Randall grade of lilies—the lilies of the same grower whose stock has given such splendid satisfaction in the past. True Longiflorum Giganteum, grown as a crop to follow Mums (which means plenty of time—no hard forcing required, like where Lilies follow a Christmas crop), and in perfect condition. Will be packed at the greenhouses in wood boxes, 100 in a box. Guaranteed the best in Chicago. $15.00, $12.00 and $10.00 per 100. How many of each grade shall we book you for?

Pussy Willows

You will need these with your Easter plants. We offer the kind that has very large, silvery white catkins—not the small wild stock usually seen on the market.

ROSES FOR ALL

We can assure you of fine Roses for Easter—splendid color and good heads on all lengths of stem. If you order only part of your roses of us, you will wish you had given us your entire order. We offer all varieties.

CARNATIONS

It is well understood Randall handles more Carnations than any other house in the west. It's to your advantage to order where the supply is largest, for the assortment is complete and you are sure of getting what you want.

We have a large supply of fine Sweet Peas

BULBOUS STOCK

You can call on us for anything in the way of bulbous stock. A larger supply this Easter than usual.

VIOLETS! VIOLETS!!

Violets with us will be in larger supply than usual this Easter and the quality unusully good. Push them. Order enough.

days. Rather more than the usual uncertainty prevails. The retailers are confident there will be plenty of stock; they are not placing orders except on their own terms. They rely on pot plants, of which the supply undeniably is increasing, and on the fact that there has been no shortage of cut flowers at any recent Easter.

From the wholesalers' point of view the situation is far less clear. It is well known that many lilies are late, demanding such hard forcing that it is impossible they should make good stock. Also, there are the usual number of short lilies, which will answer the needs of only the cheapest class of trade. However, it is thought there can be no material shortage of lilies. On the other hand, it would take the finest kind of spring weather to make any oversupply of Beauties. And, should there be such fine weather, it would finish off crops of roses that should be at their best in the last week of March. Carnations are nowhere near so plentiful as a year ago and it does not seem possible that there can be as many for Easter. On the other hand, there will be more bulbous stock and more violets. The prospect is good enough so that prices in no respect are higher than last year and on some items are a shade lower.

There is every confidence of a large shipping business for Easter. Orders are coming in, together with many inquiries. Those who ship pot plants already have considerable business booked.

A Check Casher Caught.

Walter Adams, 1021 Rush street, became suspicious March 14, when he received a telephone order for $3 worth of flowers, to be delivered. The man who telephoned said he was Dr. Ray E. Bardeman, Jr., and asked that the messenger also be given $17 change, since he intended to pay for the flowers with a check for $20. The clerk sent the flowers and the $17. He also notified the police. Detectives waited until the transaction was completed, then arrested "Dr. Bardeman." He proved to be Ray Hamilton, 29 years old. He was identified by eight other victims of similar swindles. Hamilton, the police say, has confessed.

At the store of the George Wittbold Co., on Clark street, the same man represented himself as Dr. Alven Nelson. He ordered $5 worth of flowers, presented a check for $20 and asked for change. Victor Young, the manager, was suspicious and sent the check to Louis Wittbold, who promptly started an investigation, but the man had fled.

A new, heavy truck soon will be plying between Wilmette and Chicago, carrying the name and stock of Ernest Rober, who expects the investment will reduce expenses and add to the facility with which he handles his steadily increasing business.

A new auto delivery car has been purchased by Frank J. Kral, 1907 South Halsted street.

In the near future a new automobile will assist Miss F. Weissgerber, 3451 North Hamilton avenue, in making deliveries.

The Bohannon Floral Co., on Monroe street, finds its new auto a great help. The machine has been run just long enough to prove its indispensability.

Various Notes.

A lease of the attractive southwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Grand boulevard is being made by Charlotte Megchelsen, 4654 Grand boulevard, who will move from her present location to the new quarters in the near future. Several florists have had their eyes on this corner. Miss Megchelsen has been for many years at her present address and has done a steady and prosperous business which should respond promptly to the stimulus of a better location, a larger store, new fixtures and a larger stock.

Baskets for Easter

Easter day calls for something special for every cut flower or plant buyer. The demand for baskets has increased from year to year, and this year will be greater than ever. You can sell a basket with almost every cut flower or plant order, Mr. Florist, so get busy now.

WE CAN FILL YOUR ORDER

Our styles are original and finish the latest—green, brown, blue, fumed oak, antique green, two-tone in all its variations and our new "SUNRAY" finish in many combinations.

WE ARE SPECIALISTS IN OUR LINE

We do nothing but design, build and sell baskets. We excel in that one thing. As to whether we have chosen our proper vocation, we will leave it to you and point with pride to our record. We are known as the foremost basket house in the United States. We are not selling baskets on our reputation, however, but upon their quality, style and comparatively low cost. All our energy is directed to one thing—making florists' baskets that are right.

SPECIAL OFFER

No. 1, $15.00

We have a special assortment of 50 small cut flower baskets of ten different designs. There are a variety of colors to make your selection from, as follows: Brown, green, fumed-oak, antique green, two-tone and our new "Sunray" shades.

No. 2, $25.00

40 plant baskets of different designs. Colors the same as above.

Winterson's Seed Store was redecorated from cellar to garret last week, in anticipation of the rush of counter trade now nearly due.

As John Kruchten has undertaken to supply the needs of the Retail Florists' Co., the coöperative buying section of the Retail Florists' Association, as well as those of his regular customers, he has found it necessary to increase his supply of lilies to 35,000 pots.

A meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association has been called for Thursday evening, March 18, at the Tavern to take action on the invitation of the Chicago Florists' Club to amalgamate the two organizations.

Miss May Hutchinson, of Hutchinson, Florist, at 2136 West Harrison street, is in the contest for the $3,000 bungalow offered by the Chicago Examiner for coupons clipped from its daily and Sunday editions. She is looking for support from the trade, receiving coupons sent to her at the store.

in town March 15 and 16 on his way to the New York flower show.

O. W. Frese reports E. H. Mazey, of the Mazey Floral Co., Minneapolis, as one of last week's visitors.

Among the visitors last week was William Craig, of Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia.

E. J. Fancourt, secretary of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, left the city March 12, after a visit of several days.

En route home from Peoria, where they spent several days with Charles Loveridge and their son, C. H. Maynard and Mrs. Maynard, of Detroit, were Chicago visitors last week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower situation has improved, although I cannot expect the bulb forcers or the growers of violets or sweet peas will agree with me. Taking the reports of every wholesale house into consideration, there is an improvement over a week ago. Carnations first, then roses, are the strong features of the market. Bulbs, sweet peas and violets are the weaklings. It is possible to sell most of the bulbous stock at low prices, prices that were unknown at this time last year. Violets have lacked support from the buyers. They are cheap and difficult to dispose of even then. Sweet peas are sold like bulbous flowers, in enormous quantities; the difficulty lies in the fact that the production is two or three times greater than usual during the third week in March. They are so fine that the market is absorbing great quantities at moderate prices, but it is almost impossible to make a market for the vast numbers at listed figures.

Orchid peas, of course, are taken in preference to the ordinary variety, bringing better money in comparison. Carnations are in pretty good shape; prices keep up well and the demand is satisfactory to the wholesalers. Beauties, while more plentiful, maintain their price and the good flowers of the leading hybrid tea varieties bring fair figures; this can hardly be said of the shorts or of poorly grown stock. Easter lilies and callas are in oversupply; the latter are more readily marketed in quantity than the former. Without further specializing, the situation may be summed up by saying that the volume of business is satisfactory under existing conditions, but that average prices are a little lower than usual at this time.

ing the return of our delegates from Chicago, March 3, that culminated in a meeting at City hall March 13. Those present were, on the one hand, Rudolph Blankenburg, mayor, and Maurice L. Cooke, director of public works, representing the city of Philadelphia, and on the other W. Atlee Burpee, Robert Craig, D. C. Donohue, Adolph Farenwald, John C. Gracey, Charles E. Meehan, Arthur A. Niessen, Samuel S. Pennock and William Wunder, representing the florists of Philadelphia.

Mr. Donohue, acting as spokesman and legal adviser for the applicants, asked that the Tabernacle be leased for the national flower show to be held in this city one year hence. Mr. Donohue ably depicted the advantages that would accrue to the city were such a show held here and the increased chances of success were it held in the Tabernacle. The mayor kindly but positively declined the proposal. He said that it was unlawful to erect a frame building within the brick district, that it encroached on the sidewalk and that it was on city property. The act under which the Tabernacle was built in direct violation of the law was passed by councils with the distinct understanding that the Tabernacle was to be pulled down as soon as the revival meetings were over. This the mayor said must be carried out in good faith. The committee thought they would have had a chance had the show been scheduled for this spring, but as it is still a year off the case is hopeless.

The national flower show will therefore be held as originally arranged, in Convention hall, Broad street and Allegheny avenue, in March, 1916.

West Philadelphia.

At his firm's greenhouses David Colflesh displayed as pretty a lot of Easter plants as one would wish to see. The varieties were specialties rather than a general assortment; well selected specialties, nicely grown. There were Nephrolepis Giatrasii, dwarf and shapely; Lilium multiflorum, in plenty of time; Azalea Mme. Vander Cruyssen, well set; genistas that pleased me greatly, spiræas and daisies. The balance of the place is filled with flowering bulbs and ever so many spring plants that await a shift after the Fateful Fourth. You know the Glorious Fourth, so you will guess the Fateful Fourth.

The Aschmann Brothers.

It is a pleasure to see well grown stock in quantity and houses entirely filled with a single crop, just timed for our greatest flower holiday, are an especial pleasure. You can judge of the ability and faithful care of a grower easily now. When everything seems to come right of itself, without an effort, then you know there has been some hustling, mental and physical. That is the way it looks out at Second and Bristol streets, where hustle the Aschmann brothers. They have a splendid lot of lilies, clean and healthy, well set with buds, and an equally fine lot of azaleas in five leading varieties, with a sprinkling of rarer kinds. Of the azaleas the white, Niobe, is carried over with excellent results. The others,

Mme. Vander Cruyssen, Vervæneana, Simon Mardner and Mme. Somebody, whose name I neglected to take down, a pretty variegated sort, are all freshly imported. The spiræas are exceptionally fine, as is Nephrolepis elegantissima. The balance of the stock is in keeping with the pace kept by the leaders, while new concrete walks show that the hustlers hustle.

Various Notes.

Curled edge crepe paper comes in lengths of ten feet, not ten yards, as I credited H. Bayersdorfer & Co. with saying last week.

Robert Rahaley and Mrs. Rahaley, Walter Taepke and Mrs. Taepke, of Detroit, and P. T. Bolger, Charleston, S. C., have been with us.

The Sociability of the Florists' Club was held March 15. Successful? Sure!

George W. Kerr, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., spoke on sweet peas before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society March 16.

Dr. John H. MacFarlane, of the U. of P., spoke before the Orchid and Garden Club, Presser hall, March 12, on "Rhododendrons and Azaleas, their Culture and their History."

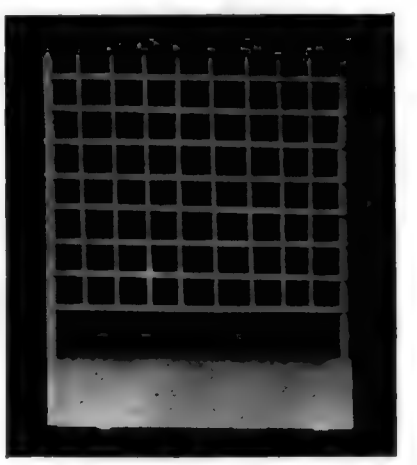
Joseph G. Neidinger comments on the increase in the demand for baskets.

The hydrangeas at Godfrey Aschmann's have come along splendidly with the bright weather. All the Easter stock will be on time without hurrying.

The report that Louis Berger and Walter N. Yeats will manage a flower department at the store of Gimbel Bros. is unfounded.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer believes that from present indication the demand for florists' supplies will be much larger than was anticipated.

The Robert Craig Co. has a magnificent collection of Easter plants this season.



Max A. Fierstein reports increased activity in all garden seeds.

Edward Reid believes that Robert Burns' lines on pleasure will apply to the present overproduction of bulbs, their beautiful lines depicting how fleeting is pleasure. Mr. Reid thinks this fits the bulb that blooms and is gone, while the carnation, the sweet pea and the violet keep on blooming. I would like to give those lines, my Chief loves poetry so!

H. Bayersdorfer has applied to the United States Government at Washington to have the goods now lying at foreign ports brought here. Mr. Bayersdorfer claims with great force that these goods are the property of the purchaser after they have been delivered at the port of embarkation and that our government must protect the rights of purchasers in this country. When these goods are brought over, the embargo will go into effect.

Stuart H. Miller has strengthened his lines in several directions and now has a good assortment of flowers.

was given a thorough inspection. Returning to Philadelphia, Joseph G. Neidinger's establishment was gone over, a taxidermist taking a live dove, stuffing and finishing it in fifteen minutes for the benefit of the visitors. The party was taken to Atlantic City in Mr. Neidinger's two touring cars, to spend the week end. This week the visitors went to the New York show, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Neidinger, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Karins, and George Hampton.

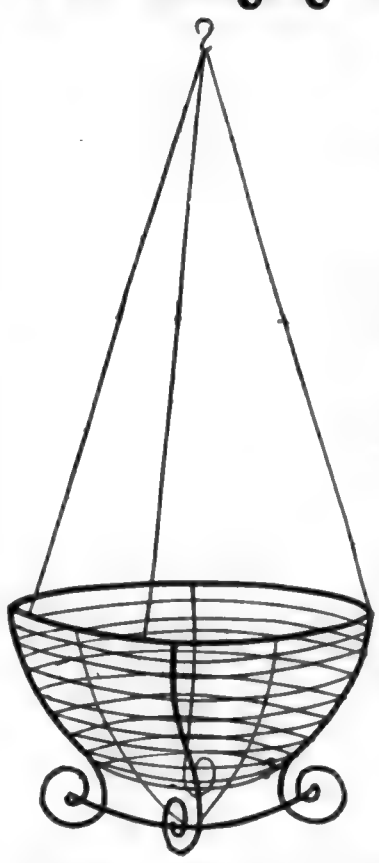
ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week the local wholesale markets were in excellent condition, as there was plenty of first-class stock to be had at reasonable prices. The retailers did not do a rushing business, only the downtown florists buying heavily at cheap prices in order to put on bargain sales. As Lent has stopped all large social functions, the west end florists have little to do in this line. There were large shipments of southern daffodils coming in all the week, and they sold as low as $2 and $3 per thousand, greatly hurting the sale of the locally grown greenhouse stock.

Monday, March 15, white carnations were up to $3 and $4 per hundred, as the demand was heavy for these to be colored for St. Patrick's day stock. The colored carnations run from $1.50 to $3, and there are plenty of them. Roses, too, have been quite plentiful, but the demand for these seems excellent, especially for fancy stock. Sweet peas and violets dragged a little last week at reduced prices. Snapdragons do not sell well of late. Some fancy stock is coming in. Bulbous stock dragged considerably, and the supply was large in valley, Paper Whites, daffodils, jonquils, freesias and Romans. Everything in the green line is in plenty at usual prices.



Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting March 11. It was one of the most interesting and best attended meetings held for many months. The attraction was the carnation and novelty exhibition held in conjunction with the meeting. As President Bourdet was unable to attend, Vice-president Wells presided over the meeting and did his work well. The attendance numbered fifty and all say they spent a most interesting afternoon. The meeting, as usual, was held in Odd Fellows' hall, but the exhibition was staged at the market of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., 1310 Pine street.

The committee that handled the recent club dance was as yet unable to make a report, as many still are holding on to their tickets and have made no returns. A letter was received from the St. Louis County Growers' Association, stating that the association would assist the Florists' Club in entertaining the American Carnation Society when it holds its next meeting in St. Louis. The application of B. Lechner, of Lechner Bros., bulb importers, was presented for membership. The application of H. M. Berkart was laid over for next meeting.

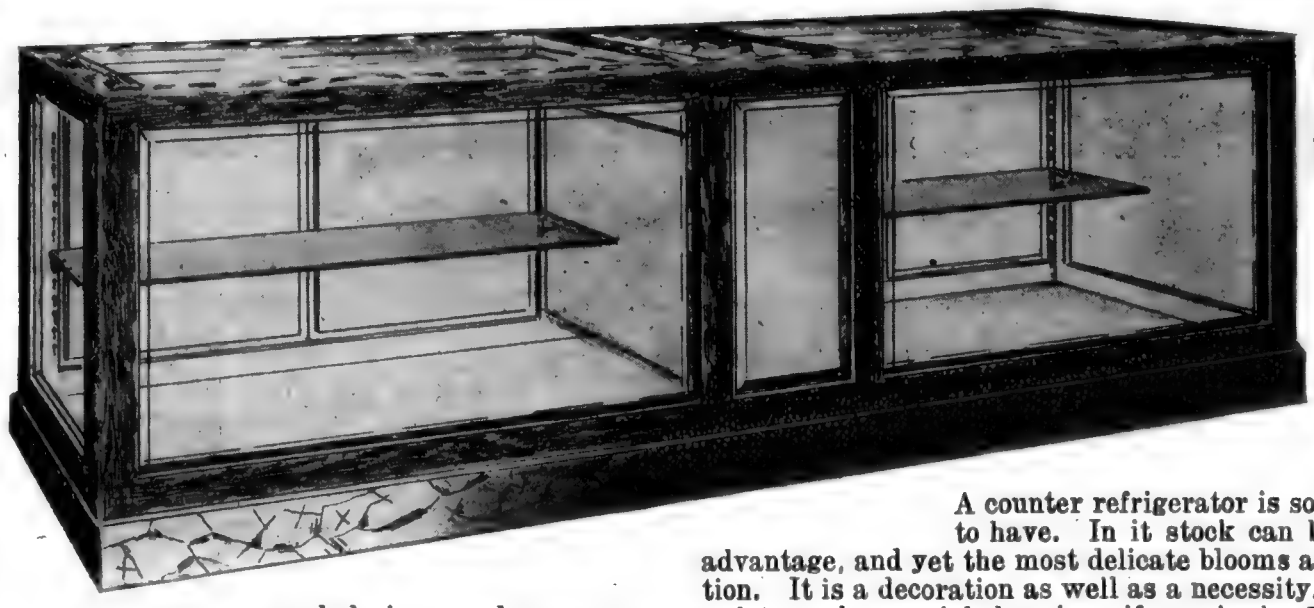
The chair appointed Geo. B. Windler, E. W. Guy and Gust Grossart as judges of the exhibition.

W. W. Ohlweiler read a paper on "Preparation of Soil for Florists' Use." It proved to be of unusual interest to all the members. The treasurer's report showed a healthy condition of the club's finances. The question box brought out some good discussions. A discussion of the question, "Can carnations be grown at a profit at 2 cents for the season?" ended in the opinion that they could not.

After adjournment, the members proceeded in a body to view the exhibition. On arriving at Windler's market, it was found that a number of members were in waiting and the crowd was thus swelled to nearly seventy-five.

The following are the exhibitors and what they staged:

Anthon Bros., Kirkwood—Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress.



J. A. Kropp, Kirkwood—A vase each of Enchantress and White Enchantress; also a vase of Silver Pink snapdragons.

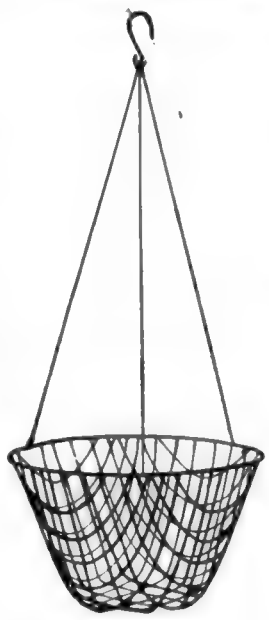
J. L. Schiller, Toledo, O.—New fern plants.

Windler Wholesale Floral Co.—Ribbons and other florists' supplies.

The staging of the exhibits was by Albert Gumz and was well executed. The Windler Co. made things pleasant with plenty to smoke, eat and drink. A vote of thanks was passed by those present.



Various Notes.

The retail Florists' Association's banquet, held at the Washington hotel, March 8, was not a big success in point of attendance, but socially it was a nice affair. Many of the retailers, who had promised to attend and join the association, failed to live up to their promises. The regular monthly meeting took place March 15, at the Washington hotel.

The members of the Lady Florists' Home Circle say they spent a most pleasant afternoon, March 10, at the home of Mrs. C. Bergstermann, 3117 South Grand avenue. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. J. J. Beneke, 3648 Humphrey street, April 14.

John T. Milliken, of Crescent, Mo., is said to have sold his holdings in the Golden Cycle mine, at Colorado Springs, Colo., for $4,500,000 last week. Mr. Milliken will put up several new greenhouses this summer. His desire to have the largest greenhouse plant will perhaps now be put into execution.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations

Sweet Peas
Cut Flowers
United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver has bought the following lots of Dirt Bands from us:

Dec., 1913	50,000	Jan., 1915	70,000
Jan., 1914	40,000	Mar., 1915	20,000
Mar., 1914	20,000

If he was not getting better plants from them than from clay pots he would not continue to use them so largely.

See our 2-page advertisement, pages 30 and 31.

GLOEKLER FLOWER REFRIGERATORS

Gloekler Fixtures in Store of A. W. Smith Co., Pittsburgh.

THE essential part of the preservation of cut flowers is a cold, dry circulation of air. That is the fundamental principle of Gloekler Flower Refrigerators. It keeps the refrigerator sweet, clean and sanitary, and at the same time results in a saving of ice consumption. It requires perfect insulation to produce this condition, and the Gloekler method of reinforced cork insulation has been proven by test the only practical way of producing such a result.

And then, the selling quality of the refrigerator—that is a big point for consideration. These refrigerators display flowers so attractively that they almost sell themselves. They are as valuable as an extra salesman in your store. They present an insistent argument to the customer to buy, but in an unobjectionable way. And, after all, the first aim of the florist is to sell.

Gloekler Refrigerators are made of selected materials, finished to exactly harmonize with your store interior, and completed with our own heavy, attractive hardware.

Many splendid styles and sizes in stock for quick shipment. We build any size or style to order. Any finish.

A NEW CATALOGUE of FLORISTS' REFRIGERATORS shows flower store interiors in full color. Send for your copy. It's free and it's worth while. Write TODAY.

John Bentzen, of the Bentzen Floral Co., spent a few days in Chicago recently. They report a good time shown them by the Chicago boys.

The employees of Grimm & Gorly gave a roller skating party at one of the local skating rinks last week and invited the head of the firm, Vincent Gorly, to attend and do a few of his fancy stunts on roller skates. The doctor says Mr. Gorly will be out in about ten days; he is now confined to his home with a painfully sprained foot. Fruit and flowers are sent to his bedside daily by the employees.

B. Lechner, of Lechner Bros., bulb importers at Webster Groves, says business in their line has been satisfactory so far this season and they are booking orders daily for August delivery.

JUNIATA—NEW CLIMBING ROSE

One of the very best of the seedlings raised by Mr. M. H. Walsh, of Woodshole, Mass. We purchased the entire stock several years ago at a large figure. We are offering some very handsome specimen plants in bloom for Easter delivery, and every one should have a few of this grand novelty. It is an unusually strong grower and the most prolific bloomer of any of the climbing roses. The color is a beautiful rose pink, with tips of petals lightly tinged with white, and a white disc in the center of the flower. It is the ideal variety for either forcing or for outside decoration.
Specimen plants, 6-inch and 7-inch pots, $12, $15, $18, $24 and $30 per doz.
Specimen plants, $3, $3.50, $4, $5, $6, $7.50 and $10 each

The Market.

The weather last week was spring-like, with all sunshiny days. The favorable conditions have increased the supply of flowers in the market until almost any quantity of stock is available.

The outlook for Easter stock is excellent. Some growers have found it necessary to move their plants to a cold house in order that they may not reach their prime too soon.

Business last week equaled that of any previous week since Lent began. Large decorations and funeral work were chiefly responsible for the demand. Easter and calla lilies are eagerly bought up. Spencer sweet peas are much preferred to the other varieties, and bring in good returns. The supply of jonquils and narcissi is shortening, although Dutch bulbous stock is becoming exceedingly heavy. Roses and carnations, however, are in heaviest demand for funeral work. Crimson ramblers are appearing, and pussy willows are used in boxes of spring flowers.

Various Notes.

Herman J. Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., says the company is cutting some fine large carnations, principally in the Enchantress varieties. The red carnation, St. Nicholas, is making a fine showing.

At the range of the Frank Knecht Co. are some splendid rose houses. The crops look as though they will be about right for Easter.

C. W. Bitner reports a good trade in potted plants this season.

Mr. McCarthy, representing Philip Carbone, of Boston, called on the trade last week. Mr. McCarthy reports that his business shows twenty-five per cent increase over that of last year. His territory includes the northern and western states. T. W. Plant, of the Haeger Brick & Tile Co., Elgin, Ill., was another recent visitor. R. F.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,

The Market.

Continuously clear skies have so far been our lot in March. Not a drop of rain nor a flake of snow has fallen; everything is perilously dry and blazing woodlands are common. The weather has been favorable for a heavy output of flowers, far more than can be profitably disposed of. Funeral orders have used considerable material; so have the big dry goods stores for their spring openings. Except for these outlets, conditions would be extremely bad. Roses are cleaning up with greater difficulty, short and medium grades selling far better than fancies. A few fancy Beauties on 6-foot stems have made $6 per dozen, but they are hard to move at this price. Ophelia is still in great demand. Hadley is a great favorite, its delightful odor being a strong factor in its favor. Russell, Double White Killarney, Taft, Sunburst, Killarney Queen and Crimson Queen are other favorites.

Carnations mostly go at $2 and $3 per hundred, a few higher but more lower. The quality remains excellent, and a heavy Easter crop seems assured. Single violets are cleaning up fairly well, but at unprofitably low prices. Doubles do not sell well. The likelihood is for a small Easter crop of singles, as the plants are now making heavy foliage, which means the near end of the flowering season. Sweet peas are abundant and good. Colored varieties sell well. Dutch bulbous flowers are abundant and lower, but clean up fairly well. Pansies, myosotis and yellow marguerites are all more plentiful. Schizanthus comes from one or two growers and sells under the catchy name of annual orchids. Cattleyas are not so abundant. C. Trianæ is nearly over and C. Schrœderæ is not a good seller. Gardenias drag; so does valley. Asparagus sells tolerably well.

Club Banquet.

At the annual club banquet, held this year at the New American House instead of Horticultural hall, there was an attendance of nearly 300. The change of venue pleased some, but the majority would have preferred the more commodious and homelike quarters at 300 Massachusetts avenue. Nevertheless, the occasion was an enjoyable one. The tables were well decorated, as usual, and the menu was a most excellent one. Following the banquet proper a fine entertainment was furnished by the following artists: Miss Margaret Wither, soprano soloist; James Singer, baritone soloist; Emil Chevriel, comedy violin imitations; Miss Katherine Singer, pianist.

Following the entertainment President Bartsch welcomed everyone in behalf of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and introduced the speakers of the evening. Patrick Welch responded for the S. A. F. He spoke of the work the society is doing, referred to the recent executive committee meeting in Chicago and hoped for a good Boston representation at San Francisco in August. S. J. Goddard and Peter Fisher briefly responded for the Carnation Society. Other speakers included Vice-President James Methuen, Robert Cameron, W. N. Craig and Henry Penn. The latter spoke of the high quality of flowers produced by the Boston growers, a point brought more forcibly home by a recent trip to other large eastern cities. W. J. Kennedy, the last speaker, launched into a fervid pro-suffrage peroration, to the surprise of his male hearers and the delight of the ladies.

Following the postprandial exercises, dancing was enjoyed in the ballroom until midnight, in which many of the younger members and some of more mature years participated. The floor directors were James L. Miller and W. J. Patterson. Aids were E. H. Borowski, Martin Wax, John R. Ness, Henry Penn and Arthur Clarke.

Various Notes.

The Horticultural Club held a meeting and dinner at the Parker House March 12, with the majority of the members present and these guests: H. H. Bartsch, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club; E. Doubleday, of the firm of Doubleday, Page & Co., New York; Louis C. Elson, of the New England Conservatory of Music; Leonard Barron, New York; Chief Justice Aiken, of the Superior court, and W. R. Nicholson. President Farquhar introduced Patrick Welch, who gave an address on the recent S. A. F. meeting in Chicago. Some of the newest Spencer sweet peas, from William Sim, decorated the tables.

Geo. W. Marshall, of Medfield, has rented from Woodman Bros., of Danvers, four centrally located greenhouses in that town. Hitchings & Co. built the principal greenhouses and store and they are quite up to date. Mr. Marshall will occupy them at once and will grow a general line of stock for retail trade. Danvers is a flourishing town of 10,000 population.

John Barr, of South Natick, is delighted with Carnation Matchless. He grew 3,000 plants and says he has not had twenty-five split flowers this season. He will give Champion another trial to prove it further. He will plant Alice in quantity next season, with smaller lots of Good Cheer and Pink Sensation.

Hoffman had the decorations, which were unusually extensive, for the spring openings of two of Boston's largest dry goods stores, Jordan, Marsh Co., and Filene's. At the latter store he used great numbers of well grown cinerarias arranged in large concrete urns, seven or more plants of solid colors in each, which looked particularly well. Prunus triloba and other deciduous shrubs, also rambler roses and bulbous subjects, were used in quantity in the two stores. Hoffman has hired MacMulkin's old store, 194 Boylston street, in addition to his big Massachusetts avenue store, for Easter business. He has started advertising heavily in the leading Boston dailies.

Particularly fine single violets are those coming from F. A. Noyes, of Winchester; J. H. Newman, J. Shannon & Sons and A. Porter, of Woburn.

The J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, R. I., has superb American Beauty roses with 6-foot to 7-foot stems. Ophelia would be hard to beat and is eagerly snapped up.

A. A. Reed, the veteran Whitman orchid grower and florist, who has been spending two months in Santiago, Cal., is expected home April 1.

Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell, still has the market almost to himself on Spanish iris. He also had quantities of anemones. His carnations are always high-class, his leaders being Pink Delight, Gloriosa, Beacon, Matchless, Rosette, White Wonder, White Enchantress and Philadelphia. The last named is specially fine.

With W. H. Elliott trade in Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri is quite good. His Hadley roses are now extra fine; also, White Killarney, Sunburst and Killarney Queen.

Fred L. Sly, of Stoughton, of the newer violet specialists, is doing well with both doubles and singles this season.

John T. Gale has a large house of double violets which is a veritable sheet of blue and which will give an immense Easter crop. His single violets are fine and capitally bunched. His large lot of Easter lilies are just starting to open, as are his sweet peas of the Spencer type.

Andrew Christensen will plant Carnation Alice largely next season. He likes the vigorous growth of the plants. Matchless is making a good record with him, and Champion, while it may not displace Beacon, gives many fine flowers. Pink Delight is his variety par excellence. Some Good Cheer will be grown next season.

Peter Hylen, of Randolph, has a fine lot of bulbous stock. Specially good are Murillo and Couronne d'Or tulips, Golden Spur and Victoria narcissi.

L. E. Cousins, of Concord Junction, is the largest shamrock grower for the Boston market this season and the plants sold well. Several growers who, in previous years, grew shamrocks largely, have dropped them, as the demand seems to have fallen off.

William T. Walke, of Salem, has French hydrangeas which are fine. His rambler roses, azaleas and lilies are not far behind in quality.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, has quantities of rambler and baby rambler roses in flower now. His other Easter plants, including genistas, azaleas, lilies, rhododendrons, etc., are all looking fine.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., are sending quantities of splendid roses to the wholesale market. Their leaders are Ophelia, Crimson Queen, Richmond, Taft, Double White Killarney and Killarney Queen.

Lively & Bond, of Holbrook, have a fine assortment of carnations in addition to callas.

Running time does not exceed thirty-five minutes. The Easter plants here are in fine condition.

A number of Bostonians will visit the New York show March 20 and 21. A few rose and carnation exhibitors will go earlier, but the importance of the local show in progress this week will keep most of our growers at home this year.

The Market.

There has been little change in market conditions during the last week. The supply of stock remains about the same. Sales have shown some improvement.

The supply of carnations is much smaller than last year's at this time, but from indications the crop will be about right for Easter. The quality has been good so far, and splits are not heavy.

Roses are in fine shape generally, and it is anticipated that there will be a large crop for Easter, with possibly the exception of one or two fancy varieties.

Spring stock is selling well, and the quality is fairly good. Valley is plentiful and is in fine shape. Lilies are not so plentiful and are moving well.

Plants show every indication of being in great demand again this year, and the stock is showing up well. Advance orders are already coming in, and it looks as though business, especially in this line, will be good.

him until help, in the shape of an officer, appeared. Mrs. Wanasek sustained no loss. The purse contained a large sum of money and her late husband's gold watch. H. J. S.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. has just completed a large propagating house, which was needed to supply the increased demand for small plants. The company reports its line of Easter plants to be exceptionally fine this year; large quantities of lilies, azaleas and rambler roses are coming in just right.

A flower exhibit for the next state fair was the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club March 4 at the Kurtz cafe. J. Livingston, H. V. Hunkel and C. C. Pollworth were appointed members of a committee to take charge of the display. Plans for the annual picnic, to be held in July, were discussed, and Walter Halliday was named chairman of a committee to arrange for the outing.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business has improved since last week. There have been a number of good table decorations, and funeral work has been heavier. Stock is overplentiful, and large quantities of violets and sweet peas are sold by the street men. There is little call for these flowers from the wholesale houses, and double violets, while bringing about 50 cents per hundred in small lots, go at $3 per thousand in quantities. On sweet peas, the price asked is 50 and 75 cents per hundred. Orchids are more plentiful. Gardenias are much improved in quality, and are to be had in larger quantities, at $3 per dozen. The market is overcrowded with cut Easter lilies, and the price has been forced down to $6 and $8 per hundred. Little movement is noted of rubrum lilies. Carnations bring $2 and $3 per hundred, with a few choice flowers moving at $4. Roses can be had as low as $3. American Beauty roses are improving in quality and are meeting with an easier sale. There is little call for bulbous stock, and plenty is to be had at low quotations.

Various Notes.

J. H. Small & Sons are bringing in some good spiræa and tulips from their houses on Rhode Island avenue.

Fred H. Kramer is this week holding his annual show of spring flowers. He is showing some fine hyacinths and tulips.

William E. Smith has opened the Eastern Flower Shop at 328 H street, northeast. This is a small place, but it is practically the only flower shop in the section, and there is ample opportunity for growth.

J. Louis Loose, president of the Washington Florists Co., 1408 H street, northwest, was the only bidder at the auction sale of the bankrupt stock of this company. Mr. Loose made two bids, totaling $5,750, which were accepted.

George H. Cooke is reported quite ill from an attack of bronchitis, with pneumonia threatening. He has been confined to his home for several days by the doctor's orders.

Joseph Goudy visited Washington on his way north. He reports that business in those cities in Virginia visited by him has greatly improved.

Edward S. Schmid has gone to Philadelphia to inaugurate a new lodge of the Mystic Order of the Enchanted Realm. A number of florists, prominent in Kallipolis Grotto, the local branch, plan to join him. Mr. Schmid has quite recovered from his recent illness.

Secretary of State Bryan shared the guest honors at the annual banquet of the Frederick, Md., Board of Trade with William F. Gude. It fell to Mr. Gude to make a speech, during which

Club Meeting.

The local florists met March 8 at the Stroudwater grange hall for a supper, business meeting and entertainment. As the principal business of the meeting, a committee was appointed, consisting of Miss Marion E. McGunigle, Alexander Skillin, Mrs. Lizzie Dennett and E. L. Conant, to make arrangements for another meeting, to take place Monday, April 12, at which time a permanent organization will be formed to include all of the florists of this city and vicinity.

The after-dinner exercises began with the reading of a paper by Mrs. Liberty B. Dennett, who was one of the pioneers in the business in this city. The members of the association and guests present were:

Mrs. L. I. Dennett, W. T. Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. Niles Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Abbott, Selius E. Pederson, Philip H. Talbot, Mrs. M. L. Libby, Mrs. Helen M. Bennett, Scarboro; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Skillin, Falmouth; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Conant, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Meloon, Mrs. Liberty B. Dennett, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Allen, Marion Ellen McGunigle, T. Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

ANTON C. ZVOLANEK, Lompoc, Cal., is in New York.

GENERALLY speaking, the seed market is short all around.

STRINGLESS and giant stringless beans are almost out of the market.

NEXT Monday, March 22, probably will mark the season's peak with the general mail-order seedsmen.

SEEDSMEN who are sending plants through the mails should read the article in this issue headed "Must Mark Plant Packages."

NEW YORK seedsmen are making elaborate displays this week at the spring flower show there. Stumpp & Walter Co. and J. M. Thorburn & Co., both enjoying heavy counter trade, make fine showings.

ONION sets are advancing in price, as the frozen and poor stock is out of the way. The advance in the last fortnight has been from 25 to 50 cents per bushel. A further advance is anticipated, as the market is clearing up rapidly.

THE "farm to table" lists being sent out by the government for the extension of the parcel post apparently furnish good live names for seedsmen's waiting lists, especially so in the case of those who have books of poultry supplies.

THE BOSTON STORE, a popular price department store in Chicago, has issued a 16-page catalogue of seeds, trees, shrubs and vines, handsomely printed by Morse. But the cover is rhododendrons, which are an impossibility so far as the neighborhood of Chicago is concerned.

ON account of the South Carolina tuberose growers leaving their stock to freeze in the ground because of the export conditions, there is every indication that there will not be enough tuberose bulbs to meet the demand in this country this season.

THE reports are general that February's mail orders were excellent in volume and value, in many cases beating last year; also, that March is making a splendid record, probably good enough to offset the poor start in January and make the season a banner one for many houses.

THE Leonard Seed Co. Chicago, has just received a large general shipment from France. A London shipment that cleared port on the steamer Marquette can not be delivered, as the ship was caught by wireless and ordered back to be used by the British government to transport troops to France.

VISITED BOSTON: S. Suzuki, Yokohama, Japan, and C. W. Scott, of New York, representing the Yokohama Nursery Co.

THE average buyer would not accept, if he knew, peas for seed except of the last crop, but the average buyer could not tell the difference if the seeds were 2 years old. With age there is some loss of color and they become a little slow, but results are just as good even in the third year.

OF those seeds that can be carried over from one year to another the war should cause no shortage. The larger American houses of late years have carried large stocks and were not alarmed as to 1915. The seeds now coming to hand in many cases were not intended for this season's sale and it is apparent many are protecting themselves against what may happen to this year's crops.

A SPECIAL TRAIN TO FRISCO.

IMPORTANT

PRICES FOR FALL DELIVERY

HORSESHOE BRAND GIGANTEUM

THE BEST LILY BULBS PRODUCED

AT PRESENT prices are very low. They may advance at any time. They positively will not be reduced. Don't be misled by war talk—the only other country in the world consuming large quantities of Lily Bulbs is England, and, in spite of the war, or on account of it, as you may elect, the supply there is far short of the demand. Furthermore, should there be a cessation of hostilities, a still further demand will spring up, creating a shortage, because the crop of Giganteum is not increasing in proportion to the demand.

REMEMBER, we deliver f. o. b. various cities as below. The freight you pay is part of the cost, and many buyers can save from $2.00 to $10.00 per 1000 bulbs in the actual cost. Besides, you help make your immediate vicinity a greater distributing point. Compare our prices—you know the goods.

In announcing the arrangement Chairman S. F. Leonard, whose address is 226 West Kinzie street, Chicago, says:

"The president, Lester L. Morse, is hoping for a large attendance at this convention and urges the transportation committee to get this official schedule out early. This is done so that the members and their friends will have plenty of time to arrange for the trip. The return journey may be made by each individual or group as he or they see fit, but it will be necessary to name the return route at the time of purchasing the tickets in order to get the reduced rates. The committee desires to hear from the members as soon as convenient and trusts that a large number will avail themselves of the Santa Fe special from Chicago as per itinerary."

WITH ROCKFORD SEEDSMEN.

H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., has installed an electric letter cutter to facilitate the opening of mail, which is ahead of last year at this time, both in volume and value.

The Cherry Seed Co. is sharing in the general rush, while Condon Bros., who judge from the way their commission seeds are going, believe there will be a big shortage of stock before the season is over.

R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill., says the total volume of mail orders for January, February and early March is ahead of last year, which was the banner season. At the time of writing this note, March 10, the total stood at 70,000 orders, 2,500 orders today. A curious circumstance is that a large proportion come from Pennsylvania. The veteran head of the house, seventy-three years on this busy sphere, forty-five of them spent right here, takes delight in assisting in opening the mail and says there is something fascinating about it. He predicts a prosperous season for all. W. M.

REFUNDS ORDERED.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has directed the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad to refund $346 to D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich., on account of overcharges on three cars of garden seed shipped from Little Rock, Ark., to Detroit. The Oregon Short Line railroad has been ordered to refund $100 to the Page Seed Co., of Greene, N. Y., because of excess freight charges on peas from Anthony, Idaho,

Inside or Outside

No matter where you grow seedling plants of my Silver Pink Snapdragon the same good results obtain. Right now is the time to sow seed for your stock of plants for bedding out. Whether you want it for show or profit there is no snapdragon that will equal it. It is not a mite dwarf and you can cut salable blossoms by the armful all summer, from frost to frost.

THE JAP BULB SITUATION.

The market for Japanese bulbs has resisted war's alarms with a strength quite without equal in any other department of the bulb business.

The reason prices have held so firm on the 1914 crops is that the number of cases proved considerably short of early estimates—thousands of cases short. American orders were filled in full only because British orders were cut in half. Had it not been for the war there would have been a scarcity by now and as it is the supply of giganteums in cold storage is estimated as not greater than usual at this date.

The Japanese have not planted anything like the usual acreage for the 1915 crop. One good authority estimates it at seventy per cent, another as low as sixty per cent of the usual acreage. Anticipating a reduction in the world's requirements because of the war, the Japanese have figured that a small crop at regular prices will bring as much money as a big crop at surplus rates, and they have used a part of their bulb lands for food crops this year. Also, they have seen a chance to improve their stock by rigid selection of the planting stock and the destruction of the weaklings, so the trade should be the gainer.

THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1916.

As finally passed by Congress and made a law by the signature of the President, the agricultural appropriation bill carries an item of $252,540 for the congressional free seed distribution; $28,700 for studying and testing commercial seeds; $70,400 for investigations in foreign seed and plant introduction; $119,920 for test and distribution of new and rare seeds and $50,000 for the enforcement of the plant quarantine act. P.

WARNS POTATO PLANTERS.

Truck growers who annually plant a considerable acreage of potatoes are warned by the U. S. Department of Agriculture that there was, January 1, 1915, a much larger supply of northern-grown potatoes in the hands of growers and dealers than was the case January 1, 1914. Experience has demonstrated that a large holdover crop of northern-grown potatoes which is in good condition and selling at a reasonable price when the early truck crop potatoes reach the market means low prices, sometimes so low that the shipment of such crops nets a loss to the grower.

With 43,000,000 more bushels of potatoes in sight January 1, 1915, than were available at the same time last year, and with a 1915 price of 43 cents as compared with 66 cents a year ago, there is little hope that the conditions will be better this year. The price now is just about one-third less than it was a year ago. The distribution of the crop is much better than last season, so there is little likelihood that the price of holdover stock will reach last year's mark, even by the end of the storage period.

Senator Dunlap is a good early strawberry outdoors, but is not to be recommended for forcing purposes. I have tried quite a number of varieties, but none will at all compare with Marshall for forcing. The plant is a vigorous grower. The fruit is large, of a rich crimson color and the flavor is splendid. Nick Ohmer used to prove fairly good for forcing; so did Golden Gate, but neither approaches Marshall.

You will not get as good results from runners dug up and potted in spring as from strong runners layered in pots in July, as soon as they are obtainable. If you have not water convenient to your bed, I would cut off the runners when they have made some roots, put in 3-inch pots and stand them in a coldframe, shading and keeping them well sprayed until they are established. Then give full exposure to the sun. Shift them from 3-inch to 6-inch pots. Plants treated thus should make strong crowns, which will give you plenty of fruit. Hand pollination of the flowers is necessary to secure a good set. C.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Hawthorne, Cal.—C. Ichino, proprietor of Buena Vista Nursery, advises that it is the same business that formerly was known as the Japanese Nursery. The postoffice address is R. F. D. No. 2, Box 196, Inglewood, Cal.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—Mrs. Lillian E. Banta and daughters have opened the Flower Shoppe, at 17 Soquel avenue. The appearance of the store was the subject of favorable comment in the Santa Cruz Surf on the day of the store's opening.

Astoria, Ore.—The opening of the store of the Sunset Florists, in the Sunset theater building, on Commercial street, was held on the afternoon and evening of March 3. C. S. Minch, for fourteen years in the trade in Seattle, is the head of the concern.

San Francisco, Cal.—T. I. Kawashima, secretary of the Japanese Business Men's Association, 444 Bush street, is investigating the subject of coöperative markets with the special thought of establishing such an institution for the disposal of the product of the Japanese flower growers around the bay.

Sierra Madre, Cal.—Dates for the annual flower show are set for April 8, 9 and 10. The Board of City Trustees has donated $250 and the Board of Trade $50. Other financial aid has been offered, and already there have been many applications for entries, so that this year's exhibition is expected to be a great success.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The finer weather has helped the outdoor cut flower growers, and a great deal of fine stock is now reaching the market. To some extent, this has checked the sale of indoor flowers, but not materially. The retailers' windows are gay and springlike in appearance. Bulbous stock and spring flowers generally are much more in evidence, Gesneriana tulips being the principal addition last week. Prettily arranged baskets of daffodils, forget-me-nots and other flowers are most attractive, though the actual sales may not be large. Rhododendrons, lilacs and azaleas are the principal plant exhibits, and these are fine. There are also some good pot hyacinths in all colors. Out-of-town shipments keep the wholesalers busy, and already Easter inquiries are plentiful.

Various Notes.

At last the mystery is solved! For months past the county officials have been erecting what looked like a cross between a hurdle and the head of an iron bedstead, and planting rose trees on each. These are placed at intervals of 100 yards or so along the county highways. Why it was done no one could imagine, for anything uglier or more expensive would be hard to conceive. Now it appears that they are for the delectation of our eastern visitors for 1915. As they drive swiftly along in their autos, the hurdles will be passed so rapidly that the effect of a continuous wall of roses will be created. Ye gods and little speed cops! Judging by present appearances, the amount of flowers produced will be about one to each three bushes of those that live, and our eastern friends will sure have to show some speed to get the continuous wall effect. It would be laughable were it not for the fact that thousands of dollars have been spent on these ridiculous and unsightly structures that are badly needed for useful work in connection with our highways. At first the fences, or whatever they may be called, sagged in the middle and wooden blocks had to be placed to keep them up. Then they are so unstable that dozens of them have been pulled over bodily by mischief-loving boys and others. The whole thing is so futile and absurd that one wonders how any sane man, let alone a board of supposedly good business men, could sanction such an outlay of the taxpayers' money.

Thanking you for the excellent results we have had to date from our ad. in The Review.—

The Freeman-Lewis Co. reports excellent business, quite a good deal of this being decorative table work at the Midwick Country Club.

H. V. Swenson, of the McNeff-Swenson Co., Chicago, has been spending a few days in the city and expressed himself as greatly pleased with the country hereabouts.

The change in O. C. Saakes' store made by altering the window is remarkable, and it is difficult to see how so slight an alteration could have worked so great an improvement. The whole store is better lighted, looks larger, and is in every way more attractive.

The new roses are making quite a display at H. W. Turner's place, at Montebello. This is especially the case with the new ramblers and polyanthas, of which Mr. Turner has a magnificent collection now. The new house to be erected at once will take care of all the trials of new kinds, leaving the main range entirely free for growing for cut flowers and propagating.

J. Fellowes, of Fullerton, has been on the sick-list with a severe cold.

SEPTEMBER MORN

Our Sensational New Light Pink Rose

Growth of the very strongest of any H. T. yet disseminated, throwing long, strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet long; does not require pinching and will produce more high grade blooms than any Rose grown. Buds very large and finely formed, opening well into large, full double flowers of magnificent size and form; a wonderful keeper, lasting over a week after fully open, and retaining its color and fragrance, which is without question the sweetest found in any rose. The petals are large and of splendid substance, waved or undulated on the edges, giving the bloom a very beautiful and distinct appearance. The color is an exquisite shade of light flesh pink on the outer petals, shading to pure rose pink in the center, with a faint touch of deep golden-yellow at the very base of the petals. Without doubt the most rapturously beautiful color in a commercial rose, selling on sight and called for repeatedly, owing to its splendid keeping qualities and distinct coloring. We have this season 10,000 of it planted for cut flowers, and it has given the most gratifying returns of any rose we have grown. Foliage large, ample and not subject to mildew or spot. A splendid all-year-round rose, giving good returns every day in the year. Does not get soft in extremely hot weather, and will be found indispensable where high grade blooms are in demand during the hot months. We are propagating from selected wood only, insuring good, strong, sturdy plants that will give maximum results.

Own root stock only, from 2½-in. pots, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $100.00

SUPERIOR GROWN . . . . . ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

Mrs. Chas. Russell In greater demand than any other rose of the year. American Beauty has often had its position threatened by new comers, but Mrs. Russell is the first to prove a serious menace.

Splendid stock from 2½-inch pots, April 15th delivery, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. F. F. Thompson The beautiful shell-pink sport of the well known Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. It combines all the fine qualities of its parent, and this surely is recommendation enough when added to its magnificent coloring. Always in bloom and already proved a money-maker.

$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000

Hadley Brilliant, deep, velvety crimson, a color which it retains all the year round. Flowers borne on stiff, upright stems, and a first-class variety in every particular.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys—an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color; is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season.
We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

HENRY W. TURNER, Montebello, Cal.

surplus. Retail prices on cut flowers have not changed. Indoor-grown daffodils are about gone and the shorter-stemmed outdoor stock is coming in freely.

Potted tulips still sell well, those shown being of good grade. Dutch hyacinths have been of rather poor quality this season and have not sold so well as usual. The poor quality is attributed to the bulbs, which seem to have their off periods. Blooming hydrangeas, spiræas and lilacs have appeared.

In cut flowers, sweet peas are just now the favorites. The volume of business is only slightly affected by the observance of Lent and is about normal. Retail prices are a little lower than last year and bid fair to stay down, reducing to that extent the amount of money taken in.

At the greenhouses interest centers on the condition of the Easter stock. Giganteum lilies are inclined to be backward and require high temperatures to bring them in. Some of the growers who are short on heating capacity will not be able to make it. A large quantity of French hydrangeas in white and pink are being forced with some lots of Otaksa. Mme. Mouillere and Mme. Chautard are the favorite French varieties. Azaleas are in full bloom and the greater part of the stocks will be past their prime by Easter.

Various Notes.

L. W. Scott, of the Pacific Stoneware Co., has made the rounds of the Pacific northwest cities. He reports business conditions promising, especially in the cities located in the wheat-growing districts. He has made a canvass of the greenhouse ranges in Portland and vicinity and says there is about 2,000,000 square feet of glass being operated by the growers who supply the Portland market.

Max Smith is showing some excellent Spiræa Gladstone.

Axel Alenius, foreman for the Wilson & Crout Co., is again at work and hopes the improvement in his health will prove permanent.

F. J. Cook, who is operating the Walsh range of glass, reports his benches filled with potted and benched stock in great variety. The most of his output is handled by his father, who conducts the People's Flower Shop at Second and Alder streets.

Clarke Bros. have had a good run on Sir Watkin daffodils. They are showing the last of these for this season. Some Prince of Austria tulips and red amaryllises add to the attractiveness of their window display.

Miss E. A. Bergen, who with her brother is proprietor of the Bergen Floral Co., of Hillsboro, says they have found ready sale for all of their output this season. The company has some local retail trade, but wholesale the bulk of the carnations and plumosus.

The Tonseth Floral Co. is busy with Easter lilies, which require high temperatures to bring them in on time. It has a good lot of bedding stock. A number of kumquats in bloom add variety to the contents of the well-filled houses. Business at the store of the company is good.

Martin & Forbes Co. has its city range of greenhouses, on East Fiftieth street, full of flowers and plants. Inside and outside the place is kept in first-class condition. Mr. Forbes is spe-

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

cially proud of his two benches of sweet peas, the vines averaging eight feet high, with an abundance of blooms with stems from fourteen to eighteen inches long. In the cattleya house the Trianæ and Gaskelliana are in bloom. The Easter lilies are being taken to cooler quarters as fast as they show color. The principal feature in the window display at the store is a large Empress of India azalea in full bloom. This plant is over 30 years old and has furnished many dollars' worth of cut flowers in the days when greenhouse flowers were less plentiful than they are now. S. W. W.

WHEN TO BUD MANETTI.

I am planting 3,000 Manetti in Los Angeles. Can you tell me what is the best time to bud them? Some have advised me that from June to September is the proper time. Then, again, I have heard that autumn is best. About how long does it take to develop a salable plant? G. T.—Cal.

The condition of the Manetti stock at the time of budding has more to do with success or failure than the exact season of carrying out the work. Manetti stocks can be budded from May to October in your section, and it takes from ten to fifteen months from the time of budding to make a really good, salable plant. In colder localities rose growers usually attempt to keep the bud dormant during the first winter, and it is from these shoots in spring that European growers obtain their fine "maiden" buds for exhibition. But here it is unnecessary to keep them dormant, for the growth made in winter is just as good as that made in summer. In order to have the wood "run" well, and to facilitate budding, many growers bank up the stocks with soil from the center of the rows to keep the lower part green and the bark soft. At the time of budding, this soil is knocked down by hoeing, and the buds are inserted, low down, as soon as possible afterwards. Stocks should be six months planted before budding.

H. R. Richards.

CANNAS FOR SQUARE BEDS.

I am enclosing a sketch of plots which I wish to plant with cannas of various kinds in order to beautify the grounds between the sidewalks and the school building. If you will kindly give me the names of such dwarf cannas as you think suitable, I shall greatly appreciate the favor.

J. C. E.—Tex.

The following are suggested as splendid cannas for your purpose: Mrs. A. F. Conard, salmon pink; Meteor, blood red; King Humbert, orange scarlet, bronze foliage; William Sanders, scarlet, bronze leaves; Black Beauty, brilliant scarlet, bronze foliage; Hungaria, beautiful soft pink; Richard Wallace, canary yellow; Beethoven, orange yellow.

I would not try to use too many kinds. Blocks of one solid color are more effective than lines of a variety of shades. I would plant six rows in the widest border, which has a width of ten feet. Three rows should suffice in the other borders, which are only five feet wide, but you could use four if you wanted a more solid effect. You could use an edging of a yellow or red variety on one side, if desired. Let the edging be two rows thick where the wide border is and one row where the borders are narrower. You can use continuous lines of one color, or blocks. The latter would be far more effective. If you use blocks, set the plants fifteen to eighteen inches apart in the rows, but run them a foot apart next to the edge. I think if you restrict yourself to yellow and red colors you will get the best effect. If you use pink, keep them all at one of the ends. C. W.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Supplementary Prize List.

In a supplement to the schedule of the American Sweet Pea Society's exhibition at the San Francisco exposition June 4 there are five additional classes. The most important of these—and it may prove to be the most important on the whole schedule—is class 23, in which President Lester L. Morse offers a $50 silver cup for the most original floral design in sweet peas, any size. Only sweet pea blooms may be used, but any foliage is permitted. This class is open to all florists, and is expected to form a noteworthy addition to the exhibition. Those who intend to enter should notify the secretary ten days before the exhibition what space they will require for their exhibits.

Medals are offered by the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain for the best trade display of sweet peas, by seed growers and seedsmen only. Further information regarding these classes may be obtained from Frank F. Cuthbertson, the society's secretary for the San Francisco exhibition, 749 Front street, San Francisco.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

C. B. Gates, Mentor, O.—Two wholesale lists, offering gladioli and hardy perennials. Both lists are brief, having the appearance of being selective rather than comprehensive, and only a word or two of description is given to each variety.

W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J.—"Novelties and Specialties," a 24-page, illustrated catalogue. The first place in the book, and one of the first places in importance, is occupied by seven new dahlias; next are a large number of novelties in many species of plants, which range, alphabetically speaking, from anthericums to yuccas; these are followed by a list which is headed "Meritorious Novelties of Former Years." At the end is a general list of plants, bulbs and nursery stock.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, N. Y.—"Henderson's Implement Catalogue," consisting of sixty-four pages, freely illustrated. This catalogue, as stated by itself, "contains a full line of implements, tools and requisites for the garden, farm and lawn; also horse and hand-power labor-saving devices, insecticides, fungicides, spraying apparatus, fertilizers, etc." Within its own sphere, the book does indeed list almost everything that florists or gardeners could well think of, besides many things that might not be thought of until suggested by the book.

Fraser Nursery Co., Inc., Huntsville, Ala.—"Surplus List No. 2, for Nurserymen and Dealers Only," an extensive list of both ornamental and fruit-bearing stock, including young stock for transplanting.

H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H.—"The Gladiolus, the Crowning Splendor of the Garden," an especially neat 16-page catalogue, in pocket form. Besides the general list of named varieties, it contains a list of European novelties, and offers of mixtures and collections in separate colors.

C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo.—Golden anniversary number of "Young's Garden Book," listing flower, vegetable and field seeds; vegetable plants and roots, greenhouse and outdoor plants, fruit trees, ornamental trees and shrubs, fertilizers, insecticides, tools and garden requisites; sixty-two pages, illustrated. The newer sorts are well represented in both flower and vegetable seeds.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.—"City Garden Catalogue of Hardy Perennials, Shrubs, Trees, Fruits and Garden Requisites," an attractive, well illustrated book of thirty-two pages and cover. More than the ordinary amount of space and care are given to the cultural directions, under such heads as "A Word About Bulbs," "Use and Management of the Hotbed," "The Planting and Care of Shrubs," etc.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

NURSERYMEN who send plants through the mails should read the article under the heading, "Must Mark Plant Packages," in this week's issue.

GEO. H. FERGUSON has purchased a tract of land just north of Gering, Neb., on which he will establish a nursery, growing stock especially adapted to the section.

THE father of W. N. Scarff, of New Carlisle, O., John J. Scarff, died March 7 at New Carlisle, at the age of 90, from a complication of diseases. An uncle by marriage, Jacob Kissinger, died on the adjoining farm the previous day, at the age of 82.

To make up for the shrinkage of orders from their regular customers this year, many nurserymen will make an effort to open up new fields. If the stock sold does no more than pay the bills for advertising it, it will have done better than if it had only served for firewood.

DURING the corn and alfalfa convention at Aberdeen, S. D., the Northwest Nursery Co., of Valley City, N. D., rented a store in the J. F. Kelley building for display purposes. E. C. Hilborn, manager of the company, addressed the meeting on "Trees for the Farm Home."

A BILL introduced in the California legislature, which will come up for passage at the next session, provides for the centralization of the horticultural inspection force under the state commissioner of horticulture, insuring uniformity, instead of dividing the authority among the various county commissioners.

A. B. FRENCH, the almost 80-year-old head of the French Nursery, at Clyde, O., is among those working for a monument in memory of George B. Meek, a native of Clyde, who was the first American killed in the Spanish-American war. Natives of Clyde point with some pride to the town's record in martial mortality; General James B. Macpherson, the highest ranking officer killed in the Civil war, was born and raised there.

ACCOMPANYING a page of descriptive and historical matter on the Rochester park system, in the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle for March 6 was a portrait and a biography of William C. Barry, president and treasurer of Ellwanger & Barry. He has been a member of the park board since its inception, and is vice-president of the present board, which will give way, under the new law, to a commissioner of parks appointed by the mayor. Mr. Barry has long been chairman of the Highland Park committee, and his firm has contributed liberally to the collection there.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

EVERGREENS FOR MIDDLE WEST.

[The following is from a paper read by A. H. Hill, of Dundee, Ill., before the North Shore Horticultural Society, at Lake Forest, Ill.]

Anyone who has seen or studied European landscape gardening is immediately impressed with the extensive use of evergreens. They furnish the bulk of the material for the basic construction of their gardens. Evergreens in one form or another are seen everywhere throughout Europe, and from the sixteenth century onward their popularity has been preëminent.

It is only within comparatively recent years that the American landscape architect, gardener and planter has awakened to the many and varied uses of evergreens and the important part they must necessarily take in garden making, if permanent effects are desired.

We are a new country, growing and learning fast, but in the mad race for money during the last hundred years but scant interest has been given to permanency. Results are wanted in a day or week, at best a few months. Quick growing, short-lived material has been used with never a thought for the future.

Planters are now waking up to the fact that something is lacking, that something which gives solidity, strength and virility so noticeable in European gardens, where the use of evergreens has predominated for centuries.

But we are learning fast. Fifty years ago it could be said that the average ornamental planting on a country estate consisted of seventy-five per cent deciduous stock and twenty-five per cent evergreens, whereas today, in the eastern part of the United States, along the Atlantic coast, the ratio is sixty-five per cent evergreen stock and thirty-five per cent deciduous, and this ratio is gradually spreading westward.

Best Varieties.

Generally speaking, I believe it is best to confine our middle-west planting to as few varieties as possible, selecting only those which are suited to our conditions.

Evergreens are not particular as to soil. They prefer a light, sandy soil, but will do well in any well drained soil.

Evergreens must be selected with reference to the position they are to occupy, the purpose they are to serve and their relation to the place where they are to grow.

For grouping at entrances, near dwelling houses, and for massing in formal plantings, dwarf evergreens are favorites, because they are always cheerful, in evidence, and wide-awake the year around. Among the best for this purpose are Juniperus Canadensis, Pinus Mughus, globe arborvitæ, Sabina junipers, Juniperus procumbens, Siberian arborvitæ, Japanese yew.

The list of medium growing sorts is more extensive, some of the most valuable being hemlock, Juniperus glauca, Juniperus Schottii, red cedar, pyramidal arborvitæ, American arborvitæ, Swiss Stone pine, Pfitzeriana juniper, Abies concolor, Peabody's and Douglas' golden arborvitæ, Engelmanni spruce.

Some valuable tall-growing sorts are white pine, white spruce, Douglas fir, Austrian pine, Black Hill spruce, red cedar, Colorado blue spruce.

Of the small or dwarf-growing evergreens, by far the best are Juniperus Canadensis and Juniperus Sabina prostrata. They are splendidly suited to our conditions and excellent for rough banks, rocks and ornamental covers.

People often say, "I do not like evergreens; they are too melancholy," and questioning will show that their principal acquaintance is with the Norway spruce. While it is true that the Norway spruce is useful and valuable for some purposes and locations, still the Norway spruce has done more than any other tree to injure the popular demand for evergreens.

Diseases.

The diseases of evergreens are comparatively few, and, as a general rule, mostly confined to a few species, and restricted probably to certain conditions of atmosphere and soil.

A common source of disease is imperfectly drained soil. To be sure, evergreens have some insect enemies, but these are few, indeed, compared with the myriads of insects preying upon our deciduous trees and shrubs.

The most common of the pests usually found upon evergreens in this locality are bagworms, borers, plant-lice and scale insects. Most of these pests can be easily controlled through the use of proper spray mixtures, such as kerosene emulsion, whale oil soap and nicotine washes, applied at the proper season.

Insect injury is most apparent and severe following a hot, dry season, like the summer just passed.

Trimming and Shearing.

The entire system of pruning an evergreen depends much upon the same principles that govern the trees of other classes.

Many evergreens are spoiled through a mistaken idea of beauty by their lower branches being cut off, leaving a long, naked stem, extremely distasteful to the intelligent evergreen planter.

An excellent plan to preserve a perfect shape is to extract the center bud

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations

Cut Flowers
United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

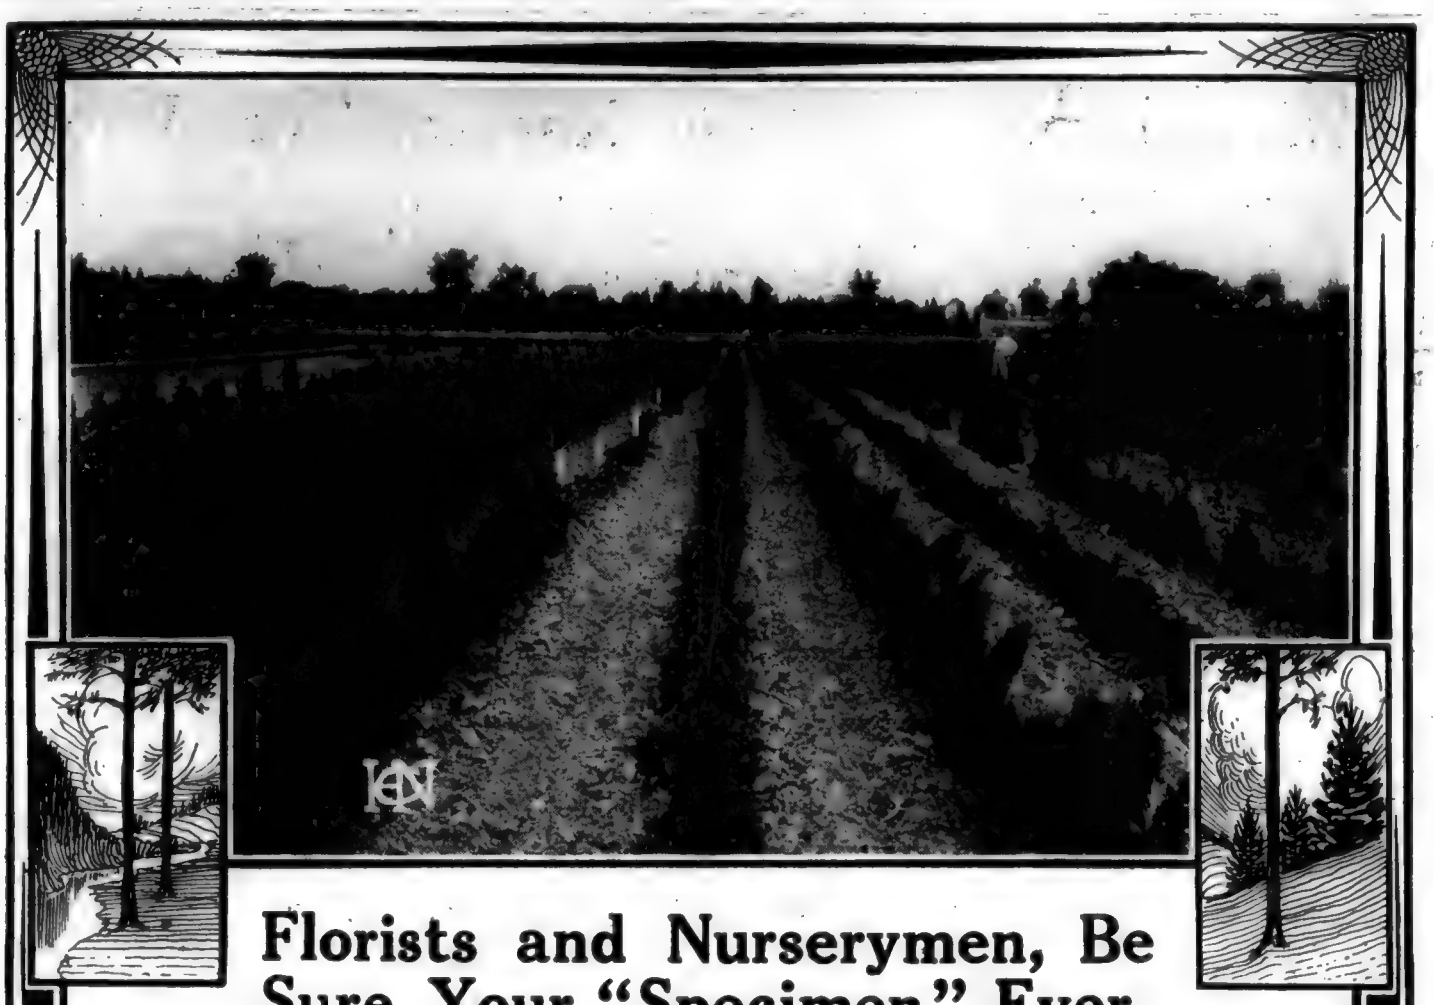
One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver has bought the following lots of Dirt Bands from us:

Dec., 1913	50,000	Jan., 1915	70,000
Jan., 1914	40,000	Mar., 1915	20,000
Mar., 1914	20,000



If he was not getting better plants from them than from clay pots he would not continue to use them so largely.

See our 2-page advertisement, pages 30 and 31.

Florists and Nurserymen, Be Sure Your "Specimen" Evergreens are Real Specimens

GROWING an evergreen to maturity and then referring to it as a "specimen" does not make it one. Every evergreen we sell as a specimen is a real specimen, because each gets the training needed to build a perfect individual out of it.

The production of our specimen evergreens begins with little seedlings the size of a toothpick—and it continues for five, eight, ten or twelve years. As the trees develop we transplant them where they will have more room.

Hill's Evergreens Are The Kind You Want

You can work up a good, profitable, permanent business in Evergreens if you have the right kind of stock. A trial order will convince you that we know how to grow them and that our business methods and prices are right. We are growing Evergreens almost exclusively and have been supplying the Wholesale Trade for over half a century.

Our stock is very complete with all the best varieties of Spruce, Pines, Firs, Junipers, Arbor Vitaes, Yews, Hemlocks, Boxwoods, etc., in small, medium and large sizes for all purposes.

You ought to visit our nurseries and see us growing millions of evergreens to understand properly what patience, experience and special skill it takes to do the job right. We have all three, plus a first class organization to take prompt care of your orders—and our prices are right. Ask for Wholesale Catalog and Bulletin No. 5.

from any shoot that projects beyond the proper limit.

Most of the upright junipers, hemlocks, arborvitæs and cedars are benefited by an annual pruning, either in early spring or late summer, of the overluxuriant branchlets, thereby causing them to thicken and otherwise vastly improve in appearance.

When the leader, or main stem, of an evergreen becomes destroyed by accident or otherwise, a new one may be readily formed by tying up a side branch in as nearly an upright position as possible. Two leaders should never be allowed to remain. The stronger should be selected and the other cut away as soon as noticed.

As a general thing, don't be afraid to trim or prune evergreens; keep the knife on them constantly. Proper trimming will keep them to any height desired for years.

A New Rose of True Worth

We have grown this magnificent rose the past season with most gratifying results. As a free and vigorous grower and great producer it has no equal. It sets bud freely in the short days of winter, and is now coming in with a heavy crop, doing equally well on grafts or own roots.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER is at present more favorably thought of than ever, and we intend to again plant it heavily this season. As a money getter, our experience has proven its superiority over all sorts, and having grown extensively on own roots and grafts, we have no hesitancy in stating that, like Sunburst, it does better on own roots.

We have a splendid lot of both varieties (grafts and own roots) ready for shipment., together with a choice lot of Sunburst, Ward, Prince d'Arenberg, White and Pink Killarney, cuttings taken from sand the latter part of December. For prices and further particulars write

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

During the last week the weather has been unsettled, with cold March winds. This meant uncertain crops in the main, though there were fairly large quantities of many kinds of flowers received, and of some there was an abundance. Sales have been only fair, though there has been considerable funeral work. A lack of large social functions curtailed cut flower sales a little.

The prices of roses are reasonable, but the supply is not overlarge, because of the fact that the growers are holding back in order to have a large supply for Easter. Carnations are fairly abundant and are selling well, Victory being in special demand. Sweet peas are selling well. Some of the local florists have some beautiful Spencers. The prices of both carnations and sweet peas are reasonable. Pansies are coming in well and are easy in price. There is a fair sale of giganteum lilies, and some callas are being called for. Good mignonette is just coming into the market, and a supply of French lilacs has been received by some. There is an active demand for orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley. Bulbous flowers, such as jonquils, narcissi, daffodils, hyacinths and freesias, are being sold in considerable quantities at moderate prices. There are some beautiful azaleas in the market. Many florists have already ordered their Easter supplies.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report that in general business compares favorably with former years. They have had an unusually large amount of funeral work, but less pertaining to large social functions. The cut flower trade, they report, is good.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, and G. W. Ludolff, of the firm of Ludolff & Kautzmann, 109 Springfield avenue, were members of the committee of arrangements for the great white way opening on Springfield avenue. Never before in the history of that thoroughfare were there so many people on the street. A large parade followed the turning on of the fifty-four flaming arcs, and this in turn was followed by a banquet addressed by the mayor of the city and other dignitaries. The stores of both Mr. Luthy and Mr. Ludolff were decorated with American flags and bunting, and they both had attractive window displays.

F. W. ROCHELLE & SONS, Chester, N. J.

Fastened to a potted rosebush in the window of George Penek, at 673 Broad street, last week, was a chipping sparrow's nest, which had been found in one of the suburbs of Newark. It had in it one egg and the skeleton of a small chipping sparrow. There was also on display in the window a huge bunch of Enchantress carnations.

R. B. M.

Our New Rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong, upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large, handsome, dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink, deepening toward the center, with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose. It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

WE WILL BE GLAD TO QUOTE ON APPLICATION PRICES ON ALL THE NEWER AND STANDARD VARIETIES—STRONG, GRAFTED PLANTS READY IN MARCH

SAGINAW, MICH.

The Market.

The supply of cut flowers has increased, so the worry from one day to the other is taken away. Roses are more abundant, while carnations are still scarce. There are plenty of lilies to meet all demands. Sweet peas are plentiful and the demand is good. Spring flowers are the big sellers with all the florists.

St. Patrick's day saw all the white carnations sold, because every one is Irish on that day and the wearing of green is in order by all. The sales for Easter are expected to be larger than ever, and everyone has a good lot of bulbous stock and fine lilies to display Easter week. Azaleas are expected to be scarce.

Various Notes.

A carload of pots has arrived in Saginaw for the shifting of spring plants.

William Roethke Floral Co. has the most perfect cinerarias seen in a long time.

Grohmann the Florist makes a specialty of tumbler baskets and says they are good sellers.

Charles Frueh & Sons have the finest Easter lilies they have had in eight or ten years. So says William Robertson, the foreman, and he knows.

J. B. Goetz Sons are cutting a quantity of orchid-flowering sweet peas with stems eighteen inches long. The ordinary sweet peas are not in demand while the customers can see the orchid-flowering type.

C. A. Hawley, of Vassar, Mich., was a visitor last week. He says business was the best this winter since he has been in the trade. Gee.

Delphi, Ind.—Harry Myers has purchased the old Connelly property in Monticello from Attorney Smith. He will build greenhouses on it.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

The weather for the last two weeks has been unusually bright. The quality of cut flowers is good. Plenty of stock can be secured at reasonable prices, but, as is usual during Lent, business is quiet.

Club Meeting.

The Connecticut Horticultural Society held carnation night at its regular meeting March 12. Two new seedlings were exhibited. William Dawson, of Willimantic, staged his new seedling, Red Wing, which has the appearance of a good commercial variety. It is a free bloomer, and has already averaged fourteen flowers per plant. It was awarded a first-class certificate. A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, exhibited Arawana, a scarlet seedling. It was also awarded a first-class certificate. J. Huss and President Mason both exhibited some of the standard varieties. There was a good attendance. Much enthusiasm was aroused over a spring flower show, to be held June 10. The next regular meeting will be rose and ladies' night.

Various Notes.

A. N. Pierson and E. J. Johnson were recently in Chicago, inspecting the various styles of construction used by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn, and other large places.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., has exhibits at both the New York and Boston shows this week. R. C. S.

Columbia City, Ind.—Dr. C. W. Burket, of Warsaw, has exchanged his 158-acre farm near Coesse for the North Side Greenhouses, which were owned by E. A. Stanton and Fred A. King. Mr. Stanton will move to the farm, and Mr. King expects to go to Rensselaer, Ind.

A recent visitor remarked while passing along our propagating bed filled with carnation cuttings, "Why, you don't seem to lose any cuttings at all!" You see, it's this way:—we select our cuttings to a uniform size. That gets them all in about the same stage of growth, hence they root evenly and very few of them are lost. They are bound to be vigorous under those conditions, don't you think? We have in sand now, most of them ready for immediate shipment:

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Shamrocks and green carnations furnished the greater part of the activity since the middle of last week. Never has there been such a general display of green and Tipperary windows caught the popular fancy. The demand for St. Patrick's day novelties was a stimulating influence for the rest of the market, so that conditions were the best for a long time. Carnations and roses moved well, with prices slightly better than the preceding week. Violets were almost a drug on the market, growers bringing them in by the thousands and dumping them at almost any price.

Various Notes.

Hoffman, of Pawtucket, placed 2,000 shamrock plants in 1¼-inch pots with one department store in this city last week.

William I. Brown, manager of the Providence Seed Co., and wife have invitations out for the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, March 19.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. O'Connor are spending a few days at Atlantic City, where they are stopping at the Chalfonte.

Robert Lamont has taken a position at the Quidneck Greenhouses as rose grower.

Louie Pierce, of Norwood, was a visitor in New York last week.

Miss Lottie Krickstein, for two years bookkeeper for J. Koppelman & Co., has given up her position on account of her health.

Fred Covel, formerly manager of the Shepard flower department, but now located in Boston, is in the city visiting friends.

Henry Patry has engaged with Smith the Florist for the remainder of the season.

Charles Hunt had ten large designs for one funeral recently, and twelve for another. W. H. M.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

IS THE BOILER LARGE ENOUGH?

Will you please let me know whether a Wilks hot water boiler, 24x42 inches, will heat a greenhouse, 24x76 feet, which has five feet of glass in the side walls and is nine feet high to the ridge? The house runs north and south. The south end is glass; the north end is attached to the boiler house and workroom. The lowest outside temperature here this winter was 12 degrees above zero and the cold spells usually last only a few days, but once in a long while there is a decidedly cold spell, which lasts longer and has below-zero temperatures. I have the boiler and should like to extend the house to the length mentioned, if that will not be taking too much risk. M. R. P. F.—Tex.

The letter does not state what temperature is desired in the house and hence it is not possible to give a definite answer to the question. A Wilks hot water boiler, 24x42 inches, is rated for 500 square feet of radiating surface, which will answer for 2,250 square feet of glass at 45 degrees, 2,000 square feet at 50 degrees, 1,750 at 55 degrees and 1,500 at 60 degrees, when it is zero outside.

A greenhouse 24x76 feet and nine feet to the ridge, with five feet of glass in each of the side walls, will contain about 2,750 square feet of glass. While a boiler 24x42 inches would maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in mild weather, I would not expect to keep the house much above 40 degrees with ordinary firing when the outside temperature drops to 10 degrees above zero, although it might be possible to carry the house at 50 degrees by giving the fire frequent attention while the cold spell lasts.

A house twenty-four feet wide and nine feet to the ridge would have an unusually flat roof, and it occurs to me that the ridge may be nine feet above the plates, or about fourteen feet from the ground, which is a more usual height for a 24-foot house. This would add something like 300 square feet to the area of the glass and make the house that much more difficult to heat. In that case I should not care

FRANK OECHSLIN'S PLANT RANGE—100,000 square feet of glass heated by KROESCHELL BOILERS.

Chicago's Leading Plant Establishment

TEN years have been sufficient to make the history of the plant trade in Chicago and Frank Oechslin is the man who has in a single decade established this business and built the only exclusive wholesale plant range in the big western city.

The first land (ten lots) was bought in 1902 and the first greenhouses (six small ones) were built the following year—there are now 31 large houses, 600 hot bed sash and ten acres of land in evidence of Mr. Oechslin's skill as a grower.

One of the principles upon which the Oechslin business has been built is to be satisfied with nothing short of the best a greenhouse can be made to produce. To produce the best, only the best in greenhouse material and construction has been employed.

Mr. Oechslin's greenhouses are now the show-place of the city and visitors there are always welcome. Go and see them and when you admire the perfection of the plants and the cleanliness of the place, remember to visit the boiler rooms and note that the name KROESCHELL is found on every one of the boilers.

to risk the boiler unless the house is to be used for plants which would not be injured if the temperature should drop below 40 degrees for short periods.

HOT WATER OR STEAM?

We note that when people are in doubt they evidently go to The Review for information. We expect to tear down our greenhouse and build a larger one after the spring trade is over. We grow a general line of potted plants. The carnation is the principal plant that we grow for cut blooms. Which is the better way to run the house, north and south or east and west? If we run it east and west, our residence will help to shelter it from the northwest winds. We are now heating with steam; which is the better, steam or hot water? We have 400 feet of 2-inch pipe that we wish to use.

The house will be 27x100, with 5-foot walls. One wall will consist of three feet of concrete and two feet of glass; the other wall will contain sixteen inches of glass. We wish to maintain a temperature of 48 to 52 degrees at night. We are located about 150 miles southwest of Chicago. We also wish to heat two rooms in our residence with the same boiler; the rooms are each 14x15. The boiler room will be connected to the house. How large a boiler will be required? Please give your idea as to the piping of the greenhouse. We can sink the boiler to any depth that is necessary.

T. E. G.

It makes little difference whether the house runs east and west or north and south, and if it would be any more sheltered if it runs east and west I would certainly locate it that way. A steam heating system is cheaper in first cost, but it requires more attention than a hot water system and, especially for small houses, will be found less economical. In most cases hot water is used for less than 1,000 square feet of radiation. The 2-inch pipe could be used for a part of the returns in a hot water plant, but while they might be used in a steam heating plant I would prefer 1¼-inch pipe for the coils.

The greenhouse will require about 900 square feet of hot water radiation, and the two rooms in the dwelling will take about 100 square feet more, though the exact amount will depend upon the area of window surface and exposed wall, as well as the temperature desired. It is always advisable to have considerable surplus capacity in a boiler and I would select one with a rating of 1,250 to 1,400 square feet of hot water radiation. To heat the greenhouse with hot water, use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. Locate one flow on each plate and the other about three feet below the ridge. Connect these pipes with the returns arranged in three coils of three pipes each.

If steam is used, the boiler should have a rating of 750 square feet. To use the 2-inch pipes with steam, put in one 2-inch flow pipe on each plate, with two 2-inch and four 1¼-inch returns. However, I would prefer to use one 2½-inch flow under the ridge and nine 1¼-inch returns. It will be well to have the top of the boiler below the level of the returns, for hot water, and for steam it will be well to have it two or three feet lower.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful and, judging from present reports, will continue so until Easter. Business is fair, but the demand is not quite strong enough to take up all receipts. Shipping business continues good.

The general quality of the roses offered is of the highest order. All of the pink ones have a good color. American Beauty offerings are sufficient for present needs. Carnations are coming in much more heavily and prices on all but white have taken a decided tumble. Lilies are plentiful and sell at reasonable prices. Bulbous stock meets with an indifferent market. Valley is selling slowly. Sweet peas are good, but do not bring high prices. The supply of greens is fully adequate for immediate needs. Green sheet moss is meeting with a strong call.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell reports a strong call for green sheet moss.

Visitors include Anton C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal.; E. J. Fancourt, representing S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, and Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York. C. H. H.

Mendham, N. J.—Ernest Combs is making preparations for erecting a greenhouse on his truck farm on the Mt. Freedom road. The building will be used principally for growing carnations and other marketable plants.

Hartford City, Ind.—Revivals are apparently good things for florists. At any rate, the Bob Jones tabernacle meetings here have been so. The members of the organizations, associations and delegations which attend the meetings as a body wear carnations.

Mr. Stahelin, of Detroit, Says Greenhouse Watering by Skinner System Can Be Done at Extremely Low Cost

Just read this letter received from him February 18 of this year:

"I have had the Skinner System in my greenhouse for a number of years. Every once in a while I find it of the greatest convenience in giving my crops a good, heavy watering in the form of a fine spray.

"In spite of the fact that I do not use the System for daily watering, I find its occasional use so valuable that its cost is a small item compared with the results that it makes possible.

"A. J. Stahelin.

"P. S. The watering is done at extremely low cost."

A Try Out Try

This summer, when wetting down your house becomes such a task, the Skinner System Scatter Mist spray method will be particularly valuable to you.

Just turn a valve and the Skinner System does the rest. One of our Complete Portable Lines, 50 feet long, all equipped with easy, quick acting couplings, ready for set up—will cost you so little as $11.75.

If you send cash, we will pay freight or send two sets of nozzles—one set for greenhouse, the other for outside. Be sure to say which you want us to do.

For $23 we will send you 100 feet.

Or you can buy just the nozzles, turning unions, hangers and a drilling machine from us, and fit up your own pipe.

RADIUM MAKES THINGS GROW

Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.)—the New Fertilizer Sold in Handy Packages—Your Customers Will Call For It.

All persons interested in growing things are now preparing to plant. They will use a fertilizer. And they will use Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.), because it is a good fertilizer with the added advantage of Radium. Florists will be among the first dealers asked to supply this new Fertilizer, because we are advertising it every month to more than two million interested people.

RADIUM BRAND Fertilizer (R A F)

is a plant food containing Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash and Radium. It has been thoroughly tested on a 130-acre farm and by such eminent scientists as Dr. H. H. Rusby, Dean of the College of Pharmacy of Columbia University, New York City. It is sure to be a big seller. You, as a florist, can add to your profits by carrying a supply always on hand.

Radium as a Tonic

You are no doubt familiar with the effects of Radium upon plant life. Experiments covering years have been conducted in this country and Europe and conclusive evidence of results obtained. These results told in our interesting free booklet, "Radium Makes Things Grow," illustrated with photographs of plant life grown with and without Radium Brand Fertilizer (R. A. F.). Write today for this booklet.

Special Discounts to Dealers

We desire to place Radium Brand Fertilizer (R.A.F.) on sale in your store now. We have a most attractive offer to induce you to do so. Write us today for particulars and let us show you the many helps we will give you to push sales. Some of our helps are unique, but you will admit they are effective.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

During the last week there have been signs of improvement in business, especially during the first three days, when conditions were good. There is an abundance of flowers, but the market is not overstocked except in jonquils and daffodils. American Beauties, for which there is no great demand, are of good quality. Long-stemmed Marylands and Sunbursts find ready sale, as do also Wards, Richmonds and Prince d'Arenberg.

The quality of carnations varies. Orchid-flowering sweet peas sell well. The demand for Easter and calla lilies is fair, with stock of good quality. Valley is good, but drags as usual.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week were Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; the representative of Wm. B. Lake, Philadelphia, and Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York.

The decorations for the new suit and cloak store of Malley & Co., on East avenue, were done by George T. Boucher. A number of horseshoes, vases and baskets were the work of some of the other florists.

The mayor has appointed the following heads of the new park system for Rochester: Commissioner, Alexander B. Lamberton; superintendent, C. C. Laney; assistant superintendent, John Dunbar.

The regular monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held Monday, March 8, at 95 East Main street. George Arnold, of James Vick's Sons, spoke on "Growing Seeds in This Country." J. M. Keller gave an interesting talk on "Hardy Perennials for Florists' Cut Flowers." Music was given by the quartet and songs by Mr. Boucher.

The monthly meeting of the Lady Florists' Club was held Tuesday, March 9, at the home of Mrs. E. R. Fry, on Cottage street. The business meeting was followed by games and refreshments. The April meeting will be held at the Elm Bowling hall. Miss Crook, of Mt. Hope avenue, will entertain. H. J. H.

This is farmers' week at the Massachusetts Agricultural College and, as the visiting farmers include many who are interested in one branch or another of the trade, Prof. A. H. Nehrling arranged a special program for the department of floriculture, as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 16.

"Selection and Care of House Plants," F. E. Palmer, Brookline.
"Garden Planning," P. H. Elwood, Jr., M. A. C.
"The Use of Annuals in the Garden," E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17.

"Trees and Shrubs for the Home Grounds," A. K. Harrison, M. A. C.
"Diseases of Floricultural Plants," A. J. Anderson, M. A. C.
"The Culture of Herbaceous Perennials," Maurice Fuld, New York city.
"Outdoor Rose Culture," Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.
"The Forcing of Plants," Ernest Downer, Northampton, Mass.
Question Box, conducted by A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

An exhibition of spring flowers was staged in French hall, March 17, most of the stock being donated by members of the trade who are interested in the work of the department.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Association held its meeting Thursday evening, March 4, in the Moore building. Regular routine business was transacted, and Frederick Miller, of Norristown, was elected to membership. Plans were discussed for the annual banquet, which will be held April 8 at the Berkshire hotel. The following committee was appointed to make arrangements for the affair; Stanley Giles, Harry Huesman, Fulmer Lauck, Fred Frank and William Kern. The following were appointed as the decoration committee: Stanley Giles, Harry Huesman and Harry Heck. There will be several out-of-town speakers.

Two layers of glass instead of one

One small inexpensive greenhouse made of Sunlight Double Glass Sash.

Get our catalog

This book points the way to bigger profits in gardening. It gives the actual experience of growers all over the country—tells how they, with the aid of Sunlight Double Glass Sash grew bigger, stronger, earlier plants which yielded the big, early market prices.

This catalog is free. If Prof. Massey's booklet on the care and use of a hot-bed, cold frame or a small greenhouse is wanted, send 4c in stamps.

Early plants make the profitable garden

You cannot possibly have vegetables ready for the early prices or flower beds to bloom right unless you use hot-beds and cold frames for starting and expediting them.

Now is the time

Sunlight Double Glass Sash make the earliest and strongest plants at the least cost of labor and money. They are complete without mats or shutters. As they are never covered the plants get all the light and warmth that the sun affords and are secure against the cold night and day.

Expert gardeners and florists, men who know from experience, look upon the Sunlight Double Glass Sash as the standard of efficiency in gardening.

Immediate shipment is made and freights are equalized to the customer according to the distance. Ask about this when you write—and write today.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, March 10. President E. Westlake presided over the meeting. Arthur Harris, of Glen Cove, was elected to active membership and one petition for active membership was received.

The president appointed the following as judges for the monthly exhibits: J. W. Everitt, J. Ashworth and T. Twigg. Their awards were as follows: Twelve white carnations, J. McCarthy, first; twelve pink, F. Honeyman, first; twelve any other color, F. Honeyman, first. The special prize, a fountain pen, offered by President Westlake for the best vase of twenty-five carnations, mixed, was won by F. Honeyman. A vase of a seedling antirrhinum was exhibited by A. Fournier and was awarded a certificate of merit. Bush beans, exhibited by J. F. Johnstone, received honorable mention. A collection of greenhouse flowers by H. Jones also received honorable mention.

The exhibits at the next meeting, April 14, will be a vase of flowering shrubs, six gardenias and a vase of twelve roses, mixed varieties.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club took place March 10 at the G. H. Sinclair greenhouses at Smith's Ferry. In addition to a large attendance of members, there was present a party of students of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, accompanied by Prof. Nehrling. President Sefton, of Hitchings & Co., was the principal speaker of the evening, and his subject was "Modern Greenhouse Construction."

There were many exhibits by the members. Those to whom awards were made were as follows: Gallivan Bros., ericas; Mr. Whiting, M. A. C., vases of Beacon and Enchantress carnations; G. H. Sinclair, vases of sweet peas. Several other exhibits were given honorable mention. The April meeting will take place with F. D. Keyes, Florence.

Gentlemen:

Thanks for the photos, which show the greenhouse up very well. I am well pleased with the greenhouse you have built for me adjoining my residence at South Nyack, and consider, on the whole, it has been built according to the specifications. Before closing my contract with you, I secured tenders from half a dozen other concerns, and on close comparison, found yours were much the lower figures consistent with good material and workmanship.

We have made several improvements in our forms for building our "Sectional Concrete Bench," which has not only reduced the cost of the forms, but the finished bench also. The difference between the cost of a concrete bench and a cypress bench is in the labor. With our improved forms we have reduced the time in building our bench, so that the finished bench costs very little more than one of cypress.

Don't install any kind of a bench until you are positive you do not want the "McCaslin Sectional Concrete Bench," which is the CHEAPEST, most durable and convenient bench, because it is strong enough to wheel 400 to 500 lbs. over with perfect safety.

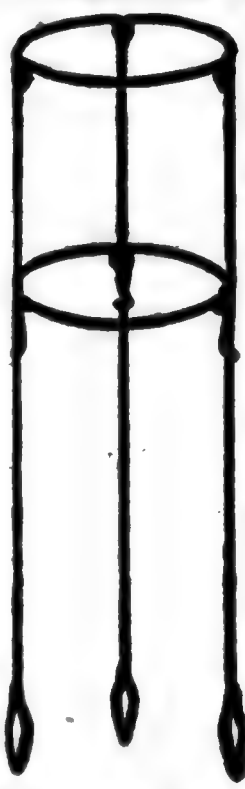
PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh had a week of regular March weather, most of it being raw and cold, with rain and snow. Stock has not been overplentiful, except bulbous stock. Some fine sweet peas are finding ready sale. Roses have not been abundant, but a good crop for Easter is assured. Valley has been somewhat of a glut, as the demand seems off entirely. Beauties still are scarce. Carnations are about equal to the demand. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

The wholesale houses seem fairly busy for the season, the large quantity of funeral work doing its share to make a demand for stock. This work is well distributed among all outside towns, so that shipping business is good. The retail stores, while not busy, are not showing their usual Lenten dullness and anticipate a good Easter business. While one day does not make up a season's business, it indicates largely what the season has been and our retailers have had less to complain of than any other line of trade.



Various Notes.

Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, has the sympathy of his friends in the loss of his wife, who died March 10. Mrs. Sheaff had been ill for several months. The funeral services were held from the home of Mr. Sheaff's parents, at Canonsburg, Pa., March 12.

Fred Burki writes from Los Angeles, Cal., that he and his family are having a splendid time and that he met Walter Garbet, an old Pittsburgh boy, who is in the flower business out there.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY MEETS

Sixteenth annual meeting of the American Rose Society held at Boston, March 18. Society's exhibition overshadowed by the New York show, which draws off all but four large exhibitors. Committee appointed to consider uniform grading of cut roses offered for sale.

ALTHOUGH it was expected that the New York show, held on the same days as that of the American Rose Society at Boston, would affect the display of roses in some measure, it was not thought that the number of exhibitors of cut roses would shrink to four. But such was the case. Without the participation of the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., Westerly, R. I., and the Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., there would have been no display of cut roses at all.

The quality of the roses was unusually high, however. The Killarney Queen roses were remarkable. The new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, showed up well. Strange to say, there were no entries at all for American Beauties, although the retailers used numbers of them in their baskets, etc. Prince E. C. d'Arenberg and Mrs. Charles Russell showed up remarkably well. Ophelia, however, seemed to take the eyes of the multitude over all other varieties.

In addition to the entries for prizes, M. H. Walsh staged a carload of specimen ramblers in tubs in all the best varieties he has raised. Pierce Bros. showed a climbing sport of Killarney.

Business Meeting.

The business meeting of the American Rose Society was called to order after a dinner at the Parker House, March 18, where the society met by invitation of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. About sixty were present. After the excellent menu had been disposed of, Patrick Welch welcomed the visitors on behalf of the horticultural interests of Boston. He then introduced the mayor of Boston, J. M. Curley, who received a warm welcome. J. K. M. L. Farquhar spoke a welcome on behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. W. F. Gude said he had never seen a higher quality of plants and cut flowers at any show in America than at the present Boston show.

The president's address was followed by the secretary's report. Treasurer Harry O. May then presented his report, the reading of which in detail was omitted. The receipts for the year were $1,875.89, the disbursements $667.60, and cash in bank $1,208.29. The investment account showed: Westchester & Bronx Title & Mortgage Guaranty Co., three mortgage certificates, $3,000; Summit Trust Co., guaranty fund, $150, Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard medal fund, $250. The treasurer stated that in his ten years of service at no time has so large a cash balance been in the treasury as there is now.

Alexander Cummings, of Hartford, spoke on the rose gardens there and at Washington. At the latter place there are over 307 varieties. There are 107 hybrid teas alone at Cornell. This spring 475 varieties will be planted at Washington. F. L. Mulford, of Washington, said he had secured the gift of a number of species of roses from Arnold Arboretum since he had come to Boston. The Brookland Rose Society, of Washington, had joined the American Rose Society lately. Professor A. C. Beal said they had at Cornell a big collection of roses in pots ready to plant out the coming spring, and they had received a surprising number of gifts from Europe, considering the present conditions there.

The next business in order was the selecting of a place of meeting. Wm. F. Gude spoke of the importance of the national flower show to be held in Philadelphia in 1916, and moved that the American Rose Society accept the invitation already extended to its executive committee, provided that satisfactory arrangements be made with the executive committee. Thomas Roland stated that the American Rose Society, as a society, should do all that it possibly could to aid the Philadelphia florists to make a success of their show, and therefore moved the striking out of any qualification to the acceptance. Mr. Gude accepted the amendment, and Eber Holmes, of Montrose, Mass., moved the acceptance in its amended form. President Pierson put the motion, and it was unanimously adopted.

The president read a letter from Frank A. Friedley stating that the Cleveland Florists' Club will hold a large exhibition in November, and that one of the days had been set apart as rose day, with a prize list of $700. They invited the Rose Society to assume charge of the rose exhibition. The president was directed to appoint a committee to act as representatives of the American Rose Society in doing whatever was necessary to make the rose show a success at Cleveland. The president named as one member of the committee W. G. Bate, and stated that he would select two other members later.

Election of Officers.

Joseph Heacock nominated Samuel S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, for president. After the nomination was seconded, it was moved that the nominations be closed and that the secretary cast one ballot for Mr. Pennock. Joseph Heacock was nominated for vice-president, but withdrew in favor of Louis J. Reuter, who was unanimously elected. Benjamin Hammond was reëlected secretary and Harry O. May treasurer.

The election of S. S. Pennock and Louis J. Reuter made vacancies in the executive committee, in addition to those of the two regular members whose terms of office had expired, Frank R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J. The member to succeed F. R. Pierson is the retiring president, Wallace R. Pierson. Robert Simpson was reëlected, and the member chosen to succeed S. S. Pennock for his term of one year was Robert Pyle. The member selected to succeed Louis Reuter, whose unexpired term is for two years, was Eber Holmes.

President Pierson brought up the matter of the desirability of amending the by-laws so that the retiring president should become a member of the executive committee for the term of one year. It was moved that a recommendation of such an amendment be brought up at the next annual meeting.

W. R. Pierson said the S. A. F. had in an irregular manner elected a director to the S. A. F. from this society, which should have voted on the matter first. It was decided to accept the affiliation.

President Pierson called attention to the matter of a standard for the grading of roses, which was brought up in the annual meeting of 1911, when a committee made a report upon the subject, but nothing had come from it in a definite way. S. S. Pennock spoke of the desirability of adopting a standard method of designating cut blooms for sale. Some discussion ensued, and various questions were raised. It was finally moved that the president appoint a committee to take the matter up and act in conjunction with the executive committee, and report at the next annual meeting of the American Rose Society. President Pierson nominated as such committee S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, Patrick Welch, of Boston, and Frank H. Traendly, of New York.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the annual meeting of the Society of American Florists, in August.

THE BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

Sets a Record.

The spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, running from March 18 to 21, shattered all records for the quality and number of exhibits and attendance, and set a new high-water mark which it will be difficult to pass. Visitors from a distance were unanimous in commending the splendid quality of the exhibits and the tasteful arrangement. The plants and cut flowers were so numerous that they were unduly crowded. In fact, so great was the demand for space that some could not be accommodated at all, something new in Boston, and I have never seen such enthusiasm for an exhibition as the one just closed, although, with the exception of a few vases of roses, all the exhibits came from within twenty miles of Boston.

I doubt if any finer lot of hard-wooded plants have been staged at any show in America. Orchids were shown in great numbers. Bulbous plants were grand; so were cyclamens. In fact, there was nothing poor in the whole show.

The great feature in the main exhibition hall was the beautiful Dutch garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., with windmill, fountains, rest house and attractive beds and borders of bulbous flowers and quantities of such shrubs as Azalea Kæmpferi, magnolias, prunus, forsythias, wistarias and many others. The whole garden, occupying one-half of the floor space, was completed in twelve hours, and I doubt if any work done by this firm ever received more praise from the crowds of visitors. Roland's acacias and other hard-wooded plants, Walsh's ramblers, Dolansky's, Butterworth's, Dane's and Weld's orchids, were all noteworthy. A pleasing feature was the notable showing of the retailers, who were out in force. MacMulkin, Galvin, Hoffman, Penn, Wax Bros., the Houghton-Gorney Co., Palmer, the Boston Cut Flower Co., Comley and others, all vied for supremacy.

The Awards.

The awards in the principal classes were:

Twenty-five any new variety—Waban Rose Conservatories, first, with Mrs. Moorfield Storey, awarded a silver medal.

Among the numerous miscellaneous displays were the following: A collection of specimen ericas from T. D. Hatfield, gardener to Walter Hunnewell, awarded a silver medal. Berberis Wilsonæ from the same exhibitor received honorable mention, and Dendrobium Wellesley (D. murrhiniacum x D. Victoria Regina) from this exhibitor received a silver medal. William Sim received a silver medal for a grand display of pansies and the same award for a magnificent lot of sweet peas, among which Rose Queen, Anita Wehrman, Orchid and Christmas Pink Spencer were noteworthy.

Miscellaneous Displays.

Henry Stewart had some magnificent specimens of Dendrobium nobile, genistas, roses, miscellaneous spring plants and violets in pots. J. L. Smith received a silver medal for Brasso-cattleya Veitchii. Mrs. A. Breck received a bronze medal for a fine display of Darwin and cottage tulips. Dana R. Craig had a nice bank of spring plants. Faulkner Farm received a first-class certificate for a group of ericas, marguerites, genistas, etc. They also had a group of orchids and cinerarias. Jackson Dawson received honorable mention for a new azalea, a cross between A. Kæmpferi and A. amœna. Thomas Watt had a nice table of orchids, as had Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane. Duncan Finlayson received a certificate of merit for Cymbidium Paulwelsii. William Walke had a fine group of French hydrangeas. W. C. Rust had splendid specimen genistas. E. H. Borowski and the Breck-Robinson Nursery Co. had superb cyclamens. The last named firm secured a first-class cultural certificate. The beautiful Dutch garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received a gold medal. Thomas Roland received a silver medal for a grand collection of hard-wooded plants.

Retailers and Orchids.

Thomas F. Galvin put up a large dinner table decoration of the new salmon pink rose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, raised by the Waban Rose Conservatories, and was awarded a bronze medal. H. Huebner for his new strain of winter-flowering snapdragons secured a first-class certificate. Penn, Hoffman, the Boston Cut Flower Co. and H. F. Comley all had beautiful displays of baskets, etc., of cut flowers attractively arranged. William Sim and Esty Bros. had large violet displays. Littlefield & Wyman received a certificate of merit for Carnation Miss Theo, and Edward Winkler received the same award for Morning Glow.

The orchids made a remarkable display. W. C. Rust led for the best 50-foot group; F. J. Dolansky was second and J. T. Butterworth, third. For six orchids, E. B. Dane was first. His plants were Phalænopsis amabilis, Dendrobium nobile and D. Wardianum, Oncidium varicosum, Cypripedium aureum Hyeanum and Odontoglossum hystrix. For specimen orchids, Henry Stewart led with grand Dendrobium nobile.

The decorated dinner tables proved a center of attraction. These were contested for each day with prizes. On the first day MacMulkin won, with a pretty decoration of Dendrobium nobile and valley, and Mrs. Duncan Finlayson was second with pink sweet peas. On the second day Mrs. Stella Coram led with Ward roses, and MacMulkin was second with a charming centerpiece of yellow pansies and valley. On the third day Wax Bros. were first with an arrangement of Cattleya Schrœderæ and Farleyense fern; Penn was second with pale lilac sweet peas and Cecile Brunner roses. There were two entries each day.

In addition to flowers and plants there were fine displays of vegetables and fruits. Hoffman supplied canaries and other small song birds in prettily decorated elevated cages, which made a unique addition and a pleasing one.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Memphis, Tenn.—Albert Haisch, who has conducted a retail store at 87 Madison avenue since February 15, 1913, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States court March 18. Liabilities amounting to $5,613.77 are scheduled, with assets as follows:

Stock	$ 800.00
Fixtures	450.00
Cash register	110.00
Insurance policy	300.00
Book accounts	2,432.55
Total	$4,092.55

Omar L. Jewell, with offices in the Tennessee Trust building, was appointed receiver to continue the business until an election of a trustee can be held.

Mr. Haisch was, for several years, connected with the Memphis Floral Co., but started on his own account some time before that concern went into bankruptcy. He did a large business, but apparently lacked capital and the ability to accumulate it. The schedule of liabilities shows fifty-five creditors, nearly all well-known although widely scattered firms in the trade, but including a number who do not usually figure in such records. Seven claims exceed $200, but all except one of these are below $400. The only large claim is one for $2,014.45.

Waterbury, Conn.—George T. Ryan filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy recently, through his attorney, Frank Hogan, and the first meeting of his creditors was held March 15 in the bankruptcy court. Liabilities are placed at $2,300 and assets at $600. His creditors are mostly trade concerns.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW

Annual exhibition of New York florists and 400 repeats success of former years in number and quality of exhibits and in gate receipts FINANCIALLY, artistically and quantitatively, the New York show of 1915 may be said to have equaled and perhaps surpassed those of last year and the year before. Its success this year as a financial undertaking demonstrated the possibility of making it a yearly event that will, in the words of the president of the Grand Central Palace Exposition Co., "take precedence of horse shows, automobile shows, dog shows and every variety of exhibition that has hitherto won the recognition of the 400." For it must be acknowledged that the Red Cross tea garden and other activities of the society ladies contributed materially to the large gate receipts.

But for the artistic quality and high standard of the exhibits, credit goes unreservedly to the growers and retailers who furnished the entries and decorations. There were, of course, some things lacking; perhaps it is as well to state them and get them over with. Thomas Roland's acacias and W. A. Manda's specimens, for instance, were conspicuous by their absence. The small showing, too, of the New York retailers was a subject of remark, only G. E. M. Stumpp and Max Schling making displays. But there were other features, the rose gardens of A. N. Pierson, Inc., and the F. R. Pierson Co., for instance, that went far to fill the places of the absent ones.

The Rose Gardens.

These rose gardens were all the week the center of interest for a large and admiring crowd. F. R. Pierson's exhibit consisted largely of roses of the rambler type, which were arranged in a series of twelve beds, with gravel walks separating the beds.

A. N. Pierson's exhibit was staged in a more open manner, on the lines of an old-fashioned garden, with a rustic fence surrounding it. It looked most realistic, with stone walks and a rustic summer house in the corner, covered with climbing roses. A. N. Pierson was placed first in this exhibit, but it must be stated that both exhibits were wonderfully fine.

The orchid groups, particularly those of the Julius Roehrs Co. and Lager & Hurrell, were also the objects of much commendation. There were groups of large evergreens from the F. R. Pierson Co., the Julius Roehrs Co. and Bobbink & Atkins. Other exhibits of special interest were Wm. Tricker's water lilies, John Canning's group of flowering plants, P. W. Popp's lilacs, the carnation exhibit of the Cottage Gardens Co. and the fine collection of ferns from the F. R. Pierson Co.

Flowering Plants.

The group calling for flowering plants in a space of 200 feet brought out no less than six competitors. The first prize was awarded to William Duckham, of Madison, N. J., for a splendid exhibit, with acacias in the background mixed with tropæolum, massed in the center with amaryllis, and lilacs and schizanthus on either side. F. E. Lewis, of Ridgefield, Conn., was awarded the second prize in this class, with a most beautiful arrangement of fruit trees in flower, narcissi, tulips, schizanthus, and a varied assortment of spring flowering plants.

The awards on plants in flower were as follows:

Group of flowering plants, covering 200 square feet—W. H. Duckham, first; J. W. Smith, second.

Foliage Plants.

The groups in foliage plants staged by the Julius Roehrs Co., Bobbink & Atkins and the Knight & Struck Co., while they furnished nothing apparently new in the line of plants, showed great advantage in the stage effects over previous years, everything being plainly labeled and the effects being a decided break-away from the old haystack style of grouping.

Forced shrubs and herbaceous plants furnished a most attractive group staged by the Julius Roehrs Co., and since the widest latitude was allowed in all the exhibits, it also furnished an object lesson in a more natural method of staging.

The awards on foliage and miscellaneous plant classes were:

COMMERCIAL GROWERS.

Flowering and foliage, stove and greenhouse plants, covering 200 square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., first.

Forced shrubs and herbaceous plants, covering 200 square feet—Julius Roehrs Co., first; Bobbink & Atkins, second.

Carnations.

The carnation display, which was staged on the first day, was won by the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y. Its was the only entry, but the exhibit was well worthy of the first prize.

Among the new carnations staged March 19, Harry Weston's Majestic, a light variegated, showed up wonderfully well, as did also Frank Dinda's Peace. Laura Weber, staged by Charles Weber, looked as though it would give Enchantress Supreme a hot race. Cottage Maid, as staged by the Cottage Gardens Co., also had the earmarks of a splendid variety. It is a light pink sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward.

Belle Washburn, shown by Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, arrived in splendid condition and held its own all through the exhibition.

The awards on carnations were as follows:

Hotel Table Decorations.

One of the finest features of the exhibition was the class calling for table decorations by the New York hotels. They were judged by a committee of society women, and it must be stated that their decision was an absolutely correct one, according to all the experts of floral art that looked over the decorations. The Holland House was first, with a light arrangement of acacia and white Spencer sweet peas.

The Hotel Astor had a heart-shaped arrangement of roses, which was too crowded for the size of the table. Delmonico's staged an arrangement of acacia, with a tiny fountain in the center. The Ritz-Carlton hotel had an elaborate effect, with a lake in the center of the table, on which reclined a long boat loaded with tiny roses. This was a novelty that would have been awarded first prize, in the ladies' opinion, had the exhibitor refrained from placing ribbons down the sides of the tablecloth.

The awards were:

Artistic dinner table decoration—Holland House, first; Ritz-Carlton hotel, second.

Special prizes were awarded to hotels Biltmore, Manhattan and St. Regis, and Delmonico's.

Monday's Awards.

In the violet classes staged March 22 only three prizes were awarded. In the class for private gardeners calling for 200 blooms of single violets, Max Schneider was first and Frank Honeyman second. C. F. Bahret, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was the only commercial grower to receive a prize. His was for the best display covering ten square feet, arranged for effect, of singles.

There were twelve entries in the class for table decorations by private growers. John Canning's table of acacia and Ward roses took first prize. R. M. Johnston was second.

Trade Exhibits.

The trade exhibits are an important feature of the show this year, numbering over sixty. In the handling of these exhibits the skill and experience of Secretary Young was well shown.

Schloss Bros., New York, had an exhibit covering 200 feet of space, with Emil Schloss in charge. Their heavy gold ribbon and bow-knot and striped chiffons were first among their many novelties.

The Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Newburgh, N. Y., showed a full line of hand mowers and motor machines, and several other of their specialties.

The Mountain Community, Inc., New York, exhibited decorative designs for lawns, porches, etc.

An extensive assortment of gladiolus bulbs, including many new varieties, composed the exhibit of Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y. Flowers of Gladiolus Peace were also shown.

Suction and glass flower vases for florists were exhibited by A. F. Jerome, Newark, N. J.

Benjamin F. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., exhibited samples of Slug-shot, Grape-dust, Bordeaux mixture, Thrip Juice, paint, glazing putty and sward food.

From the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, was a large and splendid collection of foliage plants of many varieties. Though not entered for competition, it engaged the attention of many. Robert A. Craig was in charge.

The International Garden Club, New York, showed samples of rustic construction. John J. Howe was in charge.

A full line of bulbous stock in bloom, and spring flowering plants in many varieties were shown by J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York. W. C. Rickards was in charge.

An artistically arranged display of many varieties of bulbous plants in bloom made a fine showing for Stumpp & Walter Co., New York. Al. Rickards presided.

Excellently grown roses in pots were put on exhibition by the South Park Floral Co., Newcastle, Ind.

A fine display of heather and other

A fine display of heather and other specialties of the firm was staged by the Knight & Struck Co., New York.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., exhibited commercial plants, among them their new fern, Elmsfordii, and Dolan's refuse, waste and leaf burner.

Besides a good display of plants, bulbs and seeds, R. J. Irwin, New York, showed the new carnations, Alice, Good Cheer, Pink Sensation and Champion.

A galvanized, V-bar greenhouse was put up for the exhibition by W. H. Lutton, Jersey City, N. J.

Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington, N. Y., exhibited a small curved-eave, iron-frame greenhouse, with several of the company's special features in connection. T. B. De Forest was in charge.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, was represented by Fred Lautenschlager and an abundance of boiler literature.

Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, exhibited lily bulbs and some fine long-stemmed flowers from Horseshoe brand bulbs.

A complete greenhouse was put up by the Metropolitan Material Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J., had on exhibition a curved-eave greenhouse, with new style ventilators, doors, heating apparatus, etc. Samuel Redstone and John McArthur were in charge.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., exhibited their begonias.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., had in his trade exhibit quantities of roses and other cut flowers, which were changed every day.

The pergola arrangement of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., drew the attention and admiration of many.

Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., showed fresh groups of cut flowers in his trade exhibit each day.

Woodrow & Marketos, New York, showed a country estate worked out to scale, perfect in every detail, from the mansion to lawns, flower beds and hedges. This was looked upon as one of the best educational features of the show.

The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., had on exhibition plants of various kinds, but the firm's display of orchids was of particular note. These were staged inside an enormous frame of green velvet, giving the effect of a beautiful picture from a short distance.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., had a splendid group of orchid plants, with a large central column of phalænopsis. The varieties shown would make a long list.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., showed specimens of trained fruit trees and other lines of stock ready for spring shipment.

Retailers were conspicuous by their absence this year. G. E. M. Stumpp and Max Schling were the only ones who put up trade exhibits. Bouquets and designs of a kind calculated to excite the interest of the public were displayed.

The Banquet.

The twenty-eighth annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club was held Saturday evening, March 20, at the Hotel Astor, with an attendance of over 250, and was followed by dancing until the early hours. President and Mrs. Bunyard received the members and guests at the entrance to the beautifully decorated dining room, and Mr. Bunyard, as toastmaster, exceeded all expectations. The leading wholesalers donated flowers for the tables, and the committee, under the leadership of Chas. Schenck, W. F. Nugent and George E. M. Stumpp, was busy throughout the evening in promoting the general enjoyment. Regrets were read from F. R. Newbold, Theodore A. Havemeyer and Daniel MacRorie, the latter declaring he "could not find a dress suit in the city large enough to fit him."

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, spoke for the Society of American Florists, and gave a glowing tribute to the pioneer work of Peter Henderson in behalf of American floriculture. F. R. Pierson spoke to the toast of the Horticultural Society of New York, and told of the wonderful success of the show, far in advance financially of any previous year, and of its great future. E. G. Hill, in behalf of the club, presented a beautiful silver tea service to ex-President Duckam, who responded gratefully. Mr. Halleman spoke for the Grand Central Palace Exposition Co., of the splendid work of the committees, the luck of fine weather, the prospect of the receipts reaching over $20,000 and the excellent work of the publicity department. Walter Sheridan made the presentation speech to Secretary Young, to whom the club presented a diamond ring, in commemoration of his twenty-five years of service. Mr. Young acknowledged the honor and his appreciation. Only three meetings has he missed in the quarter century! John Everitt spoke for the National Association of Gardeners, Professor White for Cornell University, and J. H. Dick and E. O. Coldwell for the press.

BOSTON EXPERT TAKES NOTES.

At the New York Show.

The New York show was a large one, in some respects superior to its two predecessors; in others, hardly so good. The absence of the big specimen palms, etc., from W. A. Manda, Thomas Roland's acacias and other hard-wooded plants, and M. H. Walsh's huge rambler roses makes a big gap, and, while there is an bundance of well grown material, it is too small compared with what we saw at previous shows to be telling. As a picture the New York show, for instance, could not compare with the smaller Boston one. It had no striking exhibit like that of Farquhar's Dutch garden, and in hard-wooded plants, cyclamens and some other features, it was much behind Boston, but the roses, both cut and in groups, stove and greenhouse plants, schizanthus, azaleas, rhododendrons and orchids were more numerous and of greater variety than in Boston.

In carnations the two cities were about equal, but Boston had finer sweet peas and pansies. The retailers' booths were better than a year ago. The table decorations did not show anything striking, and I noted that there were ten tables in Boston and only half as many in New York. The booths of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York and the exhibits of the various greenhouse construction firms left nothing to be desired. The displays of the seedsmen were as attractive as ever.

Sweet Peas.

In new plants there were few, but some good novelties in cut flowers appeared. The sweet peas originated by A. C. Zvolanek led in point of interest and commercial value. These are good indoors and bloom four weeks ahead of the ordinary Spencers outdoors. Mr. Zvolanek has 163 kinds of winter-flowering Spencers planted and had sixty-eight staged in New York. From this bewildering list a heavy cut must be made. The following struck me as being the cream of the collection: Czar, white, with pale blue standards; Belgian Hero, orange, an improved orange orchid; Miss Skach, rich pink, a grand color, a great prize-winner here; Morning Star, beautiful light pink; Viva France, crimson scarlet; Mrs. Charles R. Zvolanek, a magnificent lavender; Miss Flora Roland, best described as a salmon pink suffused with apricot; North Light, rich pink; Union Jack, fine primrose, hardly a good name for this color; Mrs. M. Spanolin, the finest white, many with double standards, black seeded, more hardy than the white seeded White Orchid; Bohemian Girl, a lovely rich pink, but few stalks carry three flowers, which is a drawback; Lavender Nora Unwin, fine lavender.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. showed a small lot of their new winter Spencers. These run so close to the Zvolanek varieties that it would need a keen observer to find any difference. The best were: Fordhook Countess, Fordhook Pink and White, Fordhook Zan, rose color; Fordhook Dainty, Fordhook Lavender, Fordhook Crimson and Fordhook Lavender-Pink. The superb sweet peas from August Contram, Holmesburg, Pa., were far ahead of all others shown in quality, and worthy of a cultural award.

Carnations and Roses.

Among the new carnations, Roper's Alice Coombs and Grace loomed up well. Laura Weber, from Charles Weber, was good. Seedling No. 505, from the Cottage Gardens Co., in the way of Gorgeous, is a mammoth flower. Peace, from Frank Dinda, was splendid. A fine new salmon pink seedling came from W. Hass, Irvington. Henry Weston, Hempstead, showed a good white variegated, named Majestic, lighter than Benora.

Among the newer cut roses, Tipperary and Hoosier Beauty, from the E. G. Hill Co.; September Morn, from C. H. Totty; Crimson Queen, from F. R. Pierson Co.; Mrs. Francis Scott Key, from Scott Bros. and others, and Ophelia from many growers, were greatly admired. George Elgar, a new pale yellow polyantha with tea blood, from the South Park Floral Co., Newcastle, Ind., in small pots, received a silver medal. It is a charming little rose.

The Knight & Struck Co. had many beautiful hard-wooded plants, not new, but not often seen. They had Indigofera monophylla, Bauera rubioides, Burnia elatior, chorizemas, acacias, many ericas and other interesting subjects. Of the newer azaleas Daybreak and Lady Roosevelt, both pale pink, were the best. I was glad to see the old pelargonium, Clorinda, shown by C. H. Totty and others. This should make a good commercial plant for Easter.

J. A. Peterson & Sons received a silver medal for their new begonia, Mrs. J. A. Peterson. It was pronounced a variety which would be a grand addition for Christmas sales. Celsia Cretica was interesting. It is in the way of C. Arcturus.

William Tricker received a gold medal for his everblooming nymphæas. He showed these in deep blue, lavender and pure white colors. A worthy recognition to our leader in aquatics in America. A rockery partly planted with rock plants for the Julius Roehrs Co. is a starter for what might be developed into a great feature at future shows here.

Ferns and Orchids.

The ferns did not contain any real novelties. There were apparently as many nephrolepis varieties as ever. F. R. Pierson Co. had, among others, some grand specimens of Bostoniensis, still the best; Harrisii, improved elegantissima, Whitmani compacta, Elmsfordii, Milleri, superbissima, magnifica and Giatrasii. The grand specimen of Cibotium Schiedei from John Wanamaker, grown by J. H. Dodds, was the finest exhibited.

Orchids were fine, as they always are in New York. The main group of the Julius Roehrs Co., with a canopy cover of green baize and side mirrors, showed up well. It contained many choice odontoglossums, white cattleyas, brassocattleyas, phalænopsis, cypripediums and other genera. Lager & Hurrell had a beautiful group and many choice specimens. I noted that the dendrobium specimens, however, were not half the size of those shown in Boston, but odontoglossums I was pleased to see well done. The groups of George B. Schlegel, A. N. Cooley, Clement Moore and others were all good. The amaryllis of W. Duckham and A. J. Loveless merit special mention, also the artistic group of flowering plants from W. B. Thompson, shown by R. M. Johnston. Rehmannia angulata was well flowered in this latter group.

Among flowering deciduous shrubs the sweet scented Viburnum Carlesii was the best among the newer varieties. The specimen lilacs from P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y., were the best I had ever seen in pots. The marguerites of Madsen & Christensen were noteworthy.

In this hurried review no doubt many good things are inadvertently omitted, but it is a great show, well managed and a credit to those having it in charge. W. N. Craig.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Peter Weiland, Newcastle, Ind., has changed his crops to sweet peas and carnations, after a long series of unsatisfactory experiences with roses. Beacon, the Enchantress family and Benora are doing splendidly, showing the soil is the thing for them.

George Wiegand, of A. Wiegand's Sons Co., Indianapolis, writing from Ashville, tells of the glorious sunrise there, but his brother, Homer, says at home they also have an excellent chance to see it, for the whole force was busy at 4 a. m. on a big funeral order, and this has happened more than once of late.

The Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, has been extremely busy. I noted a beautiful wreath in which lilies and rhododendrons were used, one of several distinctive pieces.

H. W. Rieman, Indianapolis, is having his whole place repainted inside and will look quite gay for Easter.

John Heidenreich, Indianapolis, has a record for growing the largest number of moonvines in the middle west.

Christ. Winterich, Defiance, O., is well up in A, B, C, for asparagus, begonias and cyclamens are his specialties. The stock of cyclamens is in especially fine shape and, judging from the quantity, the demand is expected to be unusually large for this popular plant. I observed Junior, the latest addition to the business, pricking off begonias in flats. He has evidently imbibed the practical knowledge gained from his industrious parent.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., is busy sending out Carnation Sensation, classed as a fancy, and Good Cheer, a commercial variety. Much interest is taken in seedling No. 53-11, a clove-scented salmon variety of beautiful shade, termed "everybody's choice," it is so free. Among the host of seedlings is one from Rosette, another from Pink Delight and one also from White Wonder. These will be introduced later. When one considers the number discarded, it is realized how the standard has been raised. Among roses, Mrs. Russell is proving a grand summer kind. Hoosier Beauty is fulfilling all claims made for it. Theo. Dorner assured me no one would ever regret planting it. It certainly looks good. Chrysanthemum Early Frost is the strongest feature in its class. Extensive and l[illegible]e orders have been filled for this h[illegible]inger of the fall season. I had al[illegible] forgotten to mention Carnation Champion, which certainly stands at the top in the class for scarlets. W. M.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Business last week was normal, with plenty of flowers of all kinds to choose from. There is every indication that lilies, roses, carnations and bulbous stock will be in prime condition for Easter. A good many of the growers are complaining that their lilies are making nice pot plants but are too short for decorative purposes, especially for church and altar, where they require good, long stems.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Association perfected its organization March 17, at the Y. M. C. A. building, with a large and enthusiastic attendance. Officers were elected as follows: President, Horace M. Frank; vice-president, Elmer Brame; secretary, E. E. Schaeffer; treasurer, J. W. Rodgers; directors, Mrs. L. D. Johnson, M. L. Vogel, L. D. Polk. Meetings will be held the first Tuesday after the first Monday of each month. A committee was appointed to secure a meeting place at Memorial hall.

It was decided by the florists to still keep up the old Dayton Florists' Club and a meeting will be called by the president this week to elect new officers.

F. Lembke, of Chicago, was a visitor. G. W. B.

MR. BASSETT IS EIGHTY.

Many messages of felicitation will pass westward this week, to Pasadena, Cal., where O. P. Bassett is about to celebrate his eightieth birthday anniversary. This pioneer Chicago grower, who blazed the way for the big establishments of the present day, is enjoying excellent health under the sunny southern skies and retains all his old-time interest in the trade, keeping in touch by regular perusal of The Review.

Orland P. Bassett was born in western Pennsylvania, March 30, 1835. When only 12 years old he started to work in a printing office and in early life drifted to Sycamore, Ill., where he started a newspaper. After removing to Chicago, he started the Pictorial Printing Co., manufacturing druggists' labels. This business, now located at Aurora, Ill., he is still running, being president of the corporation.

March 1, 1887, Mr. Bassett moved his family to Hinsdale, Ill., where he bought a fine old residence property with twenty acres of ground, building his first greenhouse that year. Andrew Benson, the present superintendent for Bassett & Washburn, started to work for Mr. Bassett in his first greenhouse in 1887 and has been with him ever since. The following year, four greenhouses were built, and Mr. Bassett got his first supply of plants of the American Beauty rose from Washington. He was the pioneer grower of the Beauty in the west and by studying closely the character and growth of the plant soon was able to develop the long stems and extremely large flowers that made Bassett's Beauties famous. But Beauties were not the only flowers he grew. The first year he was in business he imported quite a large supply of Harrisii lily bulbs from Bermuda. At that time the Harrisii bulbs were all free of disease and, by getting plants in full bloom by Christmas, they were made to pay handsome profits.

Year by year Mr. Bassett continued to erect greenhouses, increasing his plantings of Beauties and starting on miscellaneous roses. He grew the old La France to perfection, but found that the winters were too severe for this beautiful rose. In 1893 he took his son-in-law, Charles L. Washburn, into partnership with him, forming the firm of Bassett & Washburn. By this time, they were growing 30,000 plants of Beauty, besides some 50,000 or 60,000 of other roses. Mr. Bassett was a natural rose grower. He had a peculiar faculty of knowing how to handle roses successfully from a money-making standpoint. Any rose that could not be grown to show a profit was discarded after a short time. He always contended that, given a good, large, airy house, plenty of ventilation, plenty of heat and plenty of feed, with proper attention to small details, would produce good roses. His methods of rose growing made a distinct impression on the growers of that period, as hundreds of florists visited his place to study his system of growing roses.

When he started to grow carnations he put in a whole house of the old Garfield, which was plunging, for those days. This good old variety was made to come in with an immense crop for Christmas, and paid handsome returns, but as the carnation developed in size and quality the old varieties were soon discarded. Mr. Bassett bought and planted 10,000 of the Lawson the first year it was introduced, and in roses he bought and planted 10,000 of Richmond when it was first introduced. At that period such large purchases of new varieties were considered remarkable. Mr. Bassett kept up his connection with the flower business till 1907, when he retired from the firm, moving to Pasadena. He is still a florist, however, and grows some of the most beautiful roses that are to be seen in that glorious country.

In addition to being a florist, Mr. Bassett was always an enthusiastic automobilist. In 1895 he had the first steam buggy that was run in the vicinity of Chicago, and since that time he has had no less than twenty makes of automobiles, spending at least $50,000 on machines alone. Today he has a beautiful 6-cylinder Packard, in which he has toured California from one end to the other a number of times, and in the last two years he has driven this car some 60,000 miles.

A warm welcome always is extended to every visiting florist and those of the trade going out to the California exposition who have the opportunity to call on Mr. Bassett will find him hale and hearty, eager to show the beautiful horticultural features of that country.

Orland P. Bassett.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was fair last week, but prices have been abnormally low. This condition is possibly due to the fact that generally right before Easter there is a slump in prices. St. Patrick's day created a demand for white carnations and cleaned up the market. Prices, however, showed no advance over what they had been previously, and the trade hardly noticed any increase for that day.

There is plenty of every kind of cut stock to supply the demand. While the volume of stock handled is undoubtedly greater, the monetary value shows little increase. Spring stock is abundant and is quite good, but not moving freely. There is an elegant supply of sweet peas, but prices show a downward trend and the stock is not realizing nearly what it should. Wisconsin-grown violets are at their best and are cleaning up fairly well each day at prices that are low compared with the excellent quality of the stock. Valley is in fine shape, but is moving somewhat slowly. Carnations and roses are plentiful and there is an exceptionally large crop of Russell roses. Shawyer is also in good supply and is selling well.

From present indications there will be no shortage of stock for the Easter trade. Plants are in large demand again this year and the trade is making preparation for a bigger Easter trade than ever.

Various Notes.

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports a large number of plant orders for Easter.

Gust. Rusch & Co. state that business has been good and they are anticipating a banner Easter business.

John Arnold, 784 Third street, has opened a flower department in the Schuster store, corner Third street and Garfield avenue. As this is one of the busiest spots on the north side, there should be no difficulty in making a success of this venture.

Adam Zender, of Chicago, was the guest of F. H. Holton for a few days last week. Other visitors included E. Mallinson, with C. A. Samuelson, Chicago; F. W. Bleise, Waukesha, Wis.; P. N. Obertin, Kenosha, Wis.; A. G. Boomer, Beaver Dam, Wis.; Wm. Giebels, Grand Rapids, Wis.; Albert Benke, of Loeffler & Benke, Watertown, Wis.; Mrs. H. A. Levenhagen, Manitowoc, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. Miller, of the Racine Flower Co., Racine, Wis.; F. Choles, of the New York Flower Co., Madison, Wis.; H. H. Dramm, Elmhurst, Ill. Most of the visitors were here only for a day, placing orders for Easter stock.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club has postponed its meeting to April 8. This action was taken because Easter falls so close to the regular night it might not be possible to get a quorum.

H. L. S.

Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia, had a wholly new experience here last week. A health officer saw him expectorate on the sidewalk and haled him into court, where he was fined $1 and costs. Mr. Reukauf took it as a joke on himself, but said he will be more careful in future.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With the arrival of spring and with Easter at hand, business prospects are more than satisfactory. The month of March has been a good one for the retailers as well as the shippers. On several occasions the retailers were rushed with elaborate funeral work. All kinds of seasonable flowering stock are in the market and move freely at fair prices, especially hydrangeas and Dutch hyacinths. The show windows of the retailers are elaborately decorated with flowering and foliage plants and never fail to attract a great deal of attention. Branches of pussy willow and of all kinds of fruit trees are in big demand. The market gardeners are well prepared with especially well grown bedding plants, principally flowering stock, and the sales are satisfactory. As a rule, the gardeners' best days are during Easter week, when each one of them makes an elegant display.

For the last two days we have experienced unexpected winter weather. The temperature went down to 40 degrees on the morning of March 21 and there were light frosts outside the city. In northern Louisiana the temperature dropped to 34 degrees, but neither there nor here has any damage to vegetation occurred.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting March 18, at the Association of Commerce building. President P. A. Chopin and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their places and a fair number of members were present. The newly printed constitution and by-laws were submitted by the committee on revision. After inspection, these were accepted and each one of the members present received a copy.

The subject of holding a spring flower show was again brought up and met with unanimous approval. The show will be held either at the end of April or the beginning of May. President Chopin appointed the following committee, with instructions to meet at the earliest date possible and make the necessary arrangements: J. A. Steckler, chairman; Paul Abele, Herman Doescher, C. W. Eichling and Henry Kraak. As soon as this committee is ready to report, a special meeting of the society will be held—sometime in the first half of April.

The subject of discussion for the evening was, "Bush and Climbing Roses Most Suitable for Our Locality." It evoked a great deal of lively interest and much valuable information was obtained. Henry Mische was elected a member of the society.

Gentlemen:-

Enclosed find check for $1.10, to keep The Review coming another year, with 10 cents for exchange.

The Review is the very best all-round reading and advertising journal published. Its make-up is par excellence from "kiver to kiver." We are a little late in thanking you for the nice new cover, especially the color - it's ideal; one can put his hand on The Review instantly. We read it all for fear of losing something valuable, and we are ordering today from four advertisers in the March 11 number - always mentioning The Review.

NOTE

Respectfully yours,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Unusually good spring weather continues and helps business along. The market report shows that an abundance of stock arrives and is fairly well cleaned up each day. There are one or two exceptions. Lily of the valley is overplentiful. The supply of roses is quite large, the demand running chiefly on the pink and yellow varieties. Of late Mrs. Aaron Ward is the most popular rose, both in corsage and basket work. The carnation market is quite active and stock brings a fair price. The quality is good. White has been scarce, but the colored varieties are more plentiful. Calla and Easter lilies are abundant and the sales good. The demand for sweet peas is large and good varieties are seen. Violets cleaned up better last week. There are large quantities of jonquils and daffodils, tulips and pheasant eye narcissi and these sell quite readily. Snapdragons in white, yellow, pink and lavender sell well. Pansies move nicely, as do marguerites. The call for orchids is not large. Lilac and acacia, with a good supply of greens and ferns, about complete our stock.

Various Notes.

Harry E. Bates, manager of the Rochester branch of the Lord & Burnham Co., has returned from western Pennsylvania. He says a better class of inquiries is reaching them daily and they are booking more business accordingly. This month's business is ahead of that of last year.

Visitors: Mr. Thomas, of the Bool Floral Co., Ithaca; John Ward, of Mumford, and Wm. P. Craig, of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia.

J. B. Keller Sons, H. E. Wilson, Salter Bros., H. P. Neun and the Rochester Floral Co. all report good business for St. Patrick's day.

There is an unusual amount of sickness in the trade. H. B. Stringer and E. M. Foster, of G. B. Hart's; Charles Sharpe, of the Rochester Floral Co., and E. M. Phillips, of H. E. Wilson's, have all been home with attacks of the grip.

A branch store has been started at 368 East Main street by John A. Murrell. Mrs. Kester has the management.

A. Emmons, of Pittsford, N. Y., is doing a good business. He has disposed of most of his potted bulbous stock and expects to buy for his Easter trade.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, is cutting some fine snapdragons and some long-stemmed sweet peas. St. Patrick's day trade cleared him of about every carnation he had in his greenhouses.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market continues dull in the cut flower department. The rose market was held barely steady by the strength of American Beauties, and of these the quality was far from perfect. The best stock of the largest growers was doubtless held for the flower show.

Springlike weather prevailed throughout the week, and the sun shone steadily. Increasing shipments of all roses are inevitable. The market will be fortunate if it can hold at present quotations until after Easter, and then comes the deluge.

Carnations are at their best now as to quality, and the supply grows in bulk daily. The novelty blooms hold their prices well, but anything below the standard is hard to dispose of, even at $5 to $7.50 per thousand. A reasonable advance is likely for Easter. Some of the whites were treated to a wide demand for St. Patrick's day.

Longiflorum lilies are stronger as Easter draws near, and the best will surely rise to $10 per hundred for the holiday. Nobody seems to want rubrums. Valley has been exceedingly weak for some time. A better range of values is expected. Gardenias continue at their reduced values.

Enormous quantities of bulbous flowers flood the market, especially tulips, and there is a great sufficiency of freesias, daffodils, narcissi and hyacinths. All kinds of seasonable spring flowers are arriving, pansies, lilacs, daisies, primulas, mignonette, forget-me-nots and sweet peas. Of the last named there is a decided superabundance, and large quantities of all but the Spencer and orchid-flowering types are unsalable. Violets are down and nearly out. They will last until after Easter, having had a disastrous season.

There is still no diminution in the supply of orchids, and Cattleya gigas, Trianæ and Schrœderæ are likely to be abundant for Easter. The prospects of winning the public back to a cut flower as much as a plant Easter are encouraging.

Various Notes.

Among the notables in the city last week were E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit; W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; Myer Heller, of Newcastle, Ind.; E. A. Strout, of Biddeford, Me.; R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md.; A. J. Loveless, of Lenox, Mass.; A. A. Pembroke, of Beverly, Mass.; James W. Heacock, of Philadelphia; A. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Cal., and Daniel MacRorie, of San Francisco.

Samuel Redstone will take charge of the Philadelphia office of Hitchings & Co. April 1. Mr. Redstone was formerly with James Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, England; Dicksons, of Chester; Clibrans, of Altrincham, and Sander & Sons, of St. Albans, and eight years manager for Traendly & Schenck, at Rowayton, Conn.

The New York Florists' Bowling Club will meet the Tuxedo Club in a match game April 14.

Traendly & Schenck's new store, on Sixth avenue, next to the Coogan building, will be ready for occupancy early in April.

The Uptown Store of the Harry A. Bunyard Co. is now complete, and "Bunny says" business is booming.

Anton C. Zvolanek departed for California after a brief and successful eastern trip and a visit to the flower show.

Roman J. Irwin's offices were visited by many hunters of large game last week, for a look at his collection of moose, elk and caribou.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club is orchid and sweet pea night, April 12.

Patrick Welch and W. N. Craig, of Boston, were among the Sunday visitors at the flower show.

W. B. Du Rie, of Rahway, N. J., celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday on St. Patrick's day.

S. Jacobs & Sons, the greenhouse builders, of Brooklyn, say this has been their best season and declare the outlook is most satisfactory.

This is the fortieth year W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., of Chappaqua, N. Y., has been forcing lily of the valley.

OBITUARY.

Frank Nies.

Frank Nies, in the florists' business near Lutheran cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., died March 18 at his home, 918 Onderdonk avenue, at the age of 39. He is survived by his widow, Anna Nies, his father and a brother. Funeral services were held March 20. Burial was in Lutheran cemetery.

Henry Murphy.

Henry Murphy, who for fifteen years had conducted a florists' business at 5200 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., died quite suddenly March 23, of pleuropneumonia. He was 45 years of age and left three daughters, with Mrs. Murphy. He had a large circle of friends and was universally respected in the trade.

William Hatcher.

William Hatcher, for thirty years gardener at the Soldiers' Home, in Washington, D. C., died March 17. Mr. Hatcher, who retired from active work about three years ago, was 87 years of age. He was a native of England, coming to this country as a boy of 15 years. He was one of the oldest residents of the District of Columbia, having been located at the Harewood road residence for more than forty years, and was well known around the city. He is survived by his wife and two sons, both of whom have been employed at the Soldiers' Home for many years, and also by a grandson, W. E. Hatcher, Jr., a chemist. Death was due to pneumonia. C. L. The Review brings results.

AS one of the effects of the war, crepe paper is scarce.

IT looks as though it will be a popular priced Easter—a big business but no inflated values.

TRADE advertisements too often are merely price lists. They should tell "Why" as well as "How Much."

IF the retail end of the trade would pay a little more attention to collections and the prompt payment of bills it would ease the tension all along the line.

IN one week this month the United States exported $47,229,559 more than it imported, which does not look a bit like the old lament, "Everything goin' out; nothin' comin' in."

ALL the experts advise against carrying carnation plants a second year, but we find dozens of good growers experimenting with the method, and getting surprisingly good results with certain varieties.

ROBERT C. KERR, president of the Texas State Florists' Association, has sent an official invitation to each officer and director of the S. A. F. to attend the second annual meeting of the Texas body, at Fort Worth, July 13 and 14.

WHY is it so many men will hand out to strangers cash change on checks? Florists are not the only ones in whom the bump of caution seems undeveloped. Recently a swindler working Chicago caught six druggists and only four florists, but drug stores are closer together than flower shops!

HONORABLE MENTION.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

THE PREVENTION OF FAILURES.

The proper limitation of credit is important for the seller, but it is more than that, it simply is life itself, for many a buyer.

A failure seldom means irretrievable loss to the seller, but it means extinction for the buyer. Consequently, a course on the part of sellers which results in keeping the buyer in business really is of greater assistance to the buyer than to the seller.

But the average man refused further credit does not see it in that light.

The credit association operated by the New York wholesale florists has proven a most beneficent organization. Not only has it saved its members loss but it has prevented failures—it has kept buyers from going beyond their depth; it has kept them in business.

A man who has difficulty paying one month's bill has still harder work when it is two months'.

BUSINESS OPENINGS.

Every now and then The Review receives a request from someone who is looking for a first-class place in which to start a greenhouse business. If any reader knows of a town of fair size in which there is no florist, such reader will confer a favor on The Review and on one or another of its subscribers by sending word of the business opportunity.

WANT RATE INCREASE.

In petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to revise their rates the express companies pointed out that the three elements composing the rate structure proposed by the commission and now in effect are, first, a terminal allowance of 20 cents per shipment, which does not vary with the weight or distance; second, a weight allowance of 25 cents per hundred pounds, which varies with the weight but not with the distance, and, third, a haulage allowance for each fifty miles carried.

The express companies requested permission to increase the terminal allowance from 20 to 25 cents per shipment and to reduce the weight allowance from 25 to 20 cents per hundred pounds, and asked for such further relief as the commission may deem proper. The companies stated that the changes requested would result in an increase of the gross revenue of the express companies of approximately three and one-half per cent.

FROM NEAR AND FAR.

The cosmopolitan character of The Review is a constant cause for comment on the part of those who do not stop to consider that the trade interests are more or less the same the world around. Like this:

We find advertising in The Review pays well and we enclose postal order for $4 for two more insertions of our ad.—Clingendaal Nursery, The Hague, Holland, February 9, 1915.

And then the other side:

In this morning's mail I received an order from Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, dated February 15, in reply to my ad in The Review. It was a surprise to me that a 50-cent ad can reach so far, but it speaks well for The Review and shows its value to the trade as a convenience for buying and selling.—C. W. Harrold, Decatur, Ill., March 17, 1915.

A RECORD.

Counting the Easter season, which covers five issues, The Review has made another new record this year. Business has been ahead of even the big season of 1914—ahead in advertising patronage and ahead in number of copies printed to supply the demands of subscribers.

In the five just-before-Easter issues The Review has printed and mailed to its readers almost twenty-seven tons of magazines; in fact, the white paper used amounted to 51,000 pounds, not to mention 2,760 pounds of cover stock—almost a ton and a half of covers.

Twenty-seven tons of Reviews!

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There has been a quite apparent improvement in the market since last week. Continued cold, cloudy weather no doubt has been the principal factor, but supplies have decreased and demand has improved. That the condition exists in other places as well as in Chicago is shown by the receipt of more numerous and larger orders from out-of-town buyers. City trade has been and is rather better than usual for the Lenten season, now drawing to a close.

While all stock has shortened up this week, the condition is most apparent in the carnation market. It might almost be said that carnations are scarce. The crops are much smaller than usually is the case for the end of March. Some of the growers of fair size are shipping only every other day and March 22 commission men found it necessary to call in stock to fill orders. Prices naturally have improved, being now decidedly better than a year ago at this date, but many buyers turn to other flowers when they think they are asked too much for carnations, no matter how scarce they are. Splits are quickly taken up, for funeral work, and constitute no unusually large part of the supply, but it is feared the dark weather will result in many splits by Easter. The growers are a unit in stating there can be no large supply of carnations by April 1.

Beauties are showing the effect of dark skies; the quality has retrograded. At present Killarney Brilliant deserves to be classed as the leader of the rose list, but Mrs. Russell is excellent and is much more plentiful than was the case earlier in the year. Sunburst and Ward also are fine. Some excellent Shawyer are seen, but this rose seems to be losing ground. Most of the rose growers say weather conditions favor their Easter crops.

Violets are faring much better than they did even a few days ago. The receipts of Hudson river doubles are much lighter than they were, many growers having stopped shipping, and the local singles are profiting by it. Sweet peas, however, are the popular corsage flower. Some of the Spencer varieties are extremely fine and all good peas are selling well. The ones that do not move are the short-stemmed grandifloras. There still is an abundance of all bulbous stock, but the supply is not so large as it was last week and it now is possible to make something like a clearance on all good flowers. Freesia is passing out., Romans are nearly gone, only a few growers now sending them in. Paper Whites also are approaching the end of their season. Dutch hyacinths are offered only in pots. Valley is abundant. Easter lilies are in good supply and the early birds of the Easter crop are beginning to come in; from now on there will be no end to the lilies. Snapdragon of real quality again is available. There are a few Spanish irises. Calendulas are plentiful.

To Merge the Clubs?

At the meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association, March 18, for the purpose of taking action on the invitation of the Chicago Florists' Club to amalgamate the two organizations, both plans suggested by the club were voted down. After much discussion, President Miller appointed a committee composed of John Zech, W. H. Amling, P. M. Broadbeck, A. Henderson and N. P. Miller to meet a committee of the Chicago Florists' Club with the proposition that the members in good standing of the association be allowed to join the club in a body, without ballot, the association to turn over to the club all money remaining in the treasury as full payment of dues of the association members up to August 1, 1915. There will be another meeting of the association at the Tavern, March 25, to hear the report of the committee.

Knights of the Wheel.

Hector E. Elliott, proprietor of the Avenue Flower Shop in Oak Park, was at East Moline this week in company with C. C. Hartwig, Mr. Elliott's purpose being to select his touring car at the factory of the Moline Automobile Co. Mr. Hartwig is the son of C. Hartwig, an old-time Chicago florist. Since he has been in the automobile business he has sold touring cars with the Knight engine to a number of florists. W. F. Vlk, 5118 South Ashland avenue, is driving a new Moline Knight. Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, has been running one about a fortnight, and Frank Schramm, of Crystal Lake, is expecting to receive delivery of a new car this week.

Wholesalers in Permanent Quarters.

The E. C. Amling Co. and the A. L. Randall Co., burned out at 66 East Randolph street, February 14, are this week moving into their new permanent quarters in the Lemoyne block, southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street. Each concern was anxious to get the space and facilities before the Easter rush and in neither case waited for the completion of all the special equipment that is planned; the finishing touches will be put on as opportunity presents.

Following his fixed idea as to location, Mr. Amling secured street floor space for salesroom and office, the refrigerating apparatus and storage space being in the basement. Mr. Randall, relying on four passenger and two freight elevators, in addition to two stairways, took the second floor, where there is approximately 19,000 feet of space. There is unusually good light, with large plate glass windows on three sides. The cut flower department occupies the south end, the offices the north end and the showroom for supplies the center of the floor. Much attention has been given to artificial lighting, for the winter days, a new system of nitrogen electric indirect lamps having been installed that is said to show colors in fabrics and flowers the same as daylight. A separate building will be used for manufacturing, etc.

A. L. Randall and wife returned March 21 from their annual rest at West Baden.

Various Notes.

When seen at Zech & Mann's March 22, E. H. Blameuser discussed interestingly the reason for the present condition of the carnation crops and the prospect for the next few weeks. Mr. Blameuser believes that the light crops now being cut are due to the high temperatures last autumn, which resulted in unusually heavy crops prior to the first of the year. He believes the next crop will be cut about Memorial day. Much of Mr. Blameuser's space is given to Joy, the free blooming red that originated with him several years ago, and to Cerise Winsor, which also originated on his place.

store last week because of illness and is not yet himself again.

F. F. Benthey, who is the oldest member of the wholesalers' ranks in this city, for several days last week was missing from his accustomed place, in the store of Kennicott Bros. Co., because of illness.

Serious punishment seems in store for Samuel Le Roy Hamilton, accused of working a check swindle. Among those who will testify against him are the J. F. Kidwell Co., 3530 Michigan avenue, and W. W. Adams, 1021 Rush street.

Philip C. Schupp, of J. A. Budlong, has in his possession an object rarely found in the hands of an American, a cross of the French order of the Legion of Honor. The cross is the kind conferred on the chevaliers of the order and is of the period of the Second Empire.

Record was made last week of the purchase by Peter Reinberg of the vacant lot 44x130 feet, west front, in Sheridan road, fifty-five feet south of Hollywood avenue, for an indicated consideration of $11,000, which is at the rate of $250 a front foot. It adjoins the residence of Mr. Reinberg and was acquired to give him additional yard room. Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg are at West Baden.

grow better roses on solid benches than he can on those that are raised.

The many friends of Charles M. Dickinson, formerly of E. H. Hunt, will be pleased to learn that he has secured an excellent connection with a mercantile house at Billings, Mont., where he will make his home. For two years Mr. Dickinson has been stock-raising on a farm at Glendive, Mont., fifty miles from a railroad.

Unique among Chicago florists in that he runs successfully two stores within less than 100 yards of each other, A. F. Keenan is making many improvements. Headquarters has been moved from 1306 to 1222 East Sixty-third street, where the fixtures have been rearranged to make space for a commodious office. Here Miss Florence Keenan is in charge and cut flowers only are handled, with a few plants. The store at 1306 East Sixty-third street has been divided into two parts by means of a new display refrigerator and cashier's booth installed by the H. G. Koellner Co., the counterless front half being devoted to cut flowers and plants, the rear being fitted up with counters and shelving for seed store purposes.

C. A. Samuelson has returned from a fortnight's trip to Idaho, on which he combined business with pleasure. He is interested in two orchard projects on the Snake river and may some day make his home on his tract of eighty acres of apples that will come into bearing this year.

J. P. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, is an enthusiastic admirer of Mrs. Charles Russell rose. He says they have 36,000 plants on their benches now and expect to double the number next year. The Mrs. Taft rose, to his way of thinking, is the ideal shell pink, as the color is true. Among yellow roses, he be-

Some one has said that every successful business man occupies his mind with some study or pursuit outside his business. With Henry Van Gelder, president of Percy Jones, Inc., it must be European history, for he is a veritable encyclopedia on the subject, particularly with reference to things touching the houses of Hohenzollern and Hapsburg.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations
Mignonettes
Sweet Peas
Cut Flowers
United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver has bought the following lots of Dirt Bands from us:

Dec., 1913	5,000	Jan., 1915	70,000
Jan., 1914	40,000	Mar., 1915	20,000
Mar., 1914	20,000

If he was not getting better plants from them than from clay pots he would not continue to use them so largely.

See our 2-page advertisement, pages 22 and 23.

The Market.

The word fair applies with equal truth to the weather we have had during the last week and to the market. The weather was a benefit alike to the Easter plants that are coming bravely forward, to the flowers for cutting that are coming forward also, and to the shopping. The market has been fair, conditions considered.

Carnations continue the strong flower on the list; they are good, they have sold well, and they have brought good prices. Roses are not so satisfactory; the receipts are heavier now, a little heavier than the demand for them. Sweet peas have been arriving in enormous quantities; their quality is from extremely fine downward, by which expression it is intended to convey the idea that while the finest are equal or perhaps a little superior to anything we have ever had, there are also mediocre and poor sweet peas. Violets are less plentiful and fail to command support.

Of the other flowers the supply is excellent and the demand pretty fair, except in the case of lilies, which are rather overabundant, as often happens before Easter. Fine lilac is offered.

The Easter prospect: An abundance of fine flowers at moderate prices.

Sweet Peas.

It has been suggested that a few lines on the market requirements for sweet peas as cut flowers would be of interest. So it happens that this request recurred when Leo Niessen was talking of the fine quality of the orchid peas one afternoon this week. The question was put to him, "What colors should be sought and what colors avoided in selecting sweet peas for forcing for cut flowers?" Mr. Niessen replied after a moment's thought: "Fully fifty per cent should be of the Christmas pink, the balance of bright, clear colors. The undecided colors should be avoided." It would be hard to improve on this brief, clear answer.

Mr. Faust's Lilies.

It is a pleasure to go through the lily houses with Henry I. Faust, of Merion. He takes such a happy pride in the beautiful stock he has produced that to hear him talk about the culture of his plants adds to the pleasure of the visits. The lilies are so well grown that they have required no sorting or moving about; stakes seem almost superfluous and the timing is wellnigh perfect. The appearance of those houses of Lilium giganteum is that of a field of buds so even that were a sheet laid upon it the sheet would rest on every plant. Mr. Faust has added other Easter stock, notably azaleas, to his list, but he considers them all as side lines to the lilies, saying they require little skill, the cultural work being done before they reach him.

An immense automobile truck, capable of holding goodness knows how many pots of plants, has been plying steadily back and forth across the line that divides Delaware and Philadelphia counties. This truck takes the place of ever so many teams and small cars that formerly were used to convey the Easter plants of the Robert Craig Co. from the new place at Norwood to the sales place at Forty-ninth and Market streets. It is evidently doing the work well, as Forty-ninth and Market streets is steadily gaining in blooming stock until it almost seems as though every square foot of space holds a blooming plant, except those that hold ferns. But it is Norwood that I am trying to describe. Norwood, the pride and joy of the Craigs, where plants grow and where plants bloom to perfection. At Norwood are grown the most difficult varieties, those that need the greatest natural advantages and require the greatest skill to finish. Norwood is the home of the croton and the dracæna. The stock is superb. But Norwood also has devoted some of its ample houses to perfecting Easter plants. There are lilies enough to satisfy anyone; they are fine, too. There are roses in all the leading standard sorts for Easter, and they are in good time. There are hydrangeas; the leading French varieties are charming in form, color and freedom of bloom. And there are ferns and arecas in great numbers. Everything looked well when I called. The foliage plants most striking in their perfect coloring were Pandanus Veitchii and several of the dracænas; perhaps terminalis, amabilis and Lord Wolseley will do for choice.

Over at the big place at Forty-ninth and Market streets the sales houses overflow with splendid stock. The lilies are superb, the roses are heavily budded plants with beautifully colored flowers and the rest of the stock is worthy of the effort put upon it.

Various Notes.

The election of Samuel S. Pennock as president of the American Rose Society gives pleasure to Philadelphia. Mr. Pennock's term of office will cover the rose meeting to be held here with the national flower show next March.

M. J. Callahan has been successful with special Saturday sales of one or two varieties of flowers at his handsome West Philadelphia store.

The Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, captured eight prizes with eight entries at the rose show in Boston March 19, a splendid performance. Their prizes

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations

United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver has bought the following lots of Dirt Bands from us:

Dec., 1913	5,000	Jan., 1915	70,000
Jan., 1914	40,000	Mar., 1915	20,000
Mar., 1914	20,000

If he was not getting better plants from them than from clay pots he would not continue to use them so largely.

See our 2-page advertisement, pages 22 and 23.

included the Michell gold medal for Killarney Brilliant.

F. H. Harjes, who has been in Germany almost since the breaking out of the war in the interest of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., arrived in New York March 21, bringing with him heavy shipments of supplies for his firm, an achievement that clearly has cost heavily in work and worry, for Mr. Harjes has lost weight.

August Gontram, of Holmesburg, captured six prizes, five first and one second, with six magnificent vases of sweet peas at the New York flower show March 18. We are proud of Mr. Gontram.

The delegation from hereabouts to the Boston rose show last week included George E. Campbell, Malcolm Franklin, Joseph Heacock, James W. Heacock, Robert Jamison, Joseph S. Myers, Samuel S. Pennock, Martin Samtman and Clarence Upton. A number of them visited the places of Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., and the Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, R. I., and of course the New York flower show.

The M. Rice Co. has been working every night for a long time, and even on Sunday, to get its orders out. Robert Q. Shoch is home, looking gloriously well.

The employees of the Henry F. Michell Co., some thirty in number, attended the service at the Tabernacle March 19, to hear the Rev. Billy Sunday.

Recent visitors include E. H. Smith, of Carlisle, Pa., and George H. Berke, of Atlantic City.

George S. Faulkner has arranged a telling window at the Orchid Flower Shop. Calla lilies occupy the place of honor.

Berger Bros. are receiving fragrant heliotrope, a lovely rarity nowadays.

J. F. Leary has a daring window in the Ritz. Sunshine effect, evidently. The fashionable Easter colors are arranged in striking contrast with rich dark shades. The former are produced with yellow roses and daffies, the latter with orchids and sweet peas. It is extremely well done.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving perfect calla lilies and heavy strings of smilax.

Charles H. Grakelow spoke before the Lancaster Florists' Club March 18.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's show, held in Horticultural hall March 23 to 25, brought together some beautifully grown bulbous plants and shrubs for the seedsmen's prizes.

Edwin Lonsdale, writing to a friend in this city, says that Thomas Mingey and Charles Sim have visited him in Lompoc, Cal. Mr. Lonsdale's host of friends will be sorry to learn he has not been well and will join in earnestly wishing him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Fred Ehret has put a new car on the street.

The cheery laugh of John Walker, of Youngstown, O., was heard here last week. Mr. Walker spent March 18 in this city. I am particular to mention the date because it is Robert Craig's birthday and the selfsame day on which John Walker entered his employ.

John Kuhn, of Olney, has a new delivery car.

Mrs. Smith, nee Miss Pussy Shick, has opened a flower store at 8438 Germantown avenue. This is the only flower store in Chestnut Hill.

Charles Henry Fox has a fine new delivery car. Phil.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business was somewhat better last week, St. Patrick's day being especially noticeable. No special sign of activity for that day was observed in the flower market, excepting the presence and sale of shamrocks in small pots. These went well until March 15, when the demand for white carnations became overwhelming. As the supply was only about medium, the price advanced several cents and the attention was diverted to white tulips for coloring green. Stock is much more plentiful and the quality is much improved. Roses are in good quality and quantity and bulbous blooms are to be seen everywhere, while violets have fallen to the commonplace, being retailed by the florists, the department stores, the drug stores and even on the streets at 15 cents for bunches of twenty-five. All the greenhouses in this section are filled with stock for Easter and the indications are that there will be a plentiful supply of everything.

Various Notes.

Miss Nellie O'Connor is settled in her new store, corner of Thayer and Cushing streets.

W. A. Bowers, for several years with Matthew Macnair, is now in charge of the flower department of L. Dimon & Son, Inc.

Walter E. Kelton, of the Quality Flower Shop, Pawtucket, has been enrolled as a member of the Pawtucket board of trade.

Thomas Gallagher, who has been head designer for T. O'Connor for a number of years, has resigned to enter business for himself. He is seeking a location in the Fox Point section.

Mrs. James B. Canning has taken charge of her husband's business on Smith street, because of his failing health, and has placed the charge of the greenhouses in the hands of Philip Lavery. John Canning, who has been with the business for some time, has gone to Worcester.

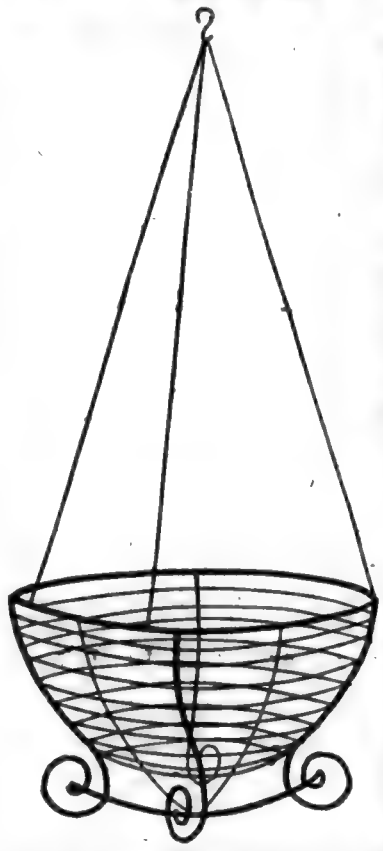
The W. E. Barrett Co. reports an unusually active opening of the seed business during the last few days.

Joseph Koppelman left March 20 for a several days' business trip to New York and Philadelphia.

Luigi Greigo, 12 Windmill street, has been granted permission to build an addition to his greenhouse.

Frederick Dietz has recently taken out an undertaker's license. In the future he will conduct an embalming and undertaking business in connection with his florists' work. He attended the New York show this week. W. H. M.

BALTIMORE.



The Market.

There was a decrease in business last week and, while there is a good quantity of cut flowers coming in, prices are only fair. The expected demand for white carnations for coloring purposes for St. Patrick's day did not materialize. Carnations, generally, are moving fairly well and roses are in average demand, but there is a large quantity of bulbous stock coming in that moves slowly even at low prices. Daffodils are especially hard to move, because of the large influx of southern stock. Plants are moving well, and there is a good prospect of a plentiful supply of pot plants for Easter trade in all the principal varieties.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club, March 22, was quite interesting and those present felt well repaid for coming. Charles Patterson was elected a member and the following were proposed for membership: Charles F.

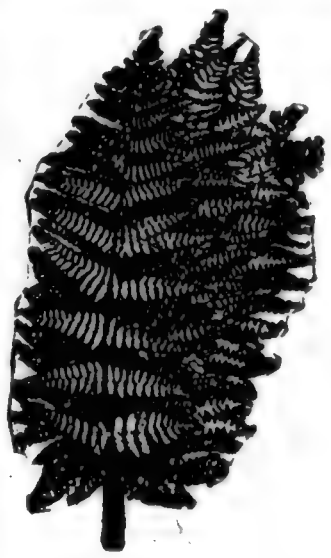
Feast, Robert W. Johnston, John B. Harmon. The banquet committee made its report on the last club banquet and was discharged with the thanks of the club. Vice-president Rider suggested having an essay committee to arrange a series of short talks on seasonable subjects at the meetings. The following committee was appointed: J. M. Rider, J. J. Perry, C. M. Wagner. Treasurer Burger submitted his semi-annual report and showed a good balance to the club's credit.



When the question box was opened, a number of interesting questions were found and discussed. A motion to add a paragraph to the by-laws was submitted and will be acted on at the next meeting. The essay committee announced that at the next meeting a short talk on bedding plants will be given, followed by a discussion.

Various Notes.

A man representing himself as Jerome O'Leary and claiming to be the originator of green sheet moss called on some members of the trade last week in an effort to borrow money. His method is to call on florists after banking hours and attempt to borrow a small sum of money on a draft.

William J. Johnston, who has been confined to his home for some time with an attack of the grip, has recovered and is able to get around the store as usual.

visited the New York show last week and also the American Rose Society's annual exhibition in Boston. On their way home they stopped at a number of greenhouse establishments and came back well pleased with their trip.

James Hamilton made a large ship design for the funeral of Captain Woodall, a well known marine contractor, March 20. The hull was composed of white carnations, the deck of pink carnations; the two stacks were covered with alyssum and the rigging was outlined with smilax.

P. B. Welsh has a fine lot of azaleas and specimen plants of Queen Alexandra spiræa at his greenhouses in Glen Morris.

A number of florists have announced the date of the exhibition of Easter plants at their greenhouses as March 28. Some are following their annual custom, others are holding their initial show. Those who have already spoken of making displays are: Samuel Feast & Sons, James Hamilton, Erdman & Ulrich, James Glass and F. C. Bauer. These exhibitions are a good boost for any florist's business. PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $148.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

The Market.

The cut flower trade is holding up surprisingly well. Business last week was better than in the week preceding. Roses have a somewhat downward tendency, but Hadley and Russell have made extra good prices, while Ophelia, Shawyer, Killarney Queen and Sunburst all have brought good prices. The prices vary from $2 to $10 per hundred. Beauties of the best grades bring $4 to $6 per dozen, but the call for the select grades is not strong. Carnations are shortening in supply and the prices have stiffened. It looks now as though there would possibly be a shortage of these for Easter. Violets are in heavy supply. A few select flowers sell for 50 cents per hundred, but the majority go at $2 per thousand. The demand for sweet peas is not so robust; the market is abundantly supplied with these.

Calla and Easter lilies move slowly. Valley of good quality sells well. Bulbous flowers have done remarkably well of late; good Murillo tulips sell at $3 to $4 per hundred and Victoria narcissi at $2.50 per hundred. These are the two leaders in bulbous stock. The demand for snapdragons is sluggish. Yellow marguerites are now in ample supply. Mignonette is good; so are primroses, pansies and wallflowers. Cattleya Trianæ is practically done for and C. Schrœderæ is the only variety procurable. Gardenias do not move as well as they might. Green stock has been selling well. Trade in pot plants shows an improvement. The call for pans of bulbous stock is heavy. Other good sellers are rambler roses, bougainvilleas, genistas and azaleas.

Club Field Day.

Beautiful weather favored the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at the W. W. Edgar establishment, at Waverley, March 19. There was an attendance of sixty-five, including a considerable number of ladies. The greenhouses were filled to overflowing with high-grade Easter plants in the pink of condition. There were 15,000 giganteum lilies, thousands of azaleas in all the leading sorts; also genistas, acacias; ramblers, such as Excelsa, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon; baby ramblers, a grand lot of hybrid perpetuals, Rhododendron Pink Pearl, French hydrangeas, metrosideros, etc. Coming along to fill places soon to be vacated by these plants were thousands of cyclamens, Lorraine, Cincinnati, Melior and Chatelaine begonias, and bedding plants in great variety for Memorial day trade. This noted plant factory never had a finer lot of stock.

An excellent collation was served after the inspection of the houses. Then followed short addresses from a number of the visitors, who were cordially welcomed by Herman H. Bartsch, the genial and capable manager. Those making addresses were: W. N. Craig, William Gray, of the Newport Horti-

Mrs. W. W. Edgar received an enthusiastic ovation when she rose in response to the demand for a short address and expressed her pleasure at having so many present. All present voted the occasion a most enjoyable and profitable one.

Various Notes.

Edward MacMulkin, the well known Boston retailer, has the sympathy of a host of friends in the death of his wife, who succumbed to an attack of typhoid-pneumonia, March 18.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers has an attractive display of flowering plants in her Summer street store. Business here is reported as quite satisfactory.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, is strong on rambler roses, Rhododendron Pink Pearl, azaleas, acacias and other Easter plants. He has some nice plants of Staphylea Colchica and Hypericum Moserianum.

The friends of James L. Miller, of West Lynn, gave a gasp of astonishment when they received an announcement of his marriage to Miss Margaret Jane Patterson, March 17, at Jamaica Plain, Mass. The young lady has secured an admirable husband and will be the envy of many other marriageable girls, who have had their eyes on Mr. Miller for a long time. We wish them every possible blessing in their married life.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, has an immense stock of splendid hyacinths, tulips and narcissi in pans for Easter; also a large stock of spiræas in variety.

Lester H. Mann has had an elevated office built for his bookkeeper at the Boston Flower Exchange. The shipments of bulbous flowers from Mann Bros. are now quite heavy and the quality of the stock never was better.

Easter, with the possible exception of carnations. Advance orders are coming finely. Patrick Welch visited the New York show March 19, in company with J. K. M. L. Farquhar and others.

Penn's are doing an immense plant trade, in addition to their funeral and other work. At the recent Boston spring show they captured five important prizes with seven exhibits. These included the best mantel decoration of roses and basket of roses.

Frank J. Dolansky is having a heavy cut of Cattleya Schrœderæ and gardenias. He will have C. Mossiæ in for Easter.

Charles J. O'Brien and J. J. Fee, of Jamaica Plain, two noted bulb specialists, have grand lots of Murillo tulips and Victoria narcissi among their other bulbs now.

The attendance at the New York show from this section fell far below that of a year ago, not over one-fourth the number attending compared with 1914. The grand quality of the local show drew visitors from all parts of New England. A good number came from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The Houghton-Gorney Co., on Tremont street, reports trade as decidedly better the last few days.

J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, made five carnation entries at the spring show and secured that number of prizes, a splendid record.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 20, H. Howard Pepper, of the Industrial Trust Co., Providence, R. I., a noted rosarian, will lecture on "Some Facts Florists Should Know About Banking."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Market conditions in the wholesale district last week were splendid. The demand was up to the standard. The uptown retailers are buying sparingly, while the downtown florists are buying heavily in large lots if they can name their own prices. The first day of spring opened with a snow storm, but this did not shorten the supply that came in Monday, March 22. Roses are coming in heavy supply. It seems that the growers all have large crops at the same time. The bulk of the supply consists of Richmonds and Killarneys in all varieties. Carnations, too, are abundant and are of extra good quality, with the prices ranging near $20 per thousand in large lots. Some extra fine Ward and Enchantress were noted. Beacon also is fine. There is plenty of fine stock of tulips, Easter lilies, snapdragons, valley, daffodils, sweet peas and violets, for which there is a good demand. Extra fine long smilax is seen and there is plenty of other greens.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting March 15, at the Washington hotel, with President Charles Young in the chair and with twelve members present. During the course of the meeting the credit system and other interesting matters came up for discussion; these will be taken up for final action at the next meeting. A nice luncheon was served.

The next meeting of the County Growers' Association will take place April 7. Secretary Joseph Deutschmann informs us that A. S. Cerny is now vice-president of the association.

Phil Schneider, whose headquarters are at 1930 Wash street, says his new wooden folding easel for florists has taken a good hold on the local trade. Shipping orders have also commenced to come in.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was with us a few days last week. Mr. Berkowitz does not come often, but when he does he makes things hum.

William C. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., sold his residence opposite the greenhouse range on Waterman avenue last week. He has purchased an apartment at 1316-18 Temple place, to which he will move at once.

FLORISTS

Formerly with John Walker.

Patrick's day did not equal that of previous years. From the reports of the downtown florists, where transient trade is usually heavy, a considerable number of the carnations were left.

Charles Beyer has a splendid stock of tulips and Dutch hyacinths, as well as other blooming plants of all varieties. He reports trade good for the Lenten season.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, the sweet pea specialist of Lompoc, Cal., spent March 14 here, visiting the local trade.

W. A. Rowe, chairman of the trustees of the Florists' Club, says they will have an important paper read before the club at its meeting April 8, which should be of great interest to the members.

At the establishments of George Waldbart and Ayres Floral Co., on Grand avenue, the displays of fancy blooming plants have been attracting a great deal of attention.

Easter lilies with some of the local florists have been failures, while others have had excellent success. The stock of Sanders, Bourdet and Jablonsky will be in splendid shape. From reports, lily plants from local growers will be scarce.

Activity was resumed last week at the local seed houses. The fair weather kept all hands busy. The St. Louis Seed Co., Young's and the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. say the rush this year is far ahead of last year.

Charles Fullgraf, landscape architect and tree specialist, says he is in for a busy season and has purchased a large auto truck for his work. Extra help is being hired daily.

The local florists have sent a petition to E. N. Tolkacz, director of public welfare, asking him to consider Henry C. Muskopf as park commissioner, to succeed Dwight F. Davis. Mr. Muskopf is an expert landscape architect, and as the finances of the city will not permit the employment of a landscape architect, Mr. Muskopf could serve in both capacities. He is of the firm of Muskopf & Irish Co. In the opinion of the local trade, Mr. Tolkacz could not find a better man for the position.

The nurserymen have engaged a lot of extra help, now that the frost is out of the ground, and have started digging and shipping trees, shrubs, etc. They say advance orders are unusually large this year. J. J. B.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk here for the last two or three weeks, especially in funeral work. In the last ten days an enormous quantity of stock has been used. Carnations have been in heavy crop, but there seems to have been no surplus at any time. They have been cleaned up daily, with the demand frequently unsatisfied. Roses have been fine, but not in as heavy crop as they might be; consequently they have generally been sold up clean. Beauties are still scarce; the quality is improving, but the crops will be rather light for some time.

Bulbous stock has been plentiful and has been sold up closely, chiefly for use in funeral work. Lilies are coming along nicely for Easter and will probably be in sufficient supply to go the rounds. Cut lilies have been scarce for the last week or two, as nearly everyone has been holding them back for Easter. Valley has been equal to the demand. Sweet peas are more plentiful and are finding a ready sale; some of them are from new crops and have extra long stems. Violets are good, especially the singles. Greens are at a premium, especially plumosus. Potted plants are moving nicely and there is a prospect of a big stock of them for Easter.

Various Notes.

Fred Baumann has given up his store on West Broad street and will turn his whole attention to his fern business.

Mr. Clark, who was formerly with Graff Bros. and who has charge of the cut flower department in the Green-Joyce store, reports business good in his line at the store.

C. A. Roth is hoping to be able to remain in the store till after Easter, though he has been notified to be out, with the other tenants of the Deshler building, by April 1, as the building is to give way to the new 12-story Deshler hotel building.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports business much improved in all lines. The firm's spring catalogue has been sent out.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some fine roses and carnations.

C. E. Stone reports business good.

Richard Winters is cutting peas from his new crop and they find a ready sale. J. M. cleaning up better. The supply of roses and carnations has decreased considerably, as the last week has been cold and cloudy. The Easter stock is coming along in fine shape and already there are to be had some of the best Rambler roses seen here for many years. Hydrangeas, rhododendrons, spiræas and lilacs were to be seen in the stores last week. The growers in and around Washington are well pleased with the prospect, as the indications are that business will be exceptionally good.

The market is overcrowded with bulbous stock of all kinds, and in the same class may be placed violets and sweet peas, all of which are comparatively cheap but for which it is difficult to find a market. American Beauty roses are more plentiful but hold their price. In other roses, Hadley, Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon, Russell, Shawyer and Mock are the favorites and bring fair prices. There is little sale of gardenias or orchids. Snapdragon moves fairly well and there is a fair demand for mignonette.

Various Notes.

William F. and Adolph Gude have returned from New York and Boston, well pleased with their successes at the show at the former place, having secured two firsts and two seconds out of a total of seven entries. At Boston they acted as judges of the show held there. Charles Scarborough, an employee, accompanied them to New York for the purpose of taking charge of the exhibit. Donald Malcolm, of Gude Bros. Co., spent a ten days' vacation in Rochester and New York.

Among the visitors of the week were James W. Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa.;

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

BEANS, sweet corn and, except peas, all varieties of seeds used by canners are in strong demand.

THE California growers are pretty well satisfied with the season to date. They expect to be in prime shape for the A. S. T. A. inspection in June.

NEXT month is likely to be the heaviest April the seedsmen have had in years and the outlook from the jobbers' standpoint is most pleasing.

THE necessity for something to plant is likely to cause a movement in stocks that are less popular and a general clean-up on everything may be expected.

THE present supply of seeds is less than it has been at this time of the year for a long time and many of the standard varieties are in short supply.

THERE is a tendency in some lines to talk hard times and this, in a way, has a depressing effect, but there is no reason for this talk as far as the seed trade is concerned.

THE Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association has lost its fight before the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel the railroads in the bean and pea section to again grant certain transit concessions canceled in 1912. It is said the difference did not exceed 1½ cents per hundred pounds.

THE J. L. Loebs Seed Co., of Aberdeen, S. D., is in its eighteenth year of business, having a large local trade in addition to a good-sized mail-order business. Otto E. Wolter is the manager. The company's office is at 18 Third avenue, southeast, and its warehouse at 924 South Arch street.

ONION sets at the present time are going out in good shape. The usual mid-March tendency to feel that there are more sets on hand than the demand warrants prevails, but this will not last long and by April 1 the proper conditions will again prevail and a sharp advance in prices may be looked for, according to large operators.

A BRANCH store has been opened at Lynn, Mass., by the James J. H. Gregory & Son Co., of Marblehead, Mass. The store will be at 162 Oxford street, under the management of R. G. M. Stockwell, formerly seedsman and poultryman for the late Collins Hardware Co. The company has taken over the big warehouse and spur track of the Collins Hardware Co., on State street, not far from the store. The warehouse will not all be used by the seed company, but part of it will be sublet.

THERE are indications that the present year will be the best the seed trade has known for a long time.

THE embargoes have reduced the arrivals of seeds from Europe, except that considerable quantities have arrived on recent boats from Copenhagen.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, rapidly is moving into its new buildings, constituting undoubtedly the largest and finest grass seed establishment anywhere in the world.

AMONG the market gardeners there is a feeling that there will be a large demand for all varieties of produce and they are planting onion, cabbage and all varieties of seeds of this class in larger quantities than ever before.

AN unusually heavy season for the seedsmen is predicted by J. M. Clark, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who says they are working overtime sending out orders, although it still is early for many of their customers and in many cases users of seeds have not yet made up their lists of requirements.

IN an endeavor to promote the planting of clean seed potatoes only, the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin is issuing certificates of inspection to Wisconsin growers of seed potatoes whose stock meets the standard, and urging planters to secure their needs from these certified growers.

ORDERS for seeds for South America are on the increase, but it is new and not understood business with most seedsmen. The U. S. consul at Rio de Janeiro calls attention that Brazil taxes catalogues as books unless they are marked "Catalogues sem valor" (without value). Seeds enter free of duty, but packages should be plainly marked, "Sementes para agricultura."

MARCH 1 the Gunn Seed Co. opened for business at 219-221 South Tenth street, Lincoln, Neb., as a wholesale and retail seed company. The firm is composed of E. S. Gunn and E. A. Pegler. The former was general manager of the Galloway Bros.-Bowman Co., at Waterloo, Ia., last year, and for nineteen years previous vice-president and manager of the retail and mail-order department of the Griswold Seed Co., at Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Pegler has been handling poultry supplies for a number of years in Lincoln in connection with his wholesale pickle business. Now he has turned over this department to the new firm and will devote all his time to his pickle and vinegar business.

THE COST OF PEAS FOR SEED.

At a recent meeting of pea packers, one of them said: "I believe the pea canner should own or rent the land and grow his own peas, as the seed is so expensive—for the coming year about $17 per acre, last year about $20, and averaging from $15 to $25 per acre—that it is difficult to induce the average farmer to plant to any extent, and it does not pay to handle fields of less than ten acres; twenty-five acres or more is preferable."

MOTT-LY MEDITATIONS.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., are busy receiving and placing seed contracts. E. J. Sheap, who has charge of this branch, predicts an anxious, though successful year. Anthracnose in the bean crop is to be feared more than a hot summer. Contracts are being placed at $2.30 for kidney, $2.50 for greenpod, $2.75 for ordinary wax and $3 for Wardwell's. The growing of the sugar beet in Idaho and Utah promises to be successful, as trial crops there have turned out well. Considerable changes have been made in the main offices, which, though enlarged, are still crowded.

A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., says beans will be beans again this year and it will pay the small grower to take even more care of his crop than usual.

Jones Seed Co., Grand Rapids, finds it necessary to double the floor space, with office in front. The change is a decided improvement.

S. Bash & Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., are booking large orders for seed potatoes of excellent quality. The yield was good last year. John Van Houten, of McBain, raised 382.45 bushels to the acre, closely followed by two others with 355.10 and 353.15 bushels, respectively. S. Bash, Sr., has been sick for some time. S. B., Jr., is making good as manager meanwhile. W. M.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

F. W. Kelsey Nursery Co., New York, N. Y.—Semiannual wholesale list of evergreen and deciduous trees, shrubs, roses and vines; twelve clearly printed pages, in convenient pocket form. Among the special lines offered are "forestry stock" and small trees for nursery planting.

The Oakgrove Greenhouse, Tuskegee, Ala.—Wholesale list of ferns, roses and miscellaneous greenhouse and bedding plants, such as begonias, verbenas, geraniums, cannas, salvias, etc.; sixteen pages, illustrated. Ferns, being the firm's specialty, have a conspicuous place in the catalogue.

Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England.—A 26-page supplementary catalogue of rock and border plants, arranged in the same accurate, compact style as the firm's regular catalogue. The book starts with an interesting list of new and rare plants, "some of which," says the compiler, "are very old species, but remarkably scarce, while others are new to cultivation."

Allen, Sterling & Lothrop, Portland, Me.—Illustrated catalogue of "Sterling Quality" seeds; also bulbs, plants and an unusually large and varied assortment of florists' and farmers' requisites, such as garden tools, ornamental wire fencing, fertilizers, insecticides, sprayers, poultry and dairy supplies, barn equipments, etc.; eighty pages, more than half of which are occupied by the miscellaneous supplies.

Forbes & Keith, New Bedford, Mass.—"Catalogue of Selected Prize Medal Dahlias," a 32-page book, notable for the clearness of the type and illustrations. The stock listed is carefully classified according to the recognized types, cactus, decorative, etc., and includes many varieties originated by the firm. Emphasis is placed on the idea that "it is not the length of the list, but the selection which counts."

David Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J.—"Grown-in-America" dahlias, cannas, gladioli, lilies, irises, phloxes and other bulbs and plants, with a condensed list of flower seeds; an attractive, well-illustrated, 32-page catalogue, twenty-two pages of which are devoted to the firm's specialty, the dahlia. Enclosed with the catalogue are two supplementary sheets on which are colored pictures of two choice dahlias. "On account of the European conflict and the uncertainty of deliveries," says the firm, "we decided not to import any novelties this year, but instead have arranged to make this a grown-in-America year, and are offering nothing in the way of bulbs and plants except those that we tried out in our own fields last summer, or those that are grown exclusively in this country."

Harry A. Bunyard Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.—First annual catalogue from the Uptown Seed Store. It is a plain, but neat and business-like book, containing eighty long, narrow pages, in

87 VARIETIES

WE actually have 107 varieties, 87 of which are Wintzer's own productions. We doubt if any one carries as many varieties. Surely no one else has many of the new Wintzer triumphs. Out of the 87, we have picked 25 kinds, of the colors we think the best. You can't go wrong on any of them. Why don't you buy 100 or more of each kind? 100 of each of the 25 kinds would cost only $164.50.

COLOR ASSORTMENT OFFER

BASED on our last year's business and the way sales have been coming in this year, we find that this assortment of colors and kinds are strong leaders. It may be just the line-up you want. Check it up. Send us your order. We have 107 varieties—87 of which are Wintzer's own production.

Every day will be Sunday, In the sweet by-and-by—we are told in prose and song—so while we are traveling along over the highways and byways of life towards that goal, getting the necessary withal more easily better affords us peace of mind to more assuredly reach that land of promise. We offer you some fine Horseshoe Brand Lilium Magnificum, also known as Oriental Orchids. You should put in some of this magnificent type of lily, and you will realize bonanza returns from the crop. With orchids selling at sixty cents a bloom, Magnificum with their orchid-like flowers certainly would yield high. Magnificum are generally cut for the blooms—being a prolific producer and being a good substitute for more expensive flowers, it could be used very profitably for decorative and other purposes. We have on hand from the 8/9 size up to mammoth bulbs; can book your order for immediate or future delivery. Magnificum flower about five months after planting, so you can order for shipment according to the time that you wish the crop. Order now.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Unusually sunny weather has prevailed during the last ten days or two weeks; nevertheless, the temperature has been down to 32 or 30 degrees each day, with a slight rise at noon. The sunshine has brought on great quantities of all kinds of stock, in both cut flowers and plants, and sales of the various greenhouse products are held daily by the retailers, staple prices being cut in two or slaughtered entirely to dispose of surplus stock.

Roses were greatly improved in color as spring approached. This is especially true of Mrs. Aaron Ward, Taft, Milady and Killarney Brilliant. There is not much demand for either valley or orchids in the period preceding Easter, but violets are used a great deal for corsages. Carnations are excellent. Sweet peas are extra fine and the supply equals the demand. There will be an abundance of everything for the Easter trade and there will be no difficulty in holding stock back if the weather remains cold.

Various Notes.

More flowers and foliage plants are being propagated in the Batavia greenhouses of the New York Central railroad at present than at any previous time since the houses were established there. Altogether, 62,000 young plants are being grown for the beautifying of station yards on the lines between Buffalo and New York. The plants now being grown are phloxes, verbenas, salvias, cannas and coleus. Thomas H. McGuire, the florist in charge, is devoting some time to the cultivation of a new lobelia and some new and handsome coleus.
